BRANDEIS TO TEACH ROADS WITHOUT PAY

Asks Railway Presidents to Call Conference and Learn How to Save $300,000,000 a Year.

SPURNS PROFFERED BIG FEE

Is Now Representing Shippers for Nothing Because He Does Not Care to Be Too Rich.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Louis Brandeis, who is carrying the brunt of the present contest of the shippers before the Inter-State Commerce Commission against the proposed increase of railroad rates, to-day accepted the tender of employment made him last week by Western railroad Presidents. He said he will accept the task of pointing out how they might effect economies that would amount in a round year to more than $300,000,000, but will accept no pay for it, although the railroads offered him the pleasant privilege of naming his own fee. In his work for the shippers he is receiving nothing.

The offer from the Western railway men was telegraphed to Mr. Brandeis Thanksgiving Day, but he had left Washington the night before for his home in Boston, and last night, on his return here, he was unable to find the telegram. It turned up to-day, and he at once sent the following reply to O. L. Dickinson of the Burlington Road, who had signed the message:

> Dear Sir:—Your telegram of the 23d, sent on behalf of the Western Railroad Presidents to me, care of Inter-State Commerce Commission, was not delivered until this morning, owing to my absence in Boston.
>
> You refer to the estimate quoted by me that a million dollars a day could be saved in operating American railroads by the introduction of scientific management and say that if I can point out a practical way by which a substantial portion of this amount can be saved, several Western railroads would be pleased to tender me employment, allowing me to name my own salary. I am convinced that such saving is possible through the introduction of scientific management and shall be glad, as a public service, to arrange for conferences with these Western presidents at an early date, and point out how scientific management will accomplish these results. I suggest that the Eastern presidents be also invited to attend the conferences.
> I must decline to accept any salary or other compensation from the railroads for the same reason that I have declined compensation from the shipping organizations whom I represent, namely, that the burden of increased rates while primarily affecting the Eastern manufacturers and merchants, will ultimately be borne in large part by the consumer through increasing the cost of living, mainly of those least able to bear added burdens. I desire that any aid I can render in preventing such added burdens shall be unpaid service. Kindly suggest date and place for conferences.
> LOUIS D. BRANDEIS.

It will seem strange to many persons that a lawyer of National reputation should give his services free where vast corporate interests are involved, and, measured by promised results, the fee might, as one of the railroad Presidents remarked, well be $250,000. Mr. Brandeis frankly admits that the thing looks queer, but says that it is simply a little fad. Some men, he observes, buy diamonds, some collect paintings and rare works of art, others delight in automobiles or swift areo racers. His hobby is to give himself the luxury of taking up a problem for the people and absolutely refusing to be compensated therefor.

In this way he expects to be able to avoid the misfortune of accumulating too great wealth and leaving to his children the handicap of having too much money. He would prefer that they should earn their way. He had the good fortune just as he was beginning to study law to be compelled by his father's financial reverses to borrow means to go on with his studies, and he has always believed it was a providential experience.

When asked to-night if he thought that the tender of the railroads was made seriously and would result in a conference, Mr. Brandeis unhesitatingly replied that he believed that all concerned meant what they said.

Mr. Brandeis goes further than other attorneys engaged on the hearings before the commission, and says that his analysis of the effect of the proposed increase of rates leads him to believe that the railroads will lose business by it instead of gaining what they want to pay in increased wages. He says one effect will be to fix the profitable limit of shipment of manufactures from the Atlantic seaboard somewhere about Buffalo and Pittsburg, and that Western manufacturers will enjoy a protective tariff equivalent to an impassable range of mountains on the Pennsylvania-Ohio boundary line.

CONFUSION ON RAILROADS.

Shipper Points Out That Classifications Present Many Contradictions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The Inter-State Commerce Commission took up the hearings on proposed rate increases to-day, the most important testimony coming from David O. Ives, Chairman of the Traffic Committee of the trade organizations of the Atlantic seaboard and manager of the transportation department of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Ives was formerly traffic manager of the Wabash, and for seventeen years before that in the accounting, operating, and traffic department of the Burlington and the Atchison. He made a very strong criticism of the present classification and declared that there should be no change of rates until the classifications had been thoroughly revised.

"The official classification," said Mr. Ives, "contains so many discriminating and inconsistent ratings that it would not be possible to raise all, or even a large part, of the class rates without creating great injustice. A thorough revision of the classification offers the most feasible method of carrying out the full intent of the law. Any such method as is now proposed in this horizontal advance is not compatible with the spirit or letter of the law. The law provides that the carrier must prove that any proposed rate to which objection is taken is just and reasonable.

"Not only is the official classification extremely inconsistent in itself, but it is only one of three principal freight classifications in use in this country with overlapping jurisdictions, each of which widely differs from the others. Until these publications have been made uniform in arrangement and numbering of classes so that intelligent comparison is possible, no general change in class rate ought to be allowed under any circumstances, no matter what the need of increased revenue. With the official classification containing eight classes, running from one to six, inclusive, with two intermediate classes based on a percentage below second-class and a percentage below third class; with the Western classification having ten classes, running from one to five and A to E, with no fixed relation whatever between them, and with the Southern classification entirely different from either, it may readily be seen how impossible it is to make any comparisons."

"Even if a 20 per cent. advance in class rates should be made from Chicago to points in Illinois and Wisconsin, and on and west of the Mississippi River, it could not be said in any way to equalize

KAISER'S CRUSADE FRUITFUL.

Appeals for Temperance Have Considerable Effect in German Navy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—Telegraphic inquiries are reaching Berlin from organizations representing the American beer and liquor trade as to what effect the Emperor's lately undertaken temperance crusade is having in Germany.

Statistics published to-day indicate that the crusade is having a substantial effect. In the navy, to which the Kaiser's most recent temperance speech was addressed, the consumption of alcohol among the officers and men decreased respectively in 1906, 1907, 1908, and 1909 by 8, 12, 19, and 30 per cent. The decrease in the army is not believed to have been so marked, but the Kaiser is doing his best to popularize the use of tea and milk instead of beer among the troops.

The Emperor's bosom friend, Prince Max Egon zu Fürstenberg, however, continues to sell beer produced at his brewery in the Black Forest under a label bearing the legend, "The table beverage of the Kaiser."

AGAINST HARRIMAN PARK.

Thirty-eight Up-State Counties Give 52,770 Majority Against Bond Issue.

ALBANY, Nov. 29.—Official returns received by Secretary of State Koenig from thirty-eight up-State counties show that there were 139,491 votes cast at the last election against the proposition to bond the State for $2,500,000 for the improvement of the Palisades Park and 86,721 in favor of it, making the majority against it 52,770. These returns include the Counties of Erie, Monroe, Onondaga, and several counties along or near the Hudson River, taking in Westchester, Columbia, Dutchess, Putnam, Orange, and Delaware.

The figures indicate that the proposed constitutional amendment providing for increasing the elective Judges of the Court of Appeals by two and increasing their salaries was defeated up-State by a larger vote than the bond issue question.

The fate of the bond issue is still in doubt. Manhattan and the Bronx registered a net vote of 77,073 in favor of the proposal, while the returns from thirty-eight up-State counties show a net opposition of 52,771. On the basis of these returns the amendment still leads in the entire State by 24,302. As this lead probably will be cut down when the remainder of the twenty-three counties are heard from, the outcome is problematical, although the other boroughs in Greater New York yet to be heard from will likely give a net vote in its favor.

STEPS BAR HOBBLE SKIRTS.

So High on Jersey Cars Fashionably Gowned Women Have to Walk.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 29.—Persons living in Hudson County are up in arms against the trolley service of the Public Service Corporation, especially since the hobble skirt has come into fashion to keep the women from easily attaining the high steps for which Public Service Corporation cars are notorious. Assemblyman Davidson of Hudson declared to-day that he was preparing a formal complaint to send to the Board of Public Utilities. He says that the steps should be at least six inches lower, declaring that old persons, women, and children can hardly climb aboard the cars.

The board heard complaints to-day about the new transfer system which the Public Service Railway Company has inaugurated in Washington and Grove Streets, Hoboken. Mayor Gonzales was one of the complainants. He said he knew of persons who would walk from transfer points rather than subject themselves to the annoyance of figuring out the transfer system and complying with its requirements. Under the new system crowds from the ferries must pass over two sets of tracks rounding a dangerous curve. This is especially annoying in bad weather.

STEEL TRUST PENSION PLAN.

Payments for Long Service to be Inaugurated To-day.

The United States Steel Corporation has perfected a pension plan for long service, the details of which will be announced to-day. The corporation has already in force disability benefits, as well as a limited system of pensions carried on individually by some of its subsidiaries. Soon after the organization of the corporation in 1901 it was decided as a fixed policy of the company to enlist the interest of employes in the welfare of the corporation.

The plan evolved to carry out this purpose was a system of installment sales of the company's stock to its employes, giving them the privilege of subscribing each year to a pro rata amount of stock at a price below the market and upon terms which showed profits over and above the dividends.

Last Spring when the company announced an increase in wages approximating 10 per cent. a disability remuneration plan was put into effect, and it was generally understood that an old-age pension would follow. Although no details of the pension plan were made public yesterday, it was understood that the relief measure would go into effect on Jan. 1 and would apply to employes between 60 and 70 years of age. At the age of 60 employes who have been in the company's service twenty years will have the privilege of retiring. At the age of 70 retirement after twenty years' service will be compulsory.

BRIBE MONEY IN COURT.

Witness in Mississippi Hearing Shows Notes Paid, He Says, by Accused.

YAZOO CITY, Miss., Nov. 29.—The actual money which State Senator Theodore Bilbo avows was paid him during Mississippi's Senatorial contest last January was introduced as evidence to-day in the trial of L. C. Dulaney, accused as the bribe giver. The package contained seventy-three notes of twenty, ten, and five dollar denominations.

T. R. James of Lucedale, Miss., a witness, refused to answer lest he incriminate himself, as to whether it was not true that he paid a sum of money to Senator Bilbo in exchange for his support of the bill creating the County of George. James was not required to reply, but was held in bond of $1,000 to appear before the Grand Jury of Hinds County next Monday.

Senator Bilbo was held in bonds of a like amount as a material witness.

UNIONISTS GIVE UP TARIFF REFORM CRY

Balfour Announces He Would Be Willing to Submit the Question to a Referendum.

STEP MAY LEAD TO VICTORY

Red-Hot Election Campaign—Churchill Mobbed at Colchester—Liberal Peers Deserting.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The Unionist Party has thrown over tariff reform. This is practically the meaning of Mr. Balfour's declaration in the Albert Hall here to-night that in case of victory in the coming general election the Unionist leader would be ready to submit the principle of what is here called tariff reform to a referendum.

This announcement puts a new aspect on the political situation. There are undoubtedly a large number of both Conservatives and Liberals whose votes will be affected by the abandonment of tariff reform as an issue in this campaign.

It was evident from the outset that the Unionists could no more carry this election than they did the last with that millstone around their necks. Even Bonar Law, one of the protagonists of tariff reform, whose courageous convictions led him to give up a safe seat in order to contest Manchester, has, after weeks of experience in "Cottonopolis," come to the conclusion that Lancashire cannot be won for his party if it be tied to tariff reform, and he to-night gave Manchester a pledge similar to Mr. Balfour's.

The leading Unionist papers, even those most strongly committed to tariff reform, have been for some days past advocating this step, which, in the words of one of them, "unites the Unionists and the free traders against the Government and its single-chamber proposals and gives the best hope of a Unionist triumph."

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The politicians of all parties are straining every nerve to crowd into a few days the work which in most General Elections is spread over weeks or months.

Nearly all the heavy guns were in action to-night. The Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, Leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, before a big meeting in the Albert Hall, London, warmly supported the referendum and described the Government as "puppets dancing to the tune of John Redmond and his American paymasters."

Prime Minister Asquith spoke at Reading, Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George at Cardiff, John Redmond, leader of the Nationalists, at Dublin; the Right Hon. Winston Spencer Churchill, the Home Secretary, at Colchester; the Right Hon. Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, at Bristol; the Right Hon. John Burns, President of the Local Government Board, at Battersea, and the Right Hon. Austen Chamberlain at Ashton.

The issues are narrowing daily. The Conservatives make much of the menace of Home Rule. They proclaim that the plan of the Liberals for the reform of the House of Lords means a single-chamber Government, and put to the front their new policy of the referendum.

The Liberals ridicule the "sudden reforming zeal on the part of the Lords and assert that Lord Lansdowne's referendum scheme is a snare because the parties would be unequally yoked together under it—conservative measures would always sail smoothly through the House of Lords, while the referendum would be invoked only for Liberal bills, which were distasteful to the Peers. Moreover, the Liberals estimate the cost of each appeal to the people as $10,000,000.

An interesting factional cleavage has occurred in Mr. Balfour's party over tariff reform. The Spectator, which is the organ of the Unionist Free Traders, has proposed that the Tariff Reformers pledge themselves to submit the question to a referendum if the party win, it not being a leading issue of the campaign. The most ardent Tariff Reformers, led by The Morning Post, contend that it is the foremost principle of the party. "The Unionist Party breaks into fragments," says The Morning Post, "if a Unionist victory does not mean tariff reform." Mr. Balfour to-night announced his willingness to leave the question to a referendum.

In the meantime the leaders are making every appeal to what in the United States would be called the independent vote, believing that it controls the issue.

The Irish Unionists sent to Mr. Balfour's meeting a message of defiance to the Home Rulers and deputations from the Nonconformist Unionist Association of England, and 600 ministers of non-Episcopal churches in Ireland addressed Mr. Balfour in opposition to Home Rule.

The reading of the message from the Irish Unionists in the Albert Hall caused much enthusiasm. "In all solemnity," said the message, "we now declare that Home Rule will bring Ireland not peace, but the sword. If an Irish Parliament is set up the Unionists of the South, allied with the men of Ulster, will not acknowledge its authority. They will neither obey its decrees nor pay its taxes."

Mr. Balfour pronounced strongly in favor of the referendum as the best method of settling deadlocks between the two houses. The cost of a referendum, he said, would be nearer $1,000,000 than the estimate of the Liberals, $10,000,000.

"Some people seem to think," continued the Opposition leader, "that asking whether I would submit tariff reform to a referendum would put me in a hole. I frankly say that tariff reform would be a great change. This election cannot be described as taking place on tariff reform simply, and I have not the least objection to submitting tariff reform to a referendum. It seems to me that our opponent should respond with the generosity of honorable combatants, and say, 'We agree that Home Rule shall be subject to a referendum.'"

Great cheering followed this statement. Mr. Balfour denied that the Veto Conference had been broken up by the unyielding attitude of the Lords. He asserted that the Government was threatening a revolution, based on the wants of one particular section, who boasted that they had not yielded an inch from the position of Parnell.

He concluded by declaring that the Cabinet was governed by its noisiest members, who were governed by John

COLD WEATHER COMING.

Big Drop in Temperature Promised—Snow Up the State.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Unseasonably cold weather during the next few days over practically all districts east of the Rocky Mountains is predicted by the Weather Bureau on reports of an extensive area of high barometric pressure over Alaska and the extreme Northwest, where temperatures are now the lowest of the season.

During the past twenty-four hours much colder weather has prevailed in the Ohio Valley, the Gulf and South Atlantic States, and there were frosts as far south as North Florida.

MONTICELLO, N. Y., Nov. 29.—More than six inches of snow has fallen to-day throughout Sullivan County. The older residents predict that it will be one of the longest and most severe Winters in many years.

DREXEL ACCUSES AERO CLUB.

Declares Refusal to Give Him Altitude Record Is Spite Work.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—The dictum of the National Council of the Aero Clubs of America that J. Armstrong Drexel did not establish a new altitude record when he sailed in his Blériot monoplane from Point Breeze last Wednesday and landed in Oreland, Penn., is regarded as "an outrageous bit of spitefulness on the part of the Aero Club of America" by the Aero Club of Pennsylvania.

Henry Milton Neely, who acted as official referee of the recent Point Breeze meeting, suggested that Drexel accompany him to the Weather Bureau in the Federal Building and there consult with Forecaster Bliss. They found Prof. H. C. Frankenfield of the Washington Weather Bureau in conference with Mr. Bliss, and after a conference they declared that the action of the Aero Club was a bit of personal grudge work, and that the barograph undoubtedly registered correctly last Wednesday at 9,970 feet and not 9,450 feet as the Aero Club decided. The record is 9,714 feet.

MORGAN'S FEDERAL INCORPORATION ACT

DRAWN BY F. L. STETSON

At Morgan's Instance, It Is Said, and Embodying His and Other Leading Financiers' Views.

A draft of a Federal Incorporation act favored by some of the most powerful financial interests has been drawn up, it was learned yesterday, by Francis Lynde Stetson, at the instance, it is said, of J. P. Morgan, who is understood to have personally interested himself in the effort to obtain the passage of a law by Congress which will open the way for the big industrial combinations of the country to operate within the law, in the event of decisions by the Supreme Court outlawing such companies as the Standard Oil Company and the American Tobacco Company, whose business methods are now under review by the court of last resort. It is understood in the financial district also that another object is to make possible the carrying through of the proposed merger of most of the copper-mining companies in which the Morgan firm has taken a more or less direct interest.

Mr. Stetson has long maintained the closest relations with the Morgan interests as legal adviser in many of the most important undertakings in which the Morgan house has been engaged. The bill drafted by him, it was understood yesterday, was drawn as a proposed substitute for the Federal incorporation bill which, with the approval of the President, was submitted to Congress last February. The Stetson draft, which is believed to represent what Mr. Morgan would like to see enacted in the way of a Federal incorporation law, was said yesterday to have recently been submitted to President Taft and disapproved by him in certain respects, although he is said to have favored the principle of Federal incorporation for industrial companies engaged in inter-State commerce.

Hope to Gain Taft's Approval.

The situation now in respect to this proposal, it was said yesterday, is that the draft, as recently submitted to the President, is being revised in the hope that it can be put in such shape that the President will recommend it to Congress.

There is ground for believing that the framers of this draft were not sanguine of obtaining the President's approval of the bill in the shape in which it was laid before him. They are believed rather to have drawn up a bill presenting their views of what was desirable in the way of a Federal Incorporation act with a view to bringing about the adoption of a compromise law by Congress.

The careful guarding of the actual text of the draft recently drawn by Mr. Stetson makes impossible any detailed discussion of it. The bill as submitted to Congress last Winter was understood to have been modified on suggestions made by representatives of corporate interests who were consulted during the later stages of the preparation of the Administration bill. If these interests are successful in their present endeavor they will have brought about a further modification of the original proposals in respect to Federal incorporation.

The bill as laid before Congress in February contained some provisions which had been previously advocated by corporation lawyers. The clause that the shares of corporations should be issued without par value and merely as representing so many aliquot parts of the assets of the corporation is a device which Mr. Stetson, the framer of this latest draft, had long pointed out as a desirable reform in the methods of issuing stock. Briefly summarized, the bill provided that any five or more citizens of the United States could organize a company under the act to engage in inter-State trade or commerce if they submitted to the supervision provided for under the act.

The holding of stock in another National corporation was forbidden, and the stock of a National corporation could not be held by a State or foreign company. The real and personal property of such companies was to be subject to the taxing power of the States, but its Federal charter was not to be subject to State taxation, nor could the States exercise any visitorial power. The right to revoke a charter or amend the law was reserved to Congress.

Power of the Commissioner.

The Commissioner of Corporations was to have the right to examine any such company at any time and at his discretion, subject to an appeal to the courts to appoint a receiver. Reports were to be made to the Commissioner by all Federal corporations yearly, and whenever a dividend was declared. The bill included mandatory provisions that stock must represent real value, that Directors must exercise proper supervision of the corporation, that minority holders be protected, and that dividends shall be paid only out of profits. One of the most important of the clauses in the Administration bill was that companies organized under it were to be subject to the restraint of trade and monopoly prohibitions of the Sherman Anti-Trust act. In the absence of specific information regarding the points upon which the Stetson draft differs from the bill laid before Congress, the opinion was hazarded in the financial district yesterday that one of the things which the banking interests are most desirous of bringing about is such a modification of the proposed law as will do away with the uncertainty regarding what is legal and what is illegal in corporation practice which attaches to the application of the Sherman anti-trust law.

With the passage of such a law as was outlined in the draft prepared by Mr. Stetson the way would be opened not only to the reincorporation of existing companies, but for the organization of new industrial combinations, such for instance as the proposed copper merger. Many important producers of copper have been anxious for some time to bring about a great merger of copper producing companies, including the Amalgamated Copper Company. The President of that company, John D. Ryan, has been active in the efforts which have been made to bring this about. On Thanksgiving Day he gave a dinner at Sherry's to a group of important copper men and the prospects of the merger were discussed at that time. The situation was said yesterday to be that Mr. Ryan and his associates as well as the Morgan interests with whom the copper men have conferred regarding the proposed merger, feel that any effort to bring about the merger would be futile until the Supreme Court has given a favorable decision in the Standard Oil and American Tobacco cases or until Congress has provided for national incorporation.

Talks had yesterday with copper men and others conveyed the impression that not much hope is entertained of favorable decisions in the pending trust cases and that the copper men feel that some Federal legislation will have to be had before the copper merger plan can be carried through with any assurance that it will not promptly be attacked by the Attorney General as a violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust act. The dinner given by Mr. Ryan on Thanksgiving Day was attended by representatives of all the important copper mining companies of the United States. Among those present besides Mr. Ryan were President Thayer of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, James McLean of Phelps, Dodge & Co., W. H. Broughton, Adolph Lewisohn, William A. Paine, W. B. Thompson, Charles Hayden, John Stanton and representatives of the Guggenheim interests.

FIRE EDICT TO METROPOLITAN

Only Two Rows of Standees to Be Allowed in Opera House.

Fire Commissioner Waldo notified John Brown, the business controller of the Metropolitan Opera House, last night that he would allow only two rows of standees in that theatre. There was no trouble about this ruling last night, but it is probable that there will be in the future.

Mr. Brown contends that as the Metropolitan Opera House has a very different interior arrangement from other theatres there is no reason for making such a ruling in regard to it. Each aisle has a separate entrance leading to a wide corridor. The room which is occupied by standees might be occupied with seats without affecting the aisles.

ANGEL FISH BITES A SAILOR.

Nearly Takes Off His Hand—Boat Races to Port to Save his Life.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Favored by a gale Capt. Nelson of the fishing schooner Reliance was able to land Thams Key, a member of his crew, here to-day before the sailor bled to death from a wound made by the bite of a fish.

While the Reliance was on the Georges Bank yesterday an angel fish, a species of shark, which had been caught in a trawl, bit Key's right hand, almost severing it at the wrist.

Capt. Nelson set all sail for Boston, and when a physician went aboard at T Wharf Key was in a state of collapse, due to loss of blood. The fisherman will recover.

KIDNAPPED BY HIGHWAYMEN.

Cart Contractor Out of Town, Rob and Leave Him Insensible in Gutter.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Two bandits who help up Charles Moe, a contractor, tied him with rope, wrapped him in burlap, threw him into a furniture van, beat him into insensibility, and carried him to Cicero, a town far out of the city to rob him.

When he recovered consciousness to-day he was unable to unfasten his hands, or gain his feet, and lay in the gutter beside a country road six hours before he was found. He had been robbed of a gold watch and $7. He identified as his assailants Arthur Pringle, 20 years old, and Albert Littlefield, 22 years old. Both deny the accusation.

BROWN TO TURN FARMER.

Central's President Says He Looks Forward to Quitting Railroad Life.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—W. C. Brown, President of the New York Central, arrived in Chicago to-day to attend the International Live Stock Show. He was elected to the Directorate of the association and said he was going to quit railroad life at some future date to go "back to the farm."

Mr. Brown has a farm in Iowa and one of the best studs of Percherons in this country. Two of his mares recently imported from France won in the Percheron class at the stock show.

"I am looking forward to the time when I can lay aside the burdens of railroading and retire to my farm," he said. "For years and years I have had it in my mind that I would spend my declining days somewhere in the country, where I could indulge my fondness for horses and perhaps do something toward improving the breeds in America.

DIRECTED SONS IN WILL.

James Tams's Heirs Must Work in Pottery and Keep Process Secret.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 29.—The six sons of the late James Tams, the oldest pottery manufacturer in the United States, must all take positions with the Greenwood Pottery Company, and shall forfeit their income and share in the residue of the estate if they or their sons reveal the secrets of the concern, or engage in competition with them, according to novel provisions of the Tams will filed here for probate to-day.

To William H. Tams, one of the sons, is left $5,000 for special services, and the will requests that he be made President of the company, the other sons to work under him. A trust fund is provided for the widow and daughters. No inventory of the estate was filed, and its value is unknown.

LITTLETON QUITS LAW FIRM.

Fears Partnership Might Hamper His Work in Congress.

Congressman-elect Martin W. Littleton severed his connection yesterday with the law firm of O'Brien, Boardman, Platt, Littleton & Gildersleeve, with which he has been affiliated since he retired as Borough President of Brooklyn. The firm has made corporation practice its specialty, and Mr. Littleton felt that under the circumstances he would best serve the interests of the people who have elected him to Congress in Nassau, Queens and Suffolk Counties by withdrawing as a partner. Mr. Littleton will continue law practice in his own name and without any partners.

"I am persuaded," said Mr. Littleton yesterday, "that full fidelity to my firm and its clients might bring about a conflict with the obligations which I have morally assumed already and which I will legally take upon myself next March. In order to avoid this the firm and I have come to the conclusion that it is best to dissolve our partnership now. I will continue the practice of law at 2 Rector Street in my own name."

H. O. MILLER ARRESTED.

President of Southern Steamship Company Charged with Rebating.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 29.—Harvey O. Miller of Philadelphia, President of the Southern Steamship Company and of L. F. Miller & Sons, grain merchants of Philadelphia, was arrested here this afternoon by United States Marshals on the charge of violating the United States commerce law of Feb. 4, as amended, "in that he did unlawfully obtain transportation in inter-State commerce at less than the established legal rates."

It is stated that the basis for the warrant, which was sworn out before United States Commissioner Hewlett here, was the shipment of grain by L. F. Miller & Sons from Philadelphia to Jacksonville by way of Savannah at a less than published rates for grain between the two points.

The Federal Grand Jury has been probing into the matter of rates, and it was expected that indictments would be returned. The Grand Jury, however, is yet in session and may complete its work to-morrow. Mr. Miller was in Savannah by advice of his attorney, as a subpoena had been issued for his father, now dead, and as the present head of the firm of L. F. Miller & Sons.

He was arrested just as he was going for an automobile ride and taken before the Commissioner, where the Government obtained a continuance of the hearing until Fridaq. Mr. Miller was held in $10,000 bail.

BELMONT TESTIFIES IN GRAFT INQUIRY

A Willing Witness in a Proceeding Which He Admits He Thinks Somewhat Absurd.

NEVER HEARD OF RACING FUND

Or the "Mythical" Dinner at Which It Was Raised—Jockey Club's Books Open—Its Expenses for Lawyers.

August Belmont, Chairman of The Jockey Club and President of the Westchester Racing Association, appeared yesterday before the Legislative Graft Investigating Committee in the old Council Chamber at the City Hall and denied any knowledge of the alleged raising of a five-hundred-thousand-dollar fund at a dinner at Delmonico's in 1908 by the racing interests to defeat the passage of the Hart-Agnew bill, which practically killed racing in New York State.

Mr. Belmont referred to the dinner and the half-million-dollar fund as "mythical." He denied that The Jockey Club or any of the racing associations, so far as he knew, contributed to any bribery fund to defeat the measure which was opposed by the turf interests, but he added that large sums were paid in lawyers' fees during the period when the anti-race-track-gambling legislation was at issue. The legal expenses, borne by the racing interests, he said, were legitimate in every way, and the books of the various organizations were open to inspection.

Mr. Belmont was inclined to consider himself persecuted by the Legislative Investigating Committee for the manner in which he was notified by subpoena to appear before that body. He said that, to his mind, the public hearing had taken on almost the appearance of the ridiculous.

"I am called here to testify about something that it ought to be presumed I would know nothing about, nor do I," he declared.

Expected Disclosures Didn't Come.

During the hour that he was on the witness stand Mr. Belmont told many interesting things about the inside history of the racing organizations of the State. One bit of his evidence concerned a visit paid him by an up-State Senator while the anti-race-track gambling legislation was pending. As Mr. Belmont began to tell this the members of the Legislative Committee leaned forward in their chairs, apparently thinking that an exposure was about to be made. But Mr. Belmont went on to say that while the up-State Senator discussed racing matters with him it was merely to comment on the rumors of bribery of legislators by the racing interests.

Mr. Belmont also came to the defense of Harry Payne Whitney and James R. Keene, both of whom are wanted as witnesses by the committee. He said it was unfortunate that the impression had been created that these two well-known turfmen were desirous of avoiding the inquiry, for judging by his own experience such an impression was false.

Several other men identified with horse racing were before the committee yesterday. Two of these were the secretaries of Mr. Whitney and Mr. Keene. Both explained that their employers were in Europe.

News that Mr. Belmont was to appear before the Legislative Committee spread through City Hall early in the afternoon, and at 3 o'clock, when the afternoon session began, the old Council Chamber was fairly well filled. In the audience was James W. Wadsworth, Speaker of the Assembly, who explained to reporters that he was on hand merely as a spectator, or as he expressed it, "a garden variety of rubberneck." John B. Stanchfield, the lawyer, was also there, but that was, he said, as the legal representative of the racing associations.

Looking Into The Jockey Club.

Mr. Linn Bruce, counsel for the committee, wanted to know of Mr. Belmont just what The Jockey Club was organized to do, and was informed that it was organized to supervise the proper conduct of racing and to prescribe rules. The rules of The Jockey Club, so far as the racing associations are concerned, have all the force of law, said Mr. Belmont.

Then began this categorical questioning by Mr. Bruce:

> Q.—What source of income has The Jockey Club? A.—They see to the collection of forfeits, on which they collect a percentage. Each member pays $100 dues, and the various fines that are imposed. Although the fines are kept as a separate fund for the benefit of disabled jockeys and trainers, they apply all the fines to that purpose.
>
> Q.—Are there any dues levied upon the members? Any fees? A.—Yes, $100 a year.
> Q.—Is there any contribution made from time to time by the associations to The Jockey Club, by the various racing associations, or are there any assessments levied by The Jockey Club on the various racing associations? A.—No.
>
> Q.—Are all the expenses of The Jockey Club met out of these dues and payments that you have mentioned? A.—No; I omitted one very important source of income. The Jockey Club owns and controls the Stud Book, the registration of all thoroughbreds, and that is a source of considerable revenue. It issues a gazette as well, The Racing Gazette, but I think that shows some deficit, but the stud book is a source of profit.
>
> Q.—Now then, these funds are all expenses of The Jockey Club, and are paid, are they? A.—Yes, Sir; they are practically very small.

Mr. Bruce explained to Mr. Belmont that the books of the Coney Island Jockey Club for 1908 showed an assessment of $5,700 made for legal fees.

"By what authority was such an assessment made?" he asked.

"That inquiry could not have been properly expressed," replied Mr. Belmont. "There is no such thing. There is no authority of that kind that can be exercised, but the racing associations have acted through informal conferences if they had any mutual interest in the conduct of their legal affairs. You know that racing, just as in this particular instance, has been under a certain persecution, and the interpretation of the laws that have been passed from time to time—the Percy-Gray law itself—cases have arisen in the courts, and the racing associations and The Jockey Club have paid the counsel fees.

Mr. Belmont Protests.

"For instance, we retained counsel at Albany, and under the law that is registered, and accounts rendered to the Controller just exactly and in those names. Under those circumstances they divide. Sometimes it is certain members of the association, sometimes others. If it is heavy, a smaller assessment might not be asked, but it is purely voluntary; no possible pressure could be brought upon them, and it does not enter into the functions of The Jockey Club. Simply as representing their interest in racing, as they have felt at liberty to contribute their funds. I presume in that way that entry must refer to something of that kind. I don't know; I cannot tell you. That is their assessment, and unless it was by mutual agreement it was informal. Whenever they have discussed these things it was not enforceable, it was voluntary."

"It was one of the functions of The Jockey Club to levy such assessments or to receive such contributions?" suggested Mr. Bruce.

"No, they had no right to do so officially."

"You speak of persecution, as in this instance. To what do you refer?"

"I refer to this: I can say to this hearing, because to my mind it takes on almost the appearance of the ridiculous, I am called here to testify about something that it ought to be presumed I would know nothing about, nor do I. I wanted to ask if I may be permitted, to in this connection; I want to ask the Chairman when my subpoena was issued, when the Chairman signed it, if it is a legitimate thing to ask."

"I don't know," said Chairman Merritt.

"I am always perfectly willing to appear here," continued Mr. Belmont, "and an attempt was made to serve me in a roundabout way on the afternoon of Thanksgiving Day. The process server came to my office and represented himself as wanting to see me on legal business. I was very busy. I didn't know who he was. The chances were that on ordinary days I would not have been at my office at all. I had engaged my fare to go to Buffalo and the West, and some other reason prevented my doing so. But I ran a great risk of not being served, and I felt very much aggrieved because I felt possibly that my name might be used, as you have taken occasion to speak of some of my associates, as trying to evade service.

"Now, that is a reflection, and it comes under the head of what I call a persecution, because it presents me to the community as trying to evade the question, which I don't think any of the gentlemen that I am associated with wish to do. For instance, in Mr. Whitney's case I know that he transferred his stable to Europe. He has got large interests there at the present time. Perhaps you may not think so, but the International Polo Match is a matter of great concern to him, a matter of great concern and responsibility that everybody is interested in. The challenges have all been sent, and I don't think that he could be expected to take a steamer and come out here to testify to you about some mythical dinner that took place, &c., that has been mentioned in the newspapers; and about some mythical sum, because I must say that the very amount of it—a million dollars—makes it ridiculous, and I don't think he ought to be held up by counsel as trying to evade. Only in my case I feel that if I had been away now, as I might have been, it might be said that I was trying to evade service.

"As a matter of fact, I think that they were trying to evade me rather than I to evade them. That is why I used the word 'persecution.' It is a fact.

No Significance in Senator's Call.

"If you will allow me to say, I think I will express myself about it, it comes to my mind—if you want to know, you have been asking about this mythical dinner—I know of a meeting which I can tell you about. I don't care to use the Senator's name, because I think it is not necessary. You will have to take my word for it. He was from up the State, and not of my party. But I happened to be in New York, and was with a friend of mine, and they both called at my office. We had a talk about various matters in ordinary conversation, and he touched upon racing. This was in 1908, in the month of February—I cannot recall the exact day—but I explained the subject to him, and he said that racing was being reputably conducted and he was not in favor of the legislation proposed. But he said this to me, 'These rumors about bribing the Legislature are rife, that they were in the newspapers,' and I said there was talk at Albany about it; and he asked me if I knew anything about it, and I said I did not; but I said I could not answer for everybody who was interested in racing; but I could answer for those associations with which I was connected, The Jockey Club and the Westchester Racing Association. Not only would they not approve of such a thing, but they would not do such a thing under any circumstances as long as I had anything to do with them. It was even unnecessary for me to say that, because my associates wouldn't.

"He told me that they would try to get men to make an opposition to the measures if that sort of thing went on. I said I couldn't stop it. But I called a meeting of the associations. I looked up the dates and I cannot tell what they were, because those meetings, as I say, are informal, and they were either on the first day of February or the 18th or the 27th. But we were discussing this bill, and you will remember that there was an open opposition on the part of racing men to the measure. I went to Albany finally and attended an open meeting of the Committee on Codes, I think it was, in open chamber, and spoke in opposition to the measure and tried to justify the proper conduct of racing, and so forth.

"My impression was that those who wanted to pass the measure were doing so in order to drive good men out of racing. And I called a meeting of the association and told them about it, and this very visit of this Senator was one of the suggestions that no appearance of that sort should be given. That gives the spirit of it, and, of course, I think that to ask racing men and men of standing in this community, to ask them whether they know anything about it, is tantamount to asking this, that they might consent, and I repelled that with a great deal of contempt."

Placed Reliance in Mr. Belmont.

Q.—Is that all you have to say? A.—Anything else that you want me to say?

Q.—I know; is that all you have to volunteer? A.—I don't know; something might suggest itself; it was only as you examined me that those questions suggested themselves.

Q.—Is that all that suggests itself to you at present? A.—At the moment, yes, sir.

Q.—Now, the persecution you refer to was the fact that you had been regularly subpoenaed by the process server of the Committee, was that it? A.—No, sir; when I referred to that it was to show that I ran a great risk of possibly coming under your observation as being one of those who would evade you, and I wrote you, Judge Bruce, calling your attention and you have told me about it—

Q.—Your apprehensions are altogether unfounded, Mr. Belmont. There has never been any suggestion or thought on the part of the Committee that you were not willing to testify, on the slightest suggestion that your presence was needed? A.—I am very glad to have you say that.

Q.—And so far as the examination of men who are presidents or officers of corporations or associations engaged in racing in the State is concerned, the Committee in view of the fact as you have suggested that rumors have gone about the State that these associations did raise funds for the purpose of improperly influencing legislation, we thought it was doing the people of the State a service and perhaps the associations a service, giving the officers of the associations an opportunity publicly to state the facts in relation to the matter; instead of being in the nature of a persecution, if I may venture a personal suggestion, I think it is in the nature of affording an opportunity to you and other members of the association of stating the facts publicly before the people and before the Legislature. There is no intention or thought of its being a persecution whatsoever. A.—That view coming from you places a different phase upon it. I hope that will be the impression.

But as to Keene and Whitney.

Q.—But, so far as Mr. Whitney—you have seen fit to mention his name—is concerned, and so far as Mr. Keene is concerned, each of them, I have reason to believe both, before they left this country knew that their presence was wanted before this committee; they each sailed, if I recall correctly, I may be in error, because we are unable to fix the date of sailing of one of them, but if our supposition is correct, after the fact was publicly known that their presence here was needed—if I knew the date of sailing of Mr. Whitney I could state definitely in regard to that, but in his case it is only a matter of supposition. Now, let us take up the thread of the examination as I was pursuing it, and, by the way, another suggestion comes to me: The Senator, when he talked with you, did he state any Senator up there had stated to him that he had been improperly approached? A.—Oh, no; he did not say anything of that kind.

Q.—Did not? A.—He was just speaking of the general talk and atmosphere that had been created there.

Q.—When these anti-racing bills were pending in the Legislature you spoke of one conference that was called; were any other conferences held by The Jockey Club or any of the racing associations to which you belonged, by any of the gentlemen associated with them, with reference to what steps should be taken for the purpose of presenting to the Legislature the views of the association or of these gentlemen with reference to those measures? A.—I have stated that there were three meetings at my office and one at The Jockey Club rooms; that it followed the meeting of The Jockey Club, and they had reference to the legal steps they had taken and had been advised that we should take on the subject, and that was all openly done.

Q.—Now, there was a meeting of The Jockey Club in which the matter was discussed? A.—No, The Jockey Club—I said there was a meeting at The Jockey Club rooms that followed a meeting of the Stewards. No, they do not discuss those matters other than if they are invited to help in paying counsel bills and fees, which are never very light, you know.

Arranged to Enter Contest.

Q.—Now, take these three conferences that were held, who were present at them, who were present at these conferences, do you recall, Mr. Belmont? A.—No, I could not; there is no record kept of them, but I think, for instance, the Coney Island Jockey Club was represented by Mr. Parsons, as I there is usually Mr. Andrew Miller, who I think represented the Saratoga Association, but when they cannot be present some other member of the board does, and I believe Mr. Engelman himself or, sometimes, Mr. Hyde if he was not there, he was counsel; and, for instance, Mr. Butler would either be present or sometimes Mr. Soley, who was his counsel; if there was anything to be discussed just as in this case there were questions of law bearing upon it, &c.

Q.—Did they decide at these conferences to take steps to present to the Legislature the views of the club and the Racing Association with reference to this bill? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—And what steps did they decide to take? A.—Well, it is too long ago to tell you exactly.

Q.—In general? A.—But it resulted in our going up there and attending this hearing, and we were represented by Judge Coyne, who, well, so badly presented this matter for us and introduced such members of either the racing fraternity or whatever breeders there were—I believe there was one belonged to the department at Washington who was to inform the committee as well as possible with regard to racing.

Mr. Bruce wanted to know more about the funds raised for defraying the expenses, also how the fund was raised.

Mr. Belmont said he could not remember just what Judge Coyne's compensation was, but that it was quite large.

"He was retained for two years, I think, and made his home there," said the witness. He added that Judge Coyne's compensation would doubtless appear in the Coney Island Jockey Club books as well as the other racing associations.

Books Open to the Public.

"But I have not come prepared to state anything of that kind," said Mr. Belmont, "only it is within reasonable limits and it is for the very purposes that I told you, and legitimate and above board and accessible to you in any possible way, and I want to say in this connection, Judge Bruce, that the accounts of the associations have always been public property; under the law they did up to two years ago have to pay 5 per cent. of their gross receipts, and consequently the Controller's representative examined them whenever he wanted at Albany, and they are open books, public books."

Q.—Now, how were these funds assessed, an equal amount upon each racing association? A.—Assessment is a wrong word for it; they agreed to divide equally, and the usual way to do this was the more prosperous ones, the Coney Island and the Empire City and the Westchester and Brooklyn, which represents both Brooklyn and Aqueduct, and let me see, I don't know whether the Metropolitan at the same time did; the Brighton Beach used to, but afterward closed its gates.

Q.—They were borne in equal parts, were they, these expenditures? A.—Usually.

Q.—By all the associations? A.—Usually.

Q.—I am speaking now with reference to funds raised in 1908? A.—I could not tell you that, but probably; that was the custom. They met and decided on the expenses; they learned as well as they could what charges might be made and then agreed to divide them.

Q.—Was any suggestion made at any of these conferences, or were there in fact any contributions made by various individuals toward the bearing of these expenses to which you have referred? A.—No.

Q.—They were all borne by the racing associations? A.—By the racing associations.

Q.—Was anything said there in relation to any part of the expenses which should be borne by the Metropolitan Turf Association? A.—No, nothing; we have nothing to do with them.

Q.—They are entirely independent of the Metropolitan? A.—They have nothing to do with The Jockey Club or associations whatever.

Q.—Do you know whether or not the Metropolitan Turf Association did engage counsel or was represented on the hearings up there in opposition to those bills? A.—I don't know, but you asked me about individuals; at one of these conferences, I don't know which, there was a large purse made for protecting the associations in any meetings. I recollect that it was one of the things that it was expected the attendance would be very small, and so the different horsemen agreed to subscribe to an underwriting fund to protect all the different associations against too heavy losses.

Individual Subscriptions.

Q.—Following the passage of the act, you mean? A.—Yes, and that was held just as they did it this year at Saratoga, but that is all I know about individuals ever doing anything at all, and that was open and well understood, a certain percentage to the association; if it ran behind it was helped out by that fund.

Q.—Now, were all the racing associations represented at some of these conferences? In other words, did they all assent to this proposition or plan of employing counsel and having them go up there and have a hearing in opposition to the bill? A.—The fact that they paid their share, I presume it must be, yes, that they did.

Q.—That is the very fact I was trying to get at—whether or not all the racing associations did join in bearing their proportionate part of this expense? A.—Well, I am quite sure that the principal ones; I say I cannot trust to my memory to be exact about that, but for all intents and purposes that was the fact.

Q.—These contributions were entirely voluntary? A.—Yes, Sir, entirely.

Q.—As you said, The Jockey Club had no power to levy any such assessment? A.—None whatever.

Q.—Who was to be the custodian of this fund, do you recall? A.—It depends; sometimes I did it.

Q.—Take in 1908; I have that in mind? A.—I do not recollect; I do not recollect whether The Jockey Club cleared that or not; I cannot tell you that, or whether it was through one of the associations; it would be just like individuals getting together and saying, one of them, "I will attend to that and you send me your check."

Q.—Checks were to be sent, I presume, by the Treasurers of the different associations? A.—That would be the way, yes.

Q.—And do you recall—what is your recollection now—that those checks were to be sent to the Treasurer of The Jockey Club, and The Jockey Club was to be the custodian of this fund? A.—No, I do not recollect that; I cannot tell you, but it is immaterial; whatever way it was done, it is accessible and perfectly open.

Q.—I just want to get track of it, you know, perhaps that is the shortest route to get the person who was the custodian, that is all, if it were The Jockey Club? A.—I do not remember how that was at all.

Q.—How long have you been an officer, Mr. Belmont, of the Westchester Racing Association? A.—Nine years, I think.

Q.—You were the President in 1908? A.—Oh, yes.

Q.—Do you recall how much they contributed toward this fund? A.—No, I do not.

Q.—Who would know? A.—My treasurer.

Q.—What is his name, please? A.—Coakley.

Q.—Do you recall his first name? A.—J.

Q.—Where does he reside? A.—He is in my office; the books are there.

Q.—Is there anything further that you wish to say, Mr. Belmont? A.—Nothing at all that I can think of, other than I thank you very much for making it clear that there is no intimation of that kind to rest upon us, and even what I have said about Mr. Whitney is the fact, although he might have his engagements certainly, because of the absurdity of it; I mean from our standpoint it is absurd, and I think that a great many people think so, too.

Q.—When did you last see Mr. Harry Payne Whitney, Mr. Belmont? A.—Oh, I don't know; it must be a couple of months ago.

Q.—Did he say anything to you at any time as to whether or not he had learned that his presence was desired by the committee? A.—No.

Funds Sent to Jockey Club.

After explaining that the racing associations filed statements at Albany of any expenses incurred in opposing the race track legislation, Mr. Belmont was excused. He was followed as a witness by ex-State Senator William H. Reynolds, President of the Metropolitan Jockey Club, who produced a statement showing that his club had expended $32,936 during the last three years, most of which went to Mr. Sturgis, Treasurer of the Jockey Club. The contributions to the Jockey Club, he said, were for legal expenses. He denied that any member of the Legislature ever approached him with the suggestion that a fund be raised to take care of the racing interests at Albany.

Ex-Senator Francis H. Gates of Madison County, who had been mentioned by State Senator Travis as one of three members of the Legislature who told him they had been offered bribes to vote against the Hart-Agnew bill, was a witness. He denied making such a statement, and said he had never been approached.

Cornelius Hendricks, Secretary for James R. Keene, told the committee that Mr. Keene was in Europe. He said Mr. Keene sailed on Nov. 2 and intended going to a sanitarium in Berlin for treatment. He was directed to cable Mr. Keene and tell him he was wanted by the committee.

Thomas J. Regan, who is secretary for Mr. Whitney, was also directed to cable his employer. Victor A. Schaumburg, Secretary of the Coney Island Jockey Club, produced the books of his club, as well as bills and vouchers for amounts paid to E. P. Coyne, C. J. Fitzgerald, and others. The payment to Fitzgerald was $2,216 and was entered in the books as "legal expenses." The witness said that Mr. Fitzgerald was not a lawyer. The books showed that on July 28, 1908, there was a payment of $3,000 for "special services" to Frank K. Johnston, an Independence League Assemblyman. His services consisted of "testing the constitutionality of the Hart-Agnew law." There was also a payment of $750 on Nov. 10, 1908, to a Mr. Daigerfield. The witness explained that it was "balanced" to R. C. Cummings for "legal services." He said that the expenses of his club in 1908 were about $26,000.

The inquiry will be resumed this morning.

GRAFT INQUIRY ON MILK NOW.

Trying to Learn Something of Alleged Bribery for Legislation.

Charges of bribery in connection with legislation affecting milk dealers of this city and an investigation of the Milk Dealers' Protective Association were taken up yesterday by the Legislative Graft Committee after it had dealt with racetrack matters. Before the inquiry had progressed very far the committee was informed that most of the wholesale milk dealers here have for a long time been paying assessments to the Protective Association for legislation which they did not get.

James J. Kavanaugh, President of the Mutual Milk and Cream Company, said that his company was represented in the membership of the Protective Association by Henry Arnstein, one of the Directors of the Mutual Company. Isadore Kresel, associate counsel for the committee, wanted to know what the Milk Dealers' Protective Association was formed for, anyhow, and Mr. Kavanaugh told him that its principal business was to locate stray milk cans. He said that his company was assessed each year, usually about $500.

Last year the $500 assessment, said Mr. Kavanaugh, was for a double purpose—partly to collect empty cans and partly to test the constitutionality of what he called the solids law. This law, he explained, required 12 per cent. solids in all milk sold. He denied that some of the assessment was to be used in connection with a bill then before the Legislature. This bill, which was subsequently passed, reduced the percentage of solids in milk to 11.50 per cent.

David C. Wetterham, Secretary of the Protective Association, was another witness. He said that all the association's books prior to October, 1909 had been destroyed. Mr. Kresel suggested that this destruction of the books occurred just before the Attorney General began an inquiry into the milk situation. But the witness said he knew nothing of the investigation when he destroyed the books. They were destroyed, he said, because there was no room for them in his office.

PETITION THE MAYOR.

Some Brooklyn Residents Urge Him to Remove Electric Light Poles.

A committee of residents of Seventeenth Avenue, Brooklyn, has sent a petition to Mayor Gaynor urging him to direct Park Commissioner Kennedy to order the removal at once of the electric light wires running through their trees. The petition is couched in strong language.

The Edison Company of Brooklyn, through collusion with incompetent or dishonest officials in the Department of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity, over the protest of the property owners, succeeded in erecting a line of poles and wires.

An investigation by the engineers in charge of the Bureau of Franchises, at the request of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, reported that the company had no franchise to operate in the Thirtieth Ward of Brooklyn.

The Corporation Counsel has rendered an opinion that the Edison Company's claims were worthless and they were operating in defiance of the law. The experts sent by the Park Department to investigate have reported that the wires are killing the trees. The Board of Estimate passed a resolution recommending that the Borough President remove the poles. The destruction of the trees will cause a loss of probably $40,000 in realty values.

As appeals to the heads of the departments whose duty it is to protect us from invasion of our property rights have been ignored, we are compelled to appeal to you, in the hope that you will take immediate action, as delay will mean a great loss to those affected.

The citizens of this district have been figting this matter for a long time, led by John J. Gordon, a former railroad man. They brought it to the attention of Mayor McClellan but obtained no satisfaction.

Married Teacher's Lawsuit Fails.

Supreme Court Justice Bischoff dismissed yesterday the mandamus proceedings brought by Mrs. Engry F. Norman, who has a teacher's license for a position as assistant principal in Brooklyn, and who wanted the Board of Education compelled to appoint her. No action was taken because of the Board's by-law which forbids the appointment of a married women. The power of appointment is wholly discretionary, Justice Bischoff rules.

"Don't trust the puppets who are performing their parts on the stage," admonished Mr. Balfour. "Don't trust the Irish wire-puller. Don't trust the American paymaster who calls for a tune. Trust alone the sound judgment and enlightened patriotism of the people of this country."

J. H. Seaverns, who was elected Member of Parliament for the Brixton division of Lambeth in 1906, and who was at one time a resident of Boston, has become the Liberal candidate in the same constituency against Davidson Dalziel, Unionist, once a resident of New York.

Lord Joicey, (Sir James Joicey,) who was created a Peer by the Liberals, has announced his defection from that party because of its failure to provide for the defense of the country and for its alliance with the Socialists.

It is stated that several other Liberal Peers are tending in the same direction.

READING, England, Nov. 29.—Prime Minister Asquith's meeting here to-night was disturbed frequently by suffragist sympathizers, the majority of whom were thrown out.

After discussing the various questions at issue, the Premier said:

"We are told that dissolution was forced on the Government by John Redmond. Take it from me, Mr. Redmond had no more to do with the dissolution of Parliament than the man in the moon."

Mr. Asquith taunted the Lords with becoming so alive to the urgent necessity of reconstruction that they had produced the specifications of an entirely new chamber in one week, after an unbroken slumber of many years. He declared that if the Tories came into power, tariff reform, for which they could not say there was a mandate in this election, would be adopted without a referendum.

COLCHESTER, Nov. 29.—Riotous scenes attended the appearance here to-night of Winston Spencer Churchill, the Home Secretary.

Thousands congregated in the streets, jeering and shouting. Many of them gathered around Mr. Churchill's carriage, at which they threw fish, eggs, and other missiles. Many of the windows of the Liberal Headquarters building were smashed.

A large draft of police was sent out to patrol the streets, the authorities fearing counter-demonstrations.

DUBLIN, Nov. 29.—The United Irish League met to-night, John Redmond presiding, and issued a manifesto similar to that of Nov. 23, in which the House of Lords was denounced in the most severe terms.

Mr. Redmond spoke at the Mansion House. He declared that neither Great Britain nor Ireland could get Home Rule until the power of the Peers was destroyed.

HAVEMEYER PLANNED SALE TO THE TRUST

Was to Let It Have for $9,500,000 Shares of National Sugar He Got for Nothing.

BUT DIRECTORS STOOD FIRM

Shares Were of the Common Variety, Said to Be a Gratuity in Return for Merger with the Trust.

Following the Government's charge of violating the Sherman law, filed against the Sugar Trust in the United States Circuit Court on Monday, there came out yesterday in Wall Street further details of the deal by which the trust, as the Government relates in its complaint, had the National Sugar Refining Company incorporated. This company was to be comparatively independent of the American Sugar Refining Company and its allied corporations, but, it is alleged, was in reality controlled completely by the American and Henry O. Havemeyer.

This disclosure in the sugar suit has created a good deal of comment in the financial district, for although it has been known for several years that the American had a stock interest in the National, it has been said from time to time that this interest did not represent control, and that it was purchased by the American without any coöperation on the part of the National Sugar interests.

But quite as much surprise was expressed yesterday when the story came out that of the $10,000,000 common stock of the National, $9,500,000 of which was given to H. O. Havemeyer, as the Government contends, without any consideration, Mr. Havemeyer's holdings came near being sold by him to the American Sugar Refining Company at a price close to par, although the stock's earning capacity was from the first problematical, and it has never paid any dividends. In this case it appears the Directors of the American Sugar Refining Company stood up against the wishes of the man who dominated the affairs of the trust to his death, and the company did not make the transfer, which would have netted Mr. Havemeyer millions.

Analysis of the National Sugar Refining Company deal in the light of what is set forth in the Government's bill and information obtained since the bill was filed seems to indicate that the common stock of the National Company was issued as a gratuity in connection with the merger of the three independents who went in to form the National. They were the New York Sugar Refining Company, the Mollenhauer Sugar Refining Company, and the old National Sugar Refining Company of New York, companies whose capitalization represented actual values of some $8,000,000. They earned approximately 6 per cent. on that figure.

When the present National was formed in 1900 with $20,000,000 of stock, half preferred and half common, the Government's bill relates that James H. Post, representing H. O. Havemeyer and the American Sugar interests, contracted to buy the capital stock of all of the three independents mentioned, not then disclosing his principal. The stock was to be paid for in preferred stock of the new National Sugar Refining Company, and it now develops that the understanding under which the original purchases were made, contemplated the immediate acquisition by the American Sugar Refining Company, by a second purchase of an amount of this particular National Sugar Refining Company preferred stock sufficient to give the American 51 per cent. of the total issue.

It came about that out of the $8,250,000 par value of the preferred stock of the present National Sugar Refining Company, which Mr. Post gave over to the men who had held the stock in the old National, the Mollenhauer and the New York Sugar Refining concerns, the Trust acquired $5,128,000, which gave it a 51 per cent. control of the company whose alleged independence, as the Government charges, was to help the trust's further conquests in the sugar world. The National has paid 6 per cent. dividends on its preferred stock, but has made no distribution on its $10,000,000 common stock, which figured in the personal end of the deal.

What was done with the other $1,750,000 National Sugar preferred stock not issued to the stockholders of the merging companies is not disclosed. The Government's bill does show what was done with the $10,000,000 common stock of the National which was originally delivered to H. O. Havemeyer and James H. Post, and subsequently trusteed to the extent of $7,600,000 with H. O. Havemeyer, $1,000,000 with Lowell M. Palmer, $500,000 with Washington B. Thomas, now President of the trust; $500,000 with James H. Post, and $400,000 with John E. Parsons.

All this stock eventually got into the hands of H. O. Havemeyer except the $500,000 par value held by Mr. Post, in spite of the fact that it represented the inflation of the stock of the National Sugar Refining Company to the extent of more than 100 per cent. of the value and earning capacity of the original constituent concerns. The Havemeyer holdings were those which, according to the information obtained yesterday, H. O. Havemeyer subsequently tried to sell to the American Sugar Company at about par, and would have done so if the Directors of that company had not opposed it. The nominal ownership of all the common stock of the National has remained in the name of James H. Post.

PLAN A STRIKE FOR PEACE.

English Labor Leader Tells of a Vote on Proposal to End All Wars.

Two members of England's Labor Party, William Brace, M. P., and Ben Turner, a representative of the textile workers, were guests of the Women's Trade Union League at a celebration arranged in their honor at the league's headquarters, 43 East Twenty-second Street, last night. The two Englishmen sail this morning, having made a tour of the larger industrial centres of the United States.

Both men addressed the women unionists. Mr. Brace congratulated the English women for all that they had done to upset the calm of the House of Commons while he had been a member of it.

"I know it isn't nice," he said, "to do what the suffragettes have done. But neither were the things nice that we did while fighting for the ballot."

Mr. Brace advanced a plan by which, he said, it would soon be impossible for any European monarch to successfully declare war against another.

"Our unions," he said, "feel a responsibility to work for civilization's uplift as well as our own. We feel we have a power which we can exert, and just now, before all the metal workers of the United Kingdom and the metal workers of the other European countries, we are having a referendum vote on what may become a matter of overwhelming importance.

"We are finding out if labor men the world over are willing to go on a general strike if ordered out for war. I don't know how it will come out, but it is entirely possible, so far as the metal workers are concerned, that the vote may be for such a strike as a blow intended to cripple any war movement the political leaders may seek to plunge our country into. It is our contribution to the cause of universal peace."

Mr. Turner said that the same forces which operated to cause the formation of a separate Labor Party in Europe were working here to bring about the same end.

"Our party," he said, "was a coalition of laborites and Socialists, and that's just what's coming here. Once we had our nucleus, the courts with their injunctions against labor, and the old-line politicians who promised much and gave little did the rest for us. Don't worry about the injunctions that trouble you over here. They are what will make you, and in the end you will find plenty of ways to get around them."

While the reception was in progress two messenger boys arrived, one from the Postal and one from the Western Union force of strikers. They were stood up on tables and invited to tell their grievances against the companies, which they did in a way to bring out much applause.

FIRE CO-INSURANCE.

The Property Owner's Chances Under a Clause in Dispute.

Anderson & Olcott, insurance brokers, said yesterday that the report of the fire insurance inquiry before the legislative investigating committee in Thursday's TIMES contained misleading statements in regard to the so-called 80 per cent. co-insurance or average clause. The purpose of the co-insurance clause was to induce the property owner to insure his property for a reasonable amount, sufficient to produce a fair premium to cover the hazard of a partial loss.

"If," said H. W. Olcott of the firm, "on the theory that his property will not be totally destroyed, the owner is willing to take his chances on that possibility, he should be willing to bear a proportion of the partial loss hazard. This is all the 80 per cent. co-insurance clause requires he shall do, providing he declines to insure his property for a reasonable proportion of its value. The clause has no effect whatever on the insurance in event of a total loss, and your article's statement that if property valued at $100,000 is insured for but $60,000, and is totally destroyed by fire, the owner can collect but $45,000, is misleading and untrue. What Mr. Bament undoubtedly did say to the committee was, that if the property valued at $100,000 and insured for $60,000 was partially damaged by fire, say to the extent of $20,000, the companies would be liable for the proportion of this $20,000 loss that the $60,000 insurance bears to 80 per cent. of the value, viz.: six-eighths of the $20,000 loss, or $15,000. If, on the other hand, the property were totally destroyed, the companies would have to pay the total amount of insurance carried, $60,000, instead of $45,000, as you credit him with saying, while if he carried $80,000 insurance they would have paid the $20,000 partial loss in full.

"Under the terms of the 80 per cent. clause the property owner is required to carry insurance up to the amount of 80 per cent. of the property's full value, and in event of a partial loss only becomes a co-insurer with the company to the proportionate extent that his total insurance carried is short of that amount. As previously stated, in case of a total loss, the co-insurance clause is of no effect and he can collect the entire amount of his insurance if it does not exceed the value of his property at the time of the fire."

MEXICAN GENERAL NEEDS AID

Cannot Attack Rebels Till Reinforcements Reach Chihuahua.

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico, Nov. 28. (Via El Paso, Nov. 29.)—While the insurrectos retreated after their skirmish with Government troops at the gates of this city on Sunday, they attained their object, which was to prevent the Government from regaining control of the Mexico & Northwestern Railroad from this point to Minaca. Since the attack on a train a week ago not a car has run over the line.

The revolutionists are said to have their main force at Santa Isabel, about thiryfive miles west of here, and other forces at San Andreas and Guerrero, thus controlling the line.

Gen. Navarro returned to this city with his force to await reinforcements. It is reported that the insurrectos have been reinforced by bands from Parral and that in all they number about one thousand. They are said to have fortified a number of positions along the railway line. With this condition confronting him, there is nothing for Gen. Nevarro to do until his little force of 400 has been at least doubled.

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 29.—Secret conferences between Lieut. Gov. Laroque of Lower California and Señor Loisano, Mexican Consul in Los Angeles, have been held in San Diego within the last day or two, and this, in connection with the circulation of a Mexican revolutionary journal in San Diego, and the presence of scores of apparently wealthy Mexicans here, is believed to indicate coming trouble in Lower California. So far, however, there has been no disturbance.

The San Diego police have rounded up more than a score of Mexicans. Every one of them was armed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Gustavo A. Madero, brother of the leader of the revolution in Mexico, who is here representing the interests of the insurrectionists, issued a statement to-night in which he declares that only skirmishes have occurred thus far; that large bodies of volunteers are constantly augmenting the revolutionist forces in Chihuahua, Durango, and neighboring States, and that the revolt in Yucatan, Campeche, and Southern Mexico is even more serious than in the North.

REID SPEAKS ON BYRON.

Says His Work Is Literature of Revolt, Mostly Unwise Revolt.

NOTTINGHAM, Nov. 29.—A "Byron Chair of English Literature" was inaugurated to-day at Nottingham University College. It was made the occasion of a notable gathering, presided over by the Duke of Portland.

The American Ambassador, Whitelaw Reid, delivered the principal address. He spoke in part as follows:

"I must begin with the reluctant admission that no good instructor of youth will put before them the character of Lord Byron to be emulated or the general tendency of much of his poetry to be admired. On the other hand, no competent instructor of youth can put before them any estimate of the English literature of the nineteenth century in which Byron does not bulk a large figure, if not the largest.

"When you consider the nature of England, and indeed when you consider the nature of the nineteenth century, the reason why Lord Byron's work and fame seem now less vital than they were becomes plain enough. He was perpetually in revolt. His work is the literature of revolt, and for the most part of unwise and unsuccessful revolt. It was revolt against society; revolt against those features of morality on which society sets up the most exacting standards; revolt against his order; revolt against theology if not religion, and, finally, revolt against many established opinions, most established institutions, and against some established Governments. Yet his revolutions were all failures. They were either too late or too early—one or two were magnificent, but they were not war.

"He builded better than he knew when he set the galvent power of his verses to weakening old conventions and so much of the old political and social order. If we cannot credit him with seeking or foreseeing the real results, we must credit him at any rate with a brilliant share in making them possible."

FINLEY LECTURES IN PARIS.

Large Audience Hears New Yorker on French Pioneers in America.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—President Finley of the College of the City of New York, Hyde lecturer at the Sorbonne, delivered the first of his series to-night on "French Pioneers in America." The exceptional interest in the subject drew a large audience, the great Richelieu Hall in the Sorbonne being filled to its capacity.

The lecturer, who was introduced by Prof. Croiset, Dean of the Faculty, was heartily received.

The lecture dealt with the discovery of the region from Labrador to the lakes and the exploits of Jacques Cartier. To illustrate the tremendous obstacles by which the pioneers were confronted President Finley pointed out that it took them more than a century to reach the Mississippi Valley from Labrador, a distance recently covered by American aeronauts in a few hours. The lecturer then reviewed the life work of Champlain and outlined the founding of Canada and the establishment of Quebec and Montreal.

Big Fortune for Count Hatzfeldt.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—Count Hermann von Hatzfeldt-Wildenburg, in consequence of the death of his cousin, Prince Franz von Hatzfeld-Wildenburg, inherits the Prince's title and immense properties. The Count's mother was Helene Isabelle Susanne Moulton, an American born in Paris. He is now German Minister at Cairo and was formerly First Secretary of the embassy at Washington.

Say J. C. Richards Killed Himself.

HAVANA, Nov. 29.—According to the police James C. Richards, the New York insurance adjustor, who was found dead in the bathtub in his apartment at the Sevilla Hotel last night, committed suicide. A wound in the throat was found. Richards had been engaged here in settling losses resulting from the recent cyclone.

CHINESE LOAN LIKELY TO FAIL AFTER ALL

Stipulation of Appointment of a Foreign Financial Adviser Very Unpopular.

TROUBLE FROM EUROPE, TOO

Even if Loan Goes Through, It Is Not Probable It Will Take the Form of an American Enterprise.

PEKING, Nov. 29.—Serious doubt as to whether the projected loan of $50,000,000 to China by an American financial syndicate will be finally concluded is expressed in Peking.

Numerous difficulties have arisen, among then being the unwillingness of Chinese to accept a foreign financial advisor. Without such control, it is said, the promoters are unwilling to proceed.

The present is recognized as a crucial period in the history of China. If borrowed millions are squandered any calamity will be possible, even a revolution and the partition of the empire.

The Chinese have never been more sensitive to foreign usurpation of authority than they are now, and they look upon the proposal to give the foreign financial group control of the currency reform to which the loan was to be devoted as a further encroachment upon the country's integrity, of which the new Senate and the parliamentary party throughout the country are especially jealous.

The opposition of the Chinese people, however, is not the only barrier to the consummation of the agreement. The European banking groups which have been invited to participate with the Americans will not, it is expected, agree to an American advisor to the Chinese Government.

Furthermore, while the preliminary agreement stipulated that the Americans were to retain control of the bond issue, the British, French, and Germans are likely to demand equal participation, requiring that they also become signatories to the final compact.

If eventually successful the loan is not likely to take the form of an American enterprise, much to the disappointment of the American community in China.

A leading representative of the American banking syndicate concerned denied yesterday that any hitch had occurred in regard to the Chinese loan. He said the appointment of a foreign financial adviser had been clearly stipulated in the preliminary negotiations.

Willard D. Straight, representative in China of the American bankers, was in Peking yesterday, and cablegrams from him to his principals here gave no intimation of any dissatisfaction on the part of the Chinese Government.

An imperial edict issued on Oct. 29 authorized a loan of $50,000,000 from a group of American financiers, who were to take a bond issue to cover the loan at 95. The bonds were to matur from forty to forty-five years after issuance and to bear 5 per cent. interest.

The loaning syndicate was made up of J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the National City Bank, and the First National Bank, all of New York City.

On Nov. 10 an agreement was signed in London by which English, German, and French banks were made participants in the loan. The banking houses concerned were the Morgan houses, the Hong Kong & Shanghai Banking Company, the Bank of Indo-China, and the Deutsche East Asiatic Bank. The agreement also provided for the co-operation of the signatories in the matter of future loans to the Chinese Government and mutual participation therein.

WIFE'S RIGHT TO RECOVER.

Court Says "She Is Entitled to Repayment for Advances."

Supreme Court Justice Whitney decided yesterday that a wife, abandoned by her husband without cause, has a right to recover from him the amount she may have had to expend for the support of herself and her children. The decision becomes an addition to the already settled principle that a stranger, a friend, or a tradesman may recover from the husband for necessities of life furnished to a wife who is abandoned or not properly supported.

Alice de Brauwere asked for $3,840 from her husband, Louis de Brauwere, asserting that she had spent that much for herself and her children during the six years since she says he left her, and that the expenditures were made from her own inheritance and from money which she earned. The husband set up the fact that it was her own money as ground for a demurrer, which Justice Whitney overruled, after describing it as an unprecedented case. He granted the husband permission to file an answer to the suit. The Justice said:

"Must a wife who is abandoned among strangers be ruined or starve or work herself to the bone, without hope of repayment from the husband whose legal and moral duty it is to support her, when one abandoned among friends can live upon the proceeds of loans which the husband is bound to repay? If she has a little money laid up of her own, why should she not preserve her dignity by expending it until it is exhausted, without forfeiting the right to relief which any good Samaritan would have had if she had begged. When it is used up, why can she not earn more and apply it under the same protection which the law would give to money applied to the same purpose by a charitable neighbor?

"The rule has nowhere, so far as I am aware, been applied to the case of advances by the wife herself, but a wife is entitled to the same remedies as any other creditor. I see no reason why she should not have the same right of equitable assignment or subrogation, or whatever other equity may be the basis of relief in these cases, as any friend of hers who may have put up the necessary money."

OUR DISPUTE WITH AUSTRIA:

Quarrel Over a Branch of the Oil Trust Reaches Acute Stage.

VIENNA, Nov. 29.—The controversy between the Austrian authorities and the Vacuum Oil Company, a branch of the Standard Oil Company, has reached a new and acute stage.

The Austrian Foreign Office has refused to continue negotiations with the American Embassy, which has been protesting against the alleged discrimination on the part of the Government against this company. The Foreign Office maintains its position that the Vacuum Company is registered as a Hungarian company, and must therefore be subject to the same regulations as other companies with similar registration, and that the question at issue is purely a matter for Austrian internal administration, and absolutely outside of diplomacy.

American Ambassador Kerens declines to accept the Foreign Office's view, but at the present moment the conflict is at a deadlock.

The Ministry of France is now officially inquiring into the Galician oil situation, hoping to find a solution of the difficulty.

DUEZ HELD FOR TRIAL.

Others Implicated in Frauds on French Government Also Held.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Ferdinand Edmond Duez, formerly liquidator for the property of the congregations dissolved by the Associations law, who confessed last March to the embezzlement of $2,000,000, has been held for trial before the Assize Court on the charge of breach of trust and forgery.

His confidential secretary, Martin Gautier, and Agents Lefebvre and Breton, who were implicated in the embezzlements, which caused a sensation throughout France, have also been held on similar charges.

Notes of Foreign Affairs.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Word of an attempt upon the life of President Venezelos of the Greek Cabinet was received at the Greek Legation here to-day by Alexander Vouros, Charge d'Affaires. DAWSON TO LEAVE PANAMA?

Rumor That Minister, Who Has Leave of Absence, Will Quit Post.

PANAMA, Nov. 29.—Thomas C. Dawson, the American Minister to Panama, has obtained leave of absence and will sail from the Isthmus on Thursday.

A rumor is current here that Mr. Dawson will not return to his post, but this the Minister denied to-day.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Practical denial was made to-night of the rumor that Minister Dawson will not go back to his post.

Mr. Dawson is in ill-health and has not had a vacation for a long time.

FINED FOR SELLING BAD EGGS

Buffalo Firm Gets the Law's Limit—Five Tons Seized There in Two Days.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 29.—John Lord O'Bryan, United States Attorney, declared to-day that the sale of rotten eggs for food had become a scandal, and that a conviction in the United States court this of the pure food law.

Five tons of bad eggs have been seized paign to break up the traffic.

The Henry Sloan Company of Buffalo was convicted of shipping 170 cans of decayed eggs to Sam Rottenberg in New York. Judge Holt levied a fine of $200, which is the limit for a single violation here within the last forty-eight hours.

STARTS FOR THE SOUTH POLE

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand, Nov. 29.—The ship Terra Nova, bearing the British south polar expedition, under the command of Capt. Robert F. Scott, sailed from Port Chalmers for the antarctic to-day.

The Terra Nova sailed from London June 1 and gradually worked her way south. Capt. Scott, who joined the vessel in New Zealand, hopes to reach the south pole in December, 1911.

BRANDEIS TO TEACH ROADS WITHOUT PAY

a 20 per cent. advance from the seaboard territory to Illinois under the chaotic conditions."

Mr. Ives declared that the rebates had been abolished effectually, but agreed that, when the practice existed they reached 35 or 40 per cent. He maintained that the railroad men were sincerely trying to do away absolutely with preferences.

"The preferences that exist to-day are in the tariffs themselves?" asked Chairman Knapp.

"Absolutely," replied the witness.

"And the instances of secret departures from the published tariffs are infrequent?"

"More than that; they are accidental," replied Mr. Ives.

He called attention to lake and rail advances aggregating from 10 to 25 per cent. in the last decade in addition to the changes in classification.

Mr. Ives happened to remark that long-distance rates on some of the roads were out of line with local rates, and this drew out questions from members of the commission as to why the Pennsylvania did not last Spring increase local rates, and why the New York Central did raise local rates. Mr. Ives said that he had been informed on very positive authority that it was the position taken by President George F. Baer of the Reading that the local rates of that road were already high enough which influenced the Pennsylvania sympathetically not to increase those rates.

John W. Tittemore, formerly traffic manager of the Iowa Central and the Pere Marquette, presented an analysis of the proposed classification increases. He showed an aggregate of 667 increases, but Mr. Butterfield, counsel for the New York Central, on cross-examination, pointed out many duplications and some errors as to increases, claiming that in all there were 188 such errors in the compilation.

Charles C. McCain of New York City, Chairman of the Trunk Line Association, was examined before the Inter-State Commerce Commission to-day regarding the publication by the association of a pamphlet entitled "The Diminished Purchasing Power of Railroad Earnings." He said he had distributed 23,500 copies of this book at a cost of $8,003. The purpose was to assert a need for readjustment and increase of rates. It declared that there had been "since 1897 a great reduction in railway freight rates, which has gone so far as to endanger the maintenance of the present level of railway wages and to threaten the stability of the whole railway industry and all allied industries."

NO THREATS BY THE ROADS.

So Says President Brown—Gives Examples of Rate Increases.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—"Railroads of this country are asking only fair treatment in the matter of the proposed increase in class rates, and they are doing so in an orderly and in a businesslike way. They are making no threats. They are making no demands. They have presented evidence which to them seems to support their contentions, and that will be followed by arguments showing the justice of their position."

That was the reply made to-day by William C. Brown, President of the New York Central Lines, when asked about published reports to the effect that the railroads and allied financial interests were seeking to intimidate the country by talk of panics and hard times in an effort to force an approval of the new schedules.

Mr. Brown gave a few examples of the effect of the published proposed rates.

"Let us take men's split brogans," said the railroad president. "The wholesale price of these shoes is $1.25 a pair and the retail price is $1.75 a pair. The present freight rate for 1,000 miles from New York to Chicago, or to any point taking the Chicago rate is 2 2-5 cents a pair. The proposed increase in rates is 5 mills a pair, making the new rate 2 9-10 cents a pair.

"Take a fair quality of men's stiff hats. The wholesale price is 88½ cents each and the retail price is $2. The present rate is 1 1-12 cents, the proposed increase is 18 5-100 mills, making the new rate 1 4-15 cents.

"The wholesale price of calico dress goods is 5 cents a yard and the retail price 7 cents. The present rate is 8-10 of a mill, the increase 2-10 of a mill, making the new rate 1 mill. It requires about ten yards of calico for a dress."

DR. WILSON SPEAKS TO MANY GOVERNORS

Says States by Co-operation Can Regulate Big Business Better Than Federal Government.

ADVICE TO BUSINESS MEN

Should Regard Themselves as Servants of the Public—Twenty-four Governors Meet at Frankfort.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 29.—Dr. Woodrow Wilson, Governor-elect of New Jersey, made the keynote address at the opening session this evening of the Third Annual Conference of Governors, which began a five days' meeting. Dr. Wilson strongly approved the idea of such conferences, saying that they would afford a means of grappling with Nation-wide problems by the States. First of these he placed the regulation of business and declared his confidence that plans would be evolved whereby the people's interests could be safeguarded without resort to the Federal power.

This was the first conference of Governors to be held outside of Washington. Twenty-four of the Executives of the States were present to-day, among them Messrs. Weeks, Connecticut; Mann, Virginia; Pothier, Rhode Island; Kitchin, North Carolina; Fort, New Jersey; Noel, Mississippi; Harmon, Ohio; Brown, Georgia; Draper, Massachusetts; Ansel, South Carolina, and Willson, Kentucky.

The Governors-elect present were Wilson, New Jersey; O'Neal, Alabama; Cruce, Oklahoma, and Plaisted, Maine.

For several days Gov. Willson of Kentucky had made it plain that he would do all in his power to eliminate politics from the conference. At the first session to-day in the Hall of Representatives of the new State Capitol building Gov. Harmon of Ohio was greeted by handclapping, which was accorded no other Governor. The moment the meeting adjourned a man in the gallery called for cheers for Mr. Harmon. With a frown Gov. Willson raised his hand and said such a demonstration was entirely out of place and would not be tolerated.

Gov. Willson in his opening remarks stated that the Governors were called together for a conference only and that it was not a "House of Governors," as previous meetings had been termed.

President Taft sent a letter regretting his absence, in which he said:

> I have great sympathy with the objects of your meeting, which I understand to be for the general National welfare by uniformity of State legislation upon subjects having general National interest which are not, by the Constitution, intrusted to Congress and the central Government. I wish for your meeting the most successful issue in substantial results.

Gov. A. J. Pothier of Rhode Island responded to the welcoming addresses of Gov. Willson and Mayor Polsgrove of Frankfort, after which the visiting party and several prominent Kentuckians were entertained at luncheon.

Dr. Wilson Talks of Problems.

At the later session Dr. Wilson delivered his address on "The Possibilities of the Governors' Conference." He said in part:

"The last sixty years have seen the great continent knit together by systems of railway and telegraph and telephone. More and more completely has the network spread over every region and quarter of the great area. With the perfecting of the means of intercommunication, with the swifter and swifter movement of trains, the more and more rapid growth of traffic, business has spread itself with a new organization and volume. As it has spread it has been interwoven in actual organization as well as in the rapid interchange of goods.

"The organization of business has become more centralized, vastly more centralized than the political organization of the country itself. Corporations have come to cover greater areas than States, have come to live under a greater variety of laws than the citizen himself, have excelled States in their budgets and loomed bigger than whole Commonwealths in their influence over the lives and fortunes of entire communities of men. Centralized business has built up vast structures of organization and equipment which overtop all States and seem to have no match or competitor except the Federal Government itself, which was not intended for such competitions. Amid a confused variety of States and statutes stands now the colossus of business, uniform, concentrated, poised upon a single plan, governed, not by votes, but by commands, seeking, not service, but profits.

"No wonder we began to turn to the National Government, to cope with, to regulate, in the name of the sovereign Nation itself, what had become a force as great as the Nation in its scope and consequence. No machinery seemed to stretch to the size of the task of regulation except the machinery of National legislation at Washington, the long arm of the executive that could be stretched forth from a National capital to every remotest nook and corner of the land. No wonder the instinct and inclination were to resort to Washington for relief and protection. The need was great and the Government was powerful.

Regulation by the States.

"But this intimate task of regulation was not one for which its Constitution had furnished it with actually suitable or entirely adequate powers and authority. Only the States were fully equipped with the legislative and executive power to handle at will and as they pleased this new organization of business and manufacture. A new problem was presented to us. We still did not desire rigid uniformity of law, even in these matters of common concern. It was still desirable that the States should adapt their regulation and restraint of the new forces to their own conditions of life and circumstance. To put Federal law back of the great corporations would have been to give them the right to dominate and override local conditions, to equip them with the majesty and supremacy of the law which created and regulated them, and to level the variety of communities before them.

"We have no foolish or pedantic jealousy of Federal power. We believe in the exercise of the Federal powers to the utmost extent wherever it is necessary that they should be brought into action for the common benefit. But we do not believe the invention of Federal powers either necessary or desirable.

"It is our privilege and duty to study the problems common to all the States, and to suggest the means by which the States, without loss of their natural variety or of their opportunities of local adaptation, may yet freely throw their energies into a common task of protection and development, as if in the spirit of a single Commonwealth, their measures varied but their purpose the same. Our effort to render this service may result in the setting up of one of those voluntary institutions of counsel by which the life of free countries is enriched, both in action and in opinion.

Governor's Right to Lead.

"Every Governor of a State is by the terms of the Constitution a part of the Legislature. No bill can become law without his assent and signature. It can be passed over his veto, but only by deliberate process and generally only by more than the vote of a majority. His legislative vote, so to say, is never less than that of half of the Legislature. He has the right of initiative in legislation, too, though he has so far, singularly enough, made little use of it. It is the popular notion that the Governor has, in respect of legislation, only the message power; but the language of most of our Constitutions is the same, is the language of the Federal Constitution also. It gives him the right to recommend 'measures;' and it does not limit him in respect of the form in which he shall make the recommendation. He can make it in the form of bills if he pleases.

"I am sure that I am not mistaken when I say that the people are calling for open leadership, and that they wish their leaders to be men who represent them all. They are tired of the hide-and-seek of legislation as it has generally been conducted. We shall not bring clear action out of confusion until we supply the need, until we assist at the simplification which will inevitably come when some one man undertakes in each State to keep the people informed as to every chief step of their business, particularly of the business of legislation, and to challenge all who are engaged in it to submit to the frank and clarifying processes of debate.

"There is no executive usurpation in a Governor's undertaking to do that. He usurps nothing which does not belong to him of right, uses no power which would not belong to him whether he were Governor or not. He employs nothing but his own personal force and the prevailing power of his opinions. He who cries usurpation against him is afraid of debate, wishes to keep legislation safe against scrutiny, behind closed doors and within the covert of partisan consultations. We are consulting here because the leadership of half a hundred Commonwealths calls for consultation among the leaders wherever many weighty matters must in the common interest be managed to a common end.

Business and the Public.

"I have already stated our problem in general terms. It is how to make our States efficient instruments wisely used in the regulation of economic conditions which have been organized upon a scale, and must continue to exhibit themselves upon a scale, that is Nation wide, no State being more than a part, and generally a small part, of the territory which they cover. It is the problem of railway regulation and of the regulation of the many other vast corporations whose business spreads like a network over every part of the country.

"We speak of public service corporations and of those which are not public service corporations, and there is of course a difference, a clearly marked difference, between them; but when we speak of modern business is it speaking of reality in any case to speak of a modern corporation as a private corporation, of its business as private business? It acts only upon license. Its transactions are interlaced with the whole of modern life and set up the conditions under which that life goes forward. This is in no sense a private matter.

"Our corporations are not dealing with individuals so much as with communities. If those who conduct them would look at their business from that point of view and conduct themselves in the temper and spirit of public servants, there would be no need of regulation. So long as they do not, so long as they transact their business in the spirit of those who manage private affairs, for private gain and not for public service, regulation will be necessary. Individual affairs and public interests must be accommodated, and the public interests, not the private advantage, must be the standard of regulation and accommodation."

Gov. and Mrs. Willson gave a reception at the Governor's mansion to-night. To-morrow a special train will carry the Governors to Louisville, where sessions will be held until Saturday.

MURPHY SILENT ON SENATOR.

Tammany Leader Won't Admit He Has Dropped Shepard for Sheehan.

Quite unexpectedly Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy appeared at Tammany Hall yesterday. He was not expected there until to-day. He remained behind his desk for more than two hours, and in that time talked with fifteen of the thirty-five Democratic Assembly district leaders in Manhattan and the Bronx. Mr. Murphy announced at the close of his day's work that he had turned his back on his home at Good Ground for the Winter and expected to be at the Wigwam every weekday from now on.

Mr. Murphy was not very communicative.

"Is it true that you have dropped Edward M. Shepard as a candidate for the seat in the United States Senate which will be vacated by Chauncey M. Depew next March?" he was asked.

"I have nothing to say about that," Mr. Murphy replied. "The Legislature will select the next United States Senator from this State."

"Is it true that your candidate for the place is former Lieut. Gov. William F. Sheehan?"

"The same answer applies there."

"Who will be President pro tem. of the Senate? Will it be Senator Thomas F. Grady?"

"I have nothing to do with that, either. The man is selected by the Democratic Senate caucus."

"Have you any appointment with Gov.-elect Dix?"

"I have no appointment, but I suspect I shall see him some time before inauguration," said the Tammany leader.

This said, Mr. Murphy's supply of answers seemed to have been exhausted.

It is generally understood in Tammany circles that if Mr. Murphy, whose control of the Democratic State organization is beyond question, has anything to say about it Edward M. Shepard will not be selected for the seat now occupied by Mr. Depew, although Mr. Shepard is a candidate for the place. Those who have talked with Mr. Murphy lately believe that he will favor Mr. Sheehan, or at any rate some man nearer to Tammany than Mr. Shepard, who has been an independent in politics most of the time.

In the last few days circulars have been sent to Democrats advocating the selection of Robert W. De Forest for the Senatorship. Mr. De Forest is a prominent lawyer. He is an independent Democrat—a man more or less of the Shepard type. He is the father of the present tenement house law, and has been prominent in civic movements and in charitable endeavor. He is one of the incorporators of the Sage Foundation, the philanthropy established by the widow of Russell Sage after she became the custodian of the large fortune left by her husband.

LODGE TO GO TO CAPITAL.

Managers So Confident That They Close His Headquarters.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—The managers of the Senatorial campaign of Henry Cabot Lodge, who is seeking a fourth term in the upper branch of Congress, expressed themselves to-day as so well pleased with the situation that Senator Lodge discontinued his headquarters at the Hotel Touraine and prepared to leave for Washington next week.

A letter for William H. Moody, former Associate Justice of tht United States Supreme Court, commending the public services of Senator Lodge, was made public by the Senator's campaign managers to-day. It was written by Mr. Moody as a constituent to Henry G. Wells of Haverhill, who represents Mr. Moody's district in the Legislature, and characterizes Senator Lodge as one of the best equipped men in public life, and the most competent legislator in the country.

BROKER TRIES TO DIE X-SCIENCE IS BLAMED

F. E. Alexander of Philadelphia Attempts Suicide in a Baltimore Hotel.

FLED FROM HIS FIANCEE

His Mentor in the Eddy Cult Professed to Raise the Dead and Restore Sight to Blind, It Is Said.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 29.—Frank Ellwood Alexander, 27 years old, a Philadelphia broker, is dying to-night at the Mercy Hospital, after cutting his throat in Junker's Hotel. No reason is given for his act, but his friends believe his mind may have been upset by Christian Science. He is said to have been a follower of Mrs. Eddy for several years, and recently was a pupil of a Dr. Curtis in Philadelphia, who, it is said, professed to be able to raise the dead, and restore sight to the blind.

Miss Mary E. Kelly, Alexander's fiancée, and sister-in-law of James A. Kane, with whom Alexander lived at 5230 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia, has arrived here, and is assisting the hospital nurses in attending the young man. Kane had warning of Alexander's attempt and came here to prevent it. By a coincidence he went also to Junker's Hotel, but he did not learn of Alexander's presence until after his act.

Alexander was found unconscious in bed by a bellboy. By his side was a blood-stained razor. Dr. C. T. Strauss, who was passing the hotel, was called in. He worked over the unconscious man for some time and then sent him to the hospital. There a silver tube was inserted in his throat, and through it the man is now breathing. This was done to prevent his choking to death, but the physicians have no hope that he will recover.

On Sunday Kane noticed that Alexander was acting strangely. In the evening he went out without telling his intentions, and the next morning Miss Kelly received a letter saying he was going to Baltimore to commit suicide, and that she would read of his death in the Baltimore papers, which, he said, would be full of it.

Fearing he might carry out his threat, Kane started at once to this city to find him and prevent his act. Kane arrived at Police Headquarters at midnight, but no suicide had been reported. He then went to Junker's Hotel to sleep, while Alexander, in the same hotel, was preparing to kill himself. Mr. Kane renewed his search this morning. He visited the Morgue and hospitals, and just had returned to Headquarters when the report of the attempted suicide at the hotel was received. He hurried back to the hospital and found his friend unconscious.

Alexander had registered in the hotel under the name of Frank Ellwood of Pittsburg. Before cutting his throat he had removed all names and initials from his clothing.

Kane said he knew of no reason for Alexander's attempt on his life, unless his mind had been upset by Christian Science. For some time, Kane said, Alexander had been a devotee of the cult. He had been studying with a Dr. Curtis, who Kane said professed to be able to bring the dead to life and make the blind see. Continuing, Kane said:

"When I got home yesterday evening I was shown the letter that Frank had written in which he said he was going to kill himself. He also told about placing his jewelry on a certain spot. When we found it there in his room I decided that I had better come to Baltimore. But I was too late.

"I have known Mr. Alexander for about nine years. For the last seven years he has been courting my wife's sister, Mary E. Kelly. He has several brothers in Philadelphia and a sister, Mrs. Ronald McDonald, whose husband is Assistant General Manager of the Atlantic Fruit Company in Jamaica."

LOEB SEES MACVEAGH.

Confers Over Granting Immunity to Importers for Giving Evidence.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Collector Loeb had two conferences to-day with Secretary MacVeagh, at which Attorney General Wickersham, Assistant Secretary Curtis, and a number of Special Agents of the New York Custom House were present. Great secrecy surrounded the Treasury Department in regard to the nature of the business under consideration. The conferences lasted over five hours.

It is understood that they were held for the purpose of laying before the Secretary the evidence in important cases of undervaluations and frauds in the Customs Service at New York. The principal question put before the Secretary was the proposal to grant immunity in consideration of testimony that would enable the Government to maintain prosecutions.

No decision was reached as to the action of the Government with reference to the customs frauds in woolens and linings. The frauds are said to reach into hundreds of thousands of dollars, which have been lost to the Government through undervaluations. The conference will be resumed to-morrow.

Those who are accused of having defrauded the Government are said to have offered to compromise, provided there is no prosecution.

It is understood the Government is opposed to accepting compromises where sufficient evidence to convict has been obtained by the unaided efforts of its own investigators. In cases where the culprits have confessed voluntarily to undervaluations and have offered to make restitution, it is said leniency may be shown.

Among others present at the conferences were J. W. Wheatley and J. C. Cummings, Special Agents of the Customs Service; J. H. Krackey, Naval Officer of the Port of New York, and Solicitor Andrews of the office of the Collector of the Port of New York.

The prominence of the officials concerned in to-day's conferences leads to the belief that the above questions, and the immunity pleas of certain importers have been put up to the highest authorities for decision.

MRS. SWEENEY IN SANITARIUM

Denies Setting Fire to Converse's Barn—Believed to Be Insane.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Nov. 29.—Araminta Sweeney, who was suspected of incendiarism when the $10,000 barn on Conyer's Manor, the estate of E. C. Converse, the steel magnate, in Greenwich, was destroyed by fire last Wednesday night, has been committed temporarily to a sanitarium by Judge Charles D. Lockwood in this place. The woman, it is said, had written threatening letters to the Converse family, and often had complained to the police about imagined wrongs, so she was committed as a precautionary measure.

Evidence has been obtained which seems to establish an alibi for her on the night of the burning of the barn, but the fire, seemingly of incendiary origin, drew renewed attention to her threats against the Converse family, and her removal to a sanitarium followed an application by Wilbur S. Wright, counsel for Mr. Converse, in the name of the Selectmen of the town of Darien.

Judge Lockwood has ordered Dr. Samuel Pierson of this place and Dr. William L. Griswold of Greenwich to examine her and report next Friday, the day fixed for the hearing, but counsel for Converse said no attempt will be made to connect her with the burning of the barn. Mrs. Charles Scofield, with whom she lived in Noroton, and her son and daughter will swear that Miss Sweeney was in her room at 10 o'clock. The fire began at 10:30.

Araminta Sweeney is a divorced woman. She was the wife of Irving Wood, a New Canaan blacksmith. Counsel for the applicants in the commitment proceedings told the court that she had a hallucination that Mr. Converse was trying to get possession of a farm adjoining his own, which she says belongs to a relative of hers, Raymond by name. The lawyers deny there is any such relative or any farm or intent by Mr. Converse. She also believed that Mrs. Converse was persecuting her.

Chief of Police Brennan said the Sweeney woman had gone to him many times with stories that she had been annoyed by quarreling and shooting of revolvers on the Converse farm. She even had gone to his home and waylaid him on the street, he said, to tell him that the noises she complained of came over the telephone.

Deputy Sheriff Hendrie removed the woman on Saturday night from the home of the Rev. Dr. Carlos Martin, pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Noroton, where she was employed as a domestic. She is a strong woman, and prepossessing in appearance, and she gave the Sheriff and his two assistants much trouble. Even the 200-pound chauffeur had to come to their aid before she could be handled without hurting her. She quieted somewhat when told that she was not being arrested for setting fire to the barn. She had read the newspaper accounts connecting her name with the affair, Dr. Martin said, and had been angry. When the Sheriff appeared she kept insisting that she had not had anything to do with the fire.

Half a dozen or more letters were received at Conyers Manor. They were not signed, but Converse's lawyers said they can prove by the handwriting, by the time and place of mailing, and by remarks made by the woman that they were written by Miss Sweeney. They did not threaten the life of any member of the Converse family, and, while incoherent, their sense was that the recipients were being watched and that harm would come to them.

Miss Sweeney lived on the Converse place for a short time as housekeeper for Charles Brown, a gardener, whose wife was Miss Sweeney's aunt. The latter was called in by the police to try and calm her when she began complaining of being annoyed from the Converse place. For the last six months she had worked for the Rev. Dr. Martin at Noroton, doing general housework. Dr. Martin said to-night that the woman acted strangely at times, as though she were unbalanced.

The Converse family is staying at the St. Regis Hotel in New York. Mrs. Converse was seen last night, but refused to discuss the matter. She would not say whether Mr. Converse believed that Miss Sweeney was guilty of an incendiary attempt or whether he had been responsible for her commitment.

SAILORS LIKELY TO DESERT.

Mutinied When Ship Was Held Out Four Weeks with Sugar Cargo.

It became known yesterday that the mutiny of the crew on the British freighter Clan Maclean, off Queenstown, was due to the vessel having to be at anchor near the Delaware Breakwater for nearly four weeks waiting for a market for her cargo of Java sugar. Mr. Mackay of the firm of Barber & Co., 11 Broadway, the ship's agents in this city, said that it was cheaper for the charterers to pay the $350 a day demurrage for the ship than land the cargo of sugar and place it in storage.

The sugar has now been purchased by the American Sugar Company, he said, and the vessel would go alongside the stores at South Brooklyn to unload either to-day or to-morrow. The cargo had fetched within a shade of 5 cents a pound, which amounted to about $713,850. It was contained in 15,462 baskets and 15,575 bags, all shipped from the south coast of Java, where it was grown.

When the Clan Maclean goes alongside it is expected that the disgruntled members of her crew will all go ashore and desert. They will leave a total sum of $150 in wages due.

Capt. Alexander Williamson, the commander of the freighter, is in a tight place. He has no redress in the United States, as the laws of this country do not permit a seaman to be imprisoned for desertion. The men will lose their pay, but he has to pay it over to the British Board of Trade under the new laws, and the owners will have to pay an alien tax of $4 a head to the immigration authorities for every member of the crew that leaves at this port, without getting anything in return. In addition the Captain has to pay about $450 expenses and wages to the runners who brought the Clan Maclean around from the Delaware, which includes their fare back home.

ENGLISH AVIATOR SAILS.

Claude Grahame-White and Clifford B. Harmon Return to England.

Claude Grahame-White, the English aviator, winner of the International Championship Cup at the recent Belmont Park meet, and Clifford B. Harmon will sail this morning on the Cunard Line steamship Mauretania. Mr. White has been in this country some three months in which he has made more than $100,000 in giving aeroplane exhibitions in various parts of the country.

Grahame-White expects to win the $20,000 prize for a flight across the English Channel in an English built machine. If he succeeds, Mr. Harmon will pilot the machine back from France to England. The British aviator is taking back with him two biplanes made at Marblehead, Mass. Three other machines of the same type will be delivered to him early in February.

Arrest Man Who Posed as Tramp.

HOUSTON, Texas, Nov. 29.—Posing as "the man without a dime," Irwin A. Brown, wealthy clubman and sociological worker of Denver, Col., was arrested last night in a cheap lodging house. He had gone there in pursuit of his sociological investigations and was attired as a tramp. His only offense, he declares, was to ask for a bed, explaining at the same time that he had no money. He was released when he was identified.

Foss Contributed $34,916.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—The Democratic State Committee received $42,548 in the last year and spent $36,419 in the recent campaign, according to the sworn statement of the committee filed with the Secretary of State to-day. The largest contributor was Governor-elect Eugene N. Foss, who gave $34,916.

NEW REPUBLICAN MAGAZINE.

Alliance Incorporated to Propagate Party Principles.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 29.—The National Republican Alliance, with principal offices in New York City, was incorporated to-day "to create, promote, and maintain the principles of Republicanism as proclaimed by the National Republican Party; to create a more widespread interest in politics; to encourage voting, and to protect the ballot box."

The directors are Harry W. Linsley, Henry Clay Palmer, Walter M. Seymour, Marshal W. Taggart, William H. Carpenter, George L. Melbourne, Samuel Savil Paquin, Stephen D. Conger, Sylvester Maguire, and William H. Chapman of New York, and Ralph Neilson of Brooklyn.

Marshal W. Taggart of Roselle Park, N. J., one of the incorporators, said last night that the principal purpose of the alliance would be the publication of a monthly magazine for the propagation of Republican principles.

"We have not yet established a headquarters in New York City," said Mr. Taggart, "nor have we decided on a name for the publication—the plans are still in the embryonic stage. But a good many Republicans of prominence in this and other States have been consulted and given their approval to the plan which contemplates the setting aside of a certain percentage of the receipts for campaign fund purposes to aid the party."

It is understood that George L. Melbourne, a publisher, started the movement.

DEPEW BEMOANS LACK OF CIVIC PRIDE

New Yorkers Too Modest About the City's Merits, He Tells Fifth Avenue Association.

McANENY'S TRAFFIC PLANS

Would Restrict Certain Streets According to the Direction the Vehicles Take—Dix Sends Regrets.

The Fifth Avenue Association, at its first annual dinner held last night at the Holland House, entertained among the hundred men present some of the most prominent citizens and business men in the city. The organization is a civic improvement body composed of the residents, property owners, and merchants of Fifth Avenue. It includes such men as Cornelius Vanderbilt, Henry Phipps, Adrian Iselin, William A. Clark, William E. Corey, Felix M. Warburg, and Charles Thorley. The association has been in existence four years and has done much for the improvement of the avenue, but this is the first dinner given by it.

After the serving of an elaborate menu Robert Grier Cooke, President of the association, acted as toastmaster for a short programme of speeches. Senator Depew lectured the diners on the need for more active civic pride in New York, and Borough President McAneny, who was introduced as the representative of Mayor Gaynor, who was unable to attend, spoke of his plans for future street improvements in the city.

Mr. Cooke read this letter from Gov.-elect Dix:

> Thomson, N. Y., Nov. 26, 1910.
>
> Robert Grier Cooke, President, Fifth Avenue Association.
>
> Dear Mr. Cooke: It is with profound regret that I am forced to deprive myself of the honor of being your guest at the dinner of your association on the evening of Nov. 29.
>
> The association is a forceful unit working for the permanent good of a great city, and I trust its influence will increase more and more that future generations will have an inspiration from the monuments you erect to art and architecture and the welfare of humanity. Sincerely yours,
>
> JOHN A. DIX.

Depew on Civic Pride.

"The striking thing about the people of this great city," said Senator Depew, "is that until recently they have never had any civic pride. There is plenty of pride in Peekskill, whose praises I have been singing for the last half century, and my life has been made miserable as a Senator by the patriots of other cities.

"Meet a man from Boston and ask him where he comes from. He replies, 'Boston,' in a loud voice and commences to dilate on the virtues of that town. Meet a man from Chicago and ask him where he comes from. He shouts, 'Why, Chicago! Didn't you know it? The metropolis of the country!'

"What does a New Yorker do? Does he ever say anything about where he comes from? If he goes out of town he doesn't register if he can help it, and if he is compelled to he writes, 'J. Jones, N. Y.'"

The Senator told of the railroad rate fight between the first Commodore Vanderbilt and the Pennsylvania and the Baltimore & Ohio. "He went to the commercial bodies of this city," said the Senator, "and asked them for their support. 'This is no affair of ours,' they told him."

Like the Champs Elysee.

The Senator declared that the only thoroughfare in the world that can compare with Fifth Avenue is the Champs Elysée.

"Fifth Avenue is another street from what it was five years ago when you began your work," he added. "The success of your movement illustrates the advance in public sentiment and the understanding of the situation by property owners. I remember, when there was an agitation twenty-five years ago to widen Fifth Avenue by taking off the stoops of the houses, the Fifth Avenue property owners formed an association and denounced the scheme as robbery, and the city press scarcely veiled the insinuation that it was a job on the part of the municipal authorities to blackmail; in fact, I think for a while it was a scheme never intended to go through, but to levy forced contributions along the line of the avenue.

"But you, representing the territory itself, speaking for your own advantage and that of your neighbors, and, in a sense, for the whole city, have convinced everybody that the widening of Fifth Avenue upon the lines which you have succeeded in accomplishing so far has been the greatest contribution to freedom of travel for carriages, trucks, and motor vehicles and for the development of high-class business along our best roadway since it was first laid out."

The Senator closed with a few jocular references to politics, and paid this tribute to Mr. Dix:

"I made many speeches against him during the campaign, but I became convinced from what he refrained from saying rather than what he said that he is a man of sound common sense."

Plans for the Avenue.

Before introducing the Senator as "Our Veteran New Yorker" Mr. Cooke outlined the objects and the purposes of the association, declaring that one of the things to which it will devote itself in the future will be the development of a definite architectural plan along the Avenue.

Mr. McAneny spoke of the Fifth Avenue widening, saying that he believes it should be extended to Fifty-ninth Street, and told of other street widenings that will be commenced in the near future. He outlined the work of his new Bureau of Traffic Observation, and declared that much good would come from the designation of certain streets for certain kinds of traffic. As an example of this, he suggested that Nassau Street might be made a south-bound thoroughfare and William Street a north-bound thoroughfare, Forty-second Street west-bound and Forty-fifth Street east-bound.

A partial list of those present included George C. Boldt, Curtis Pell, Charles Thorley, Fire Chief Croker, Col. W. D. Mann, Walter McGee, Sol Bloom, Simon Brentano, Cyrille Carreau, John F. Carroll, John A. Sleicher, Supreme Court Justice Dugro, Chauncey Depew, Jr., William E. Dowd, S. L. Elzas, C. C. Gunther, S Kurzman, David Lichtenstein, J. B. Martin, R. W. Mead, Walter Merrall, G. Opdyke, F. L. Perine, James P. Silo, Fred Sterry, Frank Veiller, Felix M. Warburg, George W. Young, Ernestus Gulick, Allan C. Hoffman, Louis Ralston, and Frank Tilford.

Much Kidnapped Boy Now Safe.

Supreme Court Justice Aspinall in Brooklyn yesterday rendered a decision in the case of nine-year-old Michael Dean McLaughlin which will probably end the long fight between the father and mother over the custody of the much-kidnapped lad. In the last two years the boy has been carried off first by his father, Michael McLaughlin, a Brooklyn realty operator, and then by his mother, who is now Mrs. Celia B. Holt, and has been dragged around the country until he has wearied of the experience. Justice Aspinall decided yesterday that little Dean should stay with his mother during the school terms and go to his father for the Christmas and Easter holidays and half of the Summer school vacation. The parents promised the court that neither would do any more kidnapping of the boy.

TO EXCLUDE DYING CHARGE.

Fight by Lawyers to Keep Out Accusation Against Hattie Le Blanc.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 29.—The question of what constitutes a "dying declaration" occupied the second session of the trial to-day of Hattie Le Blanc, the Cape Breton girl charged with the murder of her employer, Clarence F. Glover, a Waltham laundryman, a year ago.

There was really no trial at all to-day, for the jury filed in and filed out, with the witnesses after them, so that the District Attorney and the defendant's counsel might substantiate or disapprove to the satisfaction of Judge Bond that Glover was in "extremis mortis" when he declared that Hattie Le Blanc shot him.

Lawyer M. M. Johnson, for the defense, objected to the introduction of any such statement, or even a reference to it by the prosecution.

Judge Bond listened all day to the evidence of those who stood around Glover in his last hours in Dr. Cousen's private hospital, which was a few yards from the laundry. Nearly all these witnesses were positive that Glover had accused Hattie Le Blanc, but many of them said he hesitated in making such a declaration, and others testified that he continually asked the doctors to operate upon him, remarking that unless they did so he was gone.

District Attorney Higgins, after expressing some surprise over the situation, first called a grocery clerk, Herman A. King, who discovered Glover kneeling on the piazza of Dr. Cousen's hospital after the shooting. King said that Glover remarked:

"I'm shot. I can't live."

When asked who shot him Glover said: "A woman."

King said he pressed Glover to tell her name, but it was only after being asked several times that Glover said "Hattie Le Blanc," and then gave her address.

T. H. Connor, who followed King to the piazza, also heard Glover say that he had been shot by a woman. Connor said he urged Glover to tell who it was.

"He seemed to hesitate," said the witness, "but after I repeated the question several times he at last said 'it was Hattie Le Blanc.'"

Connor said he heard Glover say:

"Its all over. I'm going to die."

Dr. E. F. Dowd said that after Glover had been told that he could not live he repeated several times that Hattie Le Blanc shot him.

Dr. George F. McDonald, another of the attending physicians, testified that Glover was not told that he was dying, but was informed that his chances were poor. When asked if his wife should be sent for Glover seemed to hesitate and then said: "Yes, she will not shoot me."

Police Sergt. Curran of Waltham signed a statement after Glover's death embodying what Glover had said before death. He also interviewed Mrs. Glover and asked her if she shot her husband. She replied "No! No! No!"

Later when Judge Bond announced that there should be no reference to the statement in the opening of the case to the jury the District Attorney declared that unless this statement of Glover's were allowed to go to the jury the case of the prosecution would be very weak, and that it must rely upon circumstantial evidence to prove its accusations against the girl.

The pleadings of the District Attorney were so vehement that Judge Bond said he would withdraw his decision and would render two decisions to-morrow—first, whether the Government should be allowed to refer to the declaration; and, second, whether it should be admitted as evidence.

So intense is the public interest in the case that more than a thousand men and women waited about the Court House in a pouring rain before the opening of the afternoon session. When the doors were opened there was a rush for the courtroom, and after every seat had been taken the officers had difficulty in pushing back the remainder of the crowd.

It has been many years since such a hearing as that of to-day has preceded the taking of evidence in a murder trial in this State.

FIND MRS. VOLINSKY INSANE.

Whoman Who Charged Charity Leaders with Persecution Sent to Asylum.

Charles M. Dayton, appointed to take testimony as to the mental condition of Mrs. Anna Volinsky, who was a collector for the Montefiore Home and was arrested on the charge that she threatened Jacob H. Schiff, one of its directors, submitted a report of thirty-six pages yesterday, in which he gives it as his opinion that the woman "is suffering from a type of paranoia manifested by delusions of persecution and based upon hystero-epilepsy."

Supreme Court Justice Guy approved the report and ordered that the woman should be sent to the Manhattan State Hospital for the Insane, but before nightfall Miss Volinsky's lawyer, Bernard H. Sandler, had obtained a stay from Justice Bijur, together with an order to show cause why the woman's sanity should not be submitted to the verdict of a jury. Miss Volinsky is now at Bellevue Hospital.

Mr. Dayton's report describes Miss Volinsky as a remarkably clever woman, who had always a ready answer for the questions put to her and who seemed to enjoy the proceedings thoroughly.

"Granting the facts which she believes to be true, her conclusions are worked out with the logic and finesse of an acute mind," he says, but later on continues: "I am of the opinion that Miss Volinsky's beliefs that the directors of the Montefiore Home had conspired to cheat her; that the Lebanon Hospital and the Montefiore Home had conspired to defraud her; that she had been betrayed by Danziger; that Policeman Cohen had given information against her; that Mr. Schiff had found out the truth of all her charges and had shielded the guilty ones, are false beliefs, and that therefore Miss Volinsky is suffering from a type of paranoia manifested by delusions of persecution and based upon hystero-epilepsy."

GIRL REPORTS AN ATTACK.

Tells Police Over 'Phone Men Beat Her Severely, Then She Disappears.

A young girl who said she was Ellen Baldwin, 18 years old, of 1,208 Cortelyou Road, Brooklyn, rushed into the drug store of William Marsh at Nostrand Avenue and Clarkson Street, Flatbush, last night at about 8:30 o'clock. She called Police Headquarters by telephone and told Lieut. Foster that while walking along Albany Avenue near Midwood Street three men jumped from the bushes and attacked her. She said they knocked her teeth out and stole her pocketbook, but when she cried for help her three assailants fled down Albany Avenue, while she ran up Nostrand Avenue to the drug store.

Lieut. Foster sent a message to the Snyder Avenue Police Station, ordering Capt. Creamer and his reserves to the scene of the attack. Upon examining the surroundings no trace of an encounter could be found. Policemen were sent to the drug store, where Mr. Marsh said he had noticed no such girl in his store. Another officer was sent to the address given by Miss Baldwin as her home. It is the office of Dr. Mary Kelly, a dentist, and she said that she had employed the girl up to a month ago, but had not seen her since that time.

Miss Baldwin has not been seen since leaving the drug store after telephoning to the police, and it is thought possible by the detectives that the young woman has been kidnapped by her assailants. The entire Police Department of the borough has been notified of the affair, and are making an investigation.

HIS OWN LAWYER IN ALIENATION SUIT

Dr. Knapp's Varied Roles and Voices as Plaintiff, Witness, Cross-Examiner, Puzzle Court.

MOVED TO TEARS ON STAND

And Forced, as His Own Counsel, to Return Immediately to Legal Calm—Was There Affection to Alienate?

Having taken a law course at New York University so that he need not depend on other counsel, Dr. Mark I. Knapp of 616 Madison Avenue appeared before Justice Ford in the Supreme Court yesterday as his own lawyer in a suit for $200,000 which he has brought against Adolph Schlesinger, his father-in-law, and Esther Isenberg, for the alienation of his wife's affections. His examination of himself, in which he carefully differentiated between the restrained tones he should use as Knapp, the lawyer, and the indignant and often tearful accents of Knapp, the witness, provided suppressed amusement for the crowded courtroom, but the interest reached its height when he had his wife on the stand for cross-examination.

The Knapps eyed each other belligerently.

"What are you crying for?" he asked, as a leading question.

"I'm not," she snapped.

The court was inclined to think there had never been any affection to alienate, whereat Dr. Knapp waved many legal papers in the air and said he could show that it was unnecessary for a plaintiff to prove affection. He had himself testified that his wife was wont at times to throw cups, saucers, and knives at him.

"I can prove that she loves me now," he shouted, this time waving his papers in the direction of Mrs. Knapp, who seemed to be making a face at him from the vantage ground of the witness stand. "Why, even now, sometimes, when I see her, she kisses and embraces me."

There has been no mistake about the facial expression at this point, as Mrs. Knapp said: "Never, never."

With a bodyguard of friends the plaintiff adjourned to the telephone room, where he appealed to Police Headquarters for an escort out of the County Court House. He explained that he did not propose to risk being assaulted right there in the public hallway, and when it was urged that he had a number of friends with him he declared that he did not want to fight anyway, and would rather have a policeman around.

The Knapps were wed in 1898 to the accompaniment of a marriage settlement over which there has been subsequent litigation. They separated in 1906, and Dr. Knapp thinks his father-in-law had something to do with it. He complains that Mr. Schlesinger "viciously and vulgarly" insulted him in the presence of his wife, calling him "a crook, a nobody, a thief, a deceiver, and other equally defaming names." He told all about it yesterday, sitting on the witness stand and asking and answering a long list of questions. The double rôle of counsel and client gave him little difficulty, and when one of his questions provoked an objection he would rise and argue with the lawyer for the other side. Occasionally, however, he would forget and testify standing up, and the exigencies of his situation kept him bobbing in and out of his seat to the visible annoyance of the court. His papers and exhibits were behind him in a suitcase, but he had to keep a few within reach, and these he found it more convenient to sit on. Here is the way it sounded:

Lawyer Knapp—I show you a picture. Do you know who it is?

Witness Knapp (struggling with his emotion)—I do. It is a young man named Benny.

Objection. Sustained.

Lawyer Knapp (coldly)—And what was your condition after the separation?

Witness Knapp (bursting into tears)—I was crying all the time, day and night, in my office and on the street.

Occasionally he would be obliged to pause in his testimony and cover his eyes with his handkerchief. When it came to cross-examination he was far more chipper, being engrossed part of the time with making notes of the questions asked him and entering objections to them. He would never answer until these formalities had been disposed of.

"Did you ever quarrel with your wife?" he was asked by Lawyer Hochdorf.

"I? Never."

But she had quarreled with him, it seemed, and he declared that she struck him and would swear at him.

"Did she curse you?" her lawyer asked incredulously.

"Oh, Lord!" he replied. "Breakfast, dinner, and supper."

Here Justice Ford wanted to know if this sort of thing had been going on through most of their married life, and when he heard that it had he waved Dr. Knapp aside, and, calling the wife to the stand, was told by her that Dr. Knapp had not only abused her, but that he had given her almost no money and that but for her father her children must have gone unclothed. He has provided a home for her now in East 117th Street.

"I am convinced," said the court at this point, "that there was no affection to alienate. You seem to have led an uncongenial life with your wife. There was a bargain and sale in the matter of the marriage, and you seem to be more interested in the money side than in the domesticity side. Because of the unhappy outcome of the marriage you seem to be deprived of the financial benefits you hoped to enjoy, but you can't recover for that in this suit. Whatever affection there may have been at the start seems to have evaporated in thin air."

Mrs. Knapp heard this with many nods of approval, but Dr. Knapp declared that she still loved him and that only trumped-up testimony would indicate the contrary. To illustrate the "alienated" style of wifely missive, he read the following postal card:

> Gentlemen: Kindly give Bloomingdales' $1 for the piano. Respectfully,
>
> Mrs. KNAPP.

This was put in evidence.

Dr. Knapp declared that he had always treated her tenderly, that he had taken her to Europe and to "the opera and the circus." Counsel for the defendants, denying all the allegations, said that he had beaten her and that his attitude from the first had been purely mercenary.

H. W. TAFT TOASTS BROTHER.

Wouldn't Risk Making Him Feel Too Big About It, Though, He Says.

To celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the birth of the Ohio Society of New York 160 of its members attended a dinner last night at the Hotel Manhattan. The gathering was simply a love feast, with none but Buckeyes present and no set speeches on the card. The big event, the annual banquet of the society, is set for Jan. 14, at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The annual election of officers was held last night. Henry W. Taft, President Taft's brother, was succeeded as President by William S. Hawk. The other officers elected were: Vice Presidents, George W. Perkins, George D. Cravath, William H. Truesdale, Warren Higley, and Horace J. Moore; Secretary, David Homer Bates, Jr.; Presiding Secretary, Seth Thayer Stewart; Board of Trustees for three years—James F. Shaw, Milton P. Jackson, and M. F. Anderson.

Mr. Taft, the retiring President, who acted as toastmaster, proposed a toast to the President of the United States.

"I never do this in his presence," he said, "because it might make him feel too big."

"You never could!" a voice rang out in a far corner of the hall. Then the entire assemblage arose and drank to the health of the President.

BALLOON UP IN SNOWSTORM.

New Yorkers Make a 45-Mile Trip from Pittsfield.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Nov. 29.—In a snowstorm which had twice delayed the flight, Leroy M. Taylor of New York gave the word at 1:30 this afternoon for the release of the balloon Cleveland, which resembled a big snow ball.

The aim was to reach New York, the wind being favoring, but the balloon landed at Amenia, N. Y., according to word sent back here to-night. The air line distance of the voyage was forty-five miles.

A new Winter sport was inaugurated with this flight, for it is the intention of Mr. Taylor and New York men to make Winter ballooning popular and to have semi-monthly flights from this city.

It was Mr. Taylor's ninth flight, his qualifying event for a license from the Aero Club of America. A. E. Stevens of New York was his assistant, and he carried as passengers two friends, Miles M. Morris of New York and Sidney F. Beckwith of Garrison.

The Cleveland took 80,000 cubic feet of gas, and as it rose half a ton of snow clung to its top and sides. Twice, because of the clinging snow, the flight was postponed. Then when the storm let up for an interval fifty men shook the snow off the big bag and taking on twenty bags of ballast the start was made.

It was the first flight for Mr. Morris and Mr. Beckwith. All the aeronauts were dressed for cold and rough traveling, and four life preservers were put aboard.

Before leaving Pittsfield Mr. Taylor announced that he would head a new Aero Club to be organized in New York on Dec. 4 at a meeting at Delmonico's. It is to be called the Fliers' Club, and will have Pittsfield as its principal station. The charter members will be of the Lambs, Racquet, Larchmont, and New York Yacht Clubs.

The Book of Human Nature

The Oldest Published and Ever New

Here is a stately matron and her daughter, typically calm, well-bred American women. The mother is pretending that the CROSS black silk theatre bag she is purchasing is a gift for a relative. The daughter, knowing full well it is to be her own Christmas gift, suggests blue, for fear "the relative" might regard black as a reflection on her advancing years.

Close by a couple are selecting a gift for their son at college. The father suggests a toilet case, monogrammed, as it will have no value as collateral in times of financial embarrassment.

A man is suggesting a CROSS calendar for a married couple, as it would be convenient for the husband on his birthday to remember to take a day off—and it might remind his wife on her birthday to take a year off—and thus remain young.

A couple are looking at the ever-ready-two-letter monogram stationery, and holding Crane's paper up to the light, are admiring its snow-white purity and artistic gold monogram. The young man asks "How do you like my entwined initials?" and the young lady blushes and murmurs "This is so sudden."

An elderly lady does not believe her nephew would like a bill fold lined with calf, as he is a vegetarian—so she selects one lined with moire silk. Doubtless he would have preferred it lined with money.

CROSS is evidently a consulting philanthropist and solves every one's Christmas Perplexity; from the lady who wishes "a cigar-case for a gentleman with blue eyes residing in California" to the individual desiring "something in blue for a young lady recovering from bronchitis."

KATZENSTEIN SAYS HE'S A SCAPEGOAT

Bone Dealer Accused of Stealing Rations from Ward's Island Patients Weeps in Court.

HIS BAIL MORE THAN DOUBLED

Meat Found in His Refuse Wagon Was Put There to Fasten Frauds on Him, He Declares.

Simon Katzenstein, the grease and bone dealer of the Bronx, who was captured ten days ago while hauling away 1,400 pounds of food that should have reached the rations of patients in the Manhattan State Hospital for the Insane on Ward's Island, explained, through his lawyer, Charles E. F. McCann, yesterday, the plan of defense by which he hopes to free himself from charges of grand larceny, receiving stolen goods, and attempting to bribe a policeman.

Katzenstein was to have had a preliminary hearing before Magistrate Breen in the Westchester Court yesterday, but he appeared with such an array of witnesses that the Magistrate decided he could not hear the case in a single day and postponed it until this morning.

The defense outlined for the defendant under charges for what Commissioner of Accounts Fosdick called "the meanest piece of grafting he had ever seen," is that he was an innocent victim of a "plant" arranged on Ward's Island to make him a scapegoat for others who had learned that an army of accountants and investigators were getting close to the trail of their wholesale frauds.

The hope that this defense would prevail originated at the hearings by the State Board of Lunacy on Ward's Island. Dr. William Mabon, the Superintendent, testified that he had never personally weighed a pound of meat, although charged with general supervision of the hospital's affairs, and had never personally looked up a single record of the steward's department, although charged with the duty of seeing that all records were honestly and accurately kept.

Says He Is a Scapegoat.

This testimony added to that of Frederick A. Wheeler, purchasing steward, who admitted that he had made no protest against the recordless methods of handling meat, although it was common knowledge among the cooks under him that they were being cheated out of a large part of the supplies charged to them, has caused Mr. Katzenstein's lawyer to declare that his client is merely a victim of a widespread system of grafting, the proceeds of which went to hospital authorities "higher up."

"Before we are through with this case," said Lawyer McCann, who is a nephew of Richard Croker, "we will lay bare, I feel sure, a system of grafting which was operated on a gigantic scale.

"And my client was not even a spoke in the wheel, let alone a principal. Auditors were at work on Ward's Island when this raid was made. There was a shortage of 3,000 pounds of beef in the meat house.

"We shall contend that Mr. Katzenstein never received a pound of meat from Ward's Island except the single shipment on his wagon when he was raided. He went that morning to the State's pier, received barrels covered with burlap and overlaid, when they contained meat, with the boiled bone which would have been their rightful contents.

"Now, Katzenstein didn't load the barrels on to the State boat, or set foot himself upon the State's island, or personally remove the barrels from the boat at the Manhattan pier. He simply drove away with a wagon which had been loaded for him by State employes and which, for all he knew, contained the product of which he was the legitimate purchaser through a long-standing contract."

Lawyer McCann insisted that his client was far from the wealthy man he had been pictured in the newspapers, and declared it would be shown that he had no business whatever except that of selling bones for fertilizer, and had never conducted as charged a side line as a wholesale meat vendor. He urged that further probing by the State would reveal the fact that invoices of meat arrived short-weighted at the island, and that a method had been devised to divert attention from this important fact.

While Lawyer McCann and Assistant District Attorneys De Ford and Ten Eyck were arguing before Magistrate Breen as to whether the hearing should proceed or go over for a day, the prosecution brought up a surprise for the defense in the form of a declaration that it was prepared to prove that Katzenstein's thefts had amounted to a total of $200 a week, and had extended over a period of three years.

On the plea that the total stealings amounted to $31,200, and that there was still a charge of receiving stolen goods that could be lodged against the defendant, Magistrate Breen decided to increase the bail from $4,500 to $9,500, adding the extra $5,000 for the new charge as submitted by the District Attorney.

Katzenstein Weeps in Court.

The announcement that his bail had been more than doubled broke Katzenstein's spirit so badly that he put his head down in his hands and sobbed. He is an old man with gray, thin hair.

For several hours Katzenstein was locked in a cell in the Westchester Station House, while his son and his lawyers hunted for additional bondsmen. Late in the afternoon Morris Latz, a retired cigar manufacturer, and George Joseph, a retired Bronx butcher, appeared with deeds for real estate valued at $40,000. Their bond was accepted and Katzenstein was released.

No effort was made by counsel for the Manhattan State Hospital to deny that employes were actively concerned in the thefts. It was suggested instead that when the Lunacy Commission's hearing is resumed this afternoon it will mark the beginning of a serious effort to find the responsible parties on the island and arrest them.

The Grand Jury, it was learned, will also begin an action independent of that conducted by the Lunacy Commission with a view to returning indictments wherever evidence can be found on which to base a case. The Grand Jury's activities follow a report to District Attorney Whitman, made by Assistant District Attorney De Ford, who has been present at the public hearings on Ward's Island and at the private hearings which preceded them.

Subpoenas have already been issued for witnesses who are wanted at the Grand Jury's first session, which has been fixed for this morning.

Dr. Mabon, the Ward's Island Superintendent, who always accepted the word of Wheeler as to the supplies on hand and the condition of the records, gets $6,000 a year, with his board and a house to live in. Mr. Wheeler, who took the word of the assistant steward, gets $4,000 a year, his board, a house, and "actual traveling and other expenses" incurred in making purchases for the Manhattan, Central Islip, Kings Park, and Long Island Hospitals. An effort is being made by the District Attorney to trace his political history preceding his appointment to his present place through the influence of the late John Raines, his brother-in-law.

ROOT SELLS HIS CITY HOUSE.

New Yorker Purchases It for $325,000—Senator Didn't Need It.

Senator Elihu Root has sold his handsome residence at the southeast corner of Park Avenue and Seventy-first Street for a price said by the brokers who effected the sale, the Douglas Robinson-Charles S. Brown Company, to be between $300,000 and $350,000. It is the largest sale for some time of private residence property in that section of Park Avenue, which is fast becoming one of the most exclusive residential centres in the city.

Interest in the sale was heightened by the fact that Senator Root has occupied his new town house for barely four years. It was erected from plans by Carrere & Hastings, and was said to have one of the most artistic and tastefully arranged interiors to be found in the city. The exterior of the house is equally pleasing, being of early Colonial design, built of red brick with light stone facing.

Mr. Root purchased the plot in 1903 from the same brokers, and in view of the advancing price of land in that locality the price he has now obtained for it is not regarded by experts as excessive. In fact, one broker went so far as to say that at $300,000 the house would be a bargain. The actual amount received by Senator Root is probably about $325,000. The brokers refused to state who the new owner is, simply saying that he is a New Yorker and intends to occupy the residence.

Senator Root is living in the house now, but his political duties have prevented him from spending more than a few weeks a year there. It was this fact, it was learned, that led both the Senator and Mrs. Root to decide to dispose of the property when a good opportunity occurred. The Roots have a large apartment in Washington, where they reside for the greater part of the year. In addition, Senator Root has a country home at Southampton, L. I., and about three years ago he purchased from the widow of his brother, Dr. Oren Root, the old Root homestead, known as the Hemlocks, overlooking Hamilton College, at Clinton, N. Y. With these three homes for their occupancy a permanent residence in New York is considered superfluous.

Senator Root's house occupies a plot fronting 42.6 feet on Seventy-first Street and 100 feet on Park Avenue. Adjoining it on Park Avenue is the home of Morgan J. O'Brien. Opposite, on the northeast corner, is the residence of Everett P. Wheeler and on the northwest corner is the new house lately completed for George Brewster. One block below, on the west side, the property formerly occupied by the Union Theological Seminary is being improved with handsome residences, of which the most imposing will be the new homes for George Blumenthal and Arthur Curtiss James, each occupying half of the Park Avenue frontage. The Root house is five stories high. It was leased for one season to Paul Morton, while Senator Root was Secretary of State.

The Hamburg is a 11,000-ton vessel, 498 feet long, with 60 foot beam and is equipped with a swimming pool on deck and a gymnasium.

ALDERMEN PREPARE A CUT IN CAB FARES

HOTEL CAB STANDS MAY GO

Charge Made by Some Hotels for the Privilege a Public Scandal, Alderman Nicoll Declares.

Coincident with the ending of the taxicab strike yesterday, the Aldermen have again taken up the question of the regulation of taxicab fares. The last ordinance they passed on the subject has been declared unconstitutional by the courts. At the meeting of the board yesterday, Alderman Courtlandt Nicoll introduced a new ordinance which tends to regulate the entire hack and taxicab traffic of the city. Its principal features are the reduction of the present legal charges by practically 50 per cent. and the abolishment of the present private taxicab stands at hotels and restaurants.

The licensing and taximeter inspection sections of the old ordinance were not disturbed by the courts, the unconstitutionality being found solely in the contention that the prescribed rates discriminated against the majority of the taxicab operators. The ordinance provided a fare for taximeter cabs of 40 cents for the first half mile and 10 cents for every additional quarter mile. Nothing was said about the legal fare to be charged by motor cabs similar to taxicabs, on which there are no meters, of which large numbers have come to be operated in the city. The latter class of cabs have been charging the legal rates for regular horse cabs of $1 a mile. The taxicab people declared that this was unfair, and, taking their case to court, won their point.

Alderman Nicoll's ordinance makes a clear distinction between horse and motor vehicles, with or without taximeters, besides substantially reducing the fare. This is his schedule of fares:

HORSE-DRAWN VEHICLES.

Cabs.

For the first mile or any part thereof	.30
For each additional half mile or part thereof	.15

Coaches.

For the first mile or any part thereof	.50
For each additional half mile or any part thereof	.25

MOTOR VEHICLES.

For the first half mile or any part thereof	.25
For each additional half mile or any part thereof	.15

For waiting time, in both classes of vehicles, at the rate of $1 per hour. No charge, however, shall be made for a stop not exceeding five minutes.

HOURLY RATES.

Applying only to shopping and calling, and not including park or road driving, nor driving more than five miles from starting point:

For the first hour or any part thereof	$1.50
For each additional half hour	.50

The provision against the present private taxicab stands reads: "The owner or lessee of any hotel or hotels, or of any building where there is necessity thereof, may, upon filing a written application, be permitted to have a portion of the street immediately in front of such hotel or other building temporarily utilized as a hack stand for a limited number of hacks of such character as he desires. Such application shall be granted solely in the discretion of the Mayor through his Chief of the Bureau of Licenses.

"Any licensed hack may stand in front of such hotel so long as the full number allowed to the stand is not already at the stand, and no charge must be made for the privilege."

This will do away with such stands as are now maintained at the principal hotels and cafés of the city where only the cabs of a certain concern are allowed.

Alderman Nicoll believes this feature the most important in his ordinance. "It has come to be a public scandal," said he yesterday, "the way the space in the city streets has been sold out by hotels and cafés to some favored cab company. I know of instances, without mentioning any names, where as high as $15,000 and $20,000 has been paid for these privileges."

CHAUFFEURS TO ARBITRATE.

Taxicab Drivers Agree to Return to Work While Discussing Settlement.

The taxicab chauffeurs' troubles may end to-day. The men have decided to go back to work while the differences between them and their employers are thrashed out by a joint committee from both sides.

This action was decided upon yesterday after a three-hour conference with Mayor Gaynor of representatives of the strikers and the employers. An agreement is expected on the requirement that chauffeurs pay for breakage. The strikers at a meeting last night rejected the proposal and will submit another to-day.

Night service was resumed last evening by most of the companies for the first time since the strike started, with a policeman on each cab.

SUICIDE UNDER TRAIN.

Daniel Arthur, Machine Works Official, Suicides in Jersey City Station.

Daniel Arthur, Vice President of the Arthur & Co. Machine Works of 188 and 190 Front Street, Manhattan, and a member of the Union League and other Brooklyn Clubs, committed suicide yesterday at the noon hour at the Pacific Avenue, Jersey City, station of the New Jersey Central Railway. He put his head beneath the wheels of a passenger train just as it was moving out of the station. Insomnia and ill-health are supposed to have driven him to the act.

Mr. Arthur, who was 44 years old, was seen on the platform just before the 12:45 train pulled out of the shed. Just as the train started to move he hurried toward the second coach as if he intended to jump aboard. Joseph Sauer of 258 Halliday Street, Jersey City, saw Mr. Arthur dart between the first and second coaches and deliberately put his head across the rail. In a fraction of a second the front wheels of the forward truck of the second coach had passed over his neck, severing his head.

Sauer yelled to Thomas Young, the station agent, and at a signal the train stopped, but not until the wheels of all the other cars had passed over the suicide.

Sauer and Young removed the body from the tracks and carried it to the far end of the train shed. Young sent for the police, and a search of the dead man's pockets revealed a piece of paper on which was hurriedly scribbled in pencil the words:

"Please notify Dr. Edward L. Bull, Telephone 44 Bergen."

There were a number of papers and letters relating to business matters in the dead man's pockets, a gold watch, and some money. The body was removed to the Jersey City Morgue, and there Dr. Bull identified it. Mr. Arthur lived with his parents and a brother and sister at 348 Washington Street, Brooklyn. He was unmarried and had been connected with the machine works of which his father, James Arthur, is President for many years. His brother, John S. Arthur, is secretary of the firm.

At the home of the Arthurs it was said last night that Mr. Arthur had no trouble with his accounts, but that he had long complained of being unable to sleep and had been receiving treatment from Dr. Bull. His relatives all asserted that he must have met with an accident.

Mr. Arthur was born in Glasgow, Scotland, and came to this country when he was six years old.

BOY AIDING BEGGAR KILLED.

Stabbed Mortally by Man Who Protested Against His Alms-Giving.

Eighteen-year-old Matthew Dolan of 55 James Street, a member of St. James's Church in James Street, near Park Row, who, Father Curry declared yesterday with tears in his eyes, was one of the best of the young men of the neighborhood, was killed yesterday afternoon by being stabbed twice in the breast and abdomen. According to Thomas Mullins of 24 Madison Street, a friend of Dolan, the youth was killed in a quarrel which grew out of his offering 2 cents to a beggar.

"Let him earn his own living. Don't give him a cent," exclaimed Thomas Cathorus, a cook in a restaurant at 30 Madison Street, when Dolan, who was standing outside of the restaurant, tendered 2 cents to the beggar, according to the story which Mullins told the police.

Dolan told the cook to mind his business. The latter ran into the restaurant returning with a long knife, with which he stabbed Dolan twice, said Mullins. Then Cathorus fled into the house, holding off Mullins and some others with his weapon.

Dolan died before an ambulance could be summoned, and the police reserves of the Madison Street Station finally caught Cathorus in the cellar of the house. He was charged with Dolan's murder.

Chloroformed by Burglars.

The family of Kallmann Hoffman of 345 East Third Street are sure they were chloroformed on Saturday night by burglars who entered a kitchen window some time after Hoffman came home from his store at midnight, and made away with two fur coats and jewelry worth $200. Hoffman, his wife, and their three children—Rosie, 13; Moses, 11, and Lillie, 6 years old—awoke late on Sunday morning long after the hour at which they usually open their store. All felt dazed and had a heavy sensation as if they had been drugged. There is no clue to the burglars.

Julia Ward Howe Memorial.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—A memorial painting of the late Julia Ward Howe will be added to the portrait collection in Faneuil Hall, according to plans just perfected at a public meeting. The painting is to cost $3,000 and the money is to be raised by subscription. Mayor John F. Fitzgerald has been made Chairman of the committee to have charge of the matter. John W. Elliott, son-in-law of Mrs. Howe, has been commissioned to execute the painting.

Three Die in 3 Days in One Family.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 29.—The death of four-year-old Christopher Fagen Reilly in Fairhaven to-day was the third in the family in as many days. He died while the double funeral of his grandfather and grandmother was taking place. Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Fagen died within a few hours of each other. All three deaths were caused by pneumonia.

DOG LOST ON MOTOR TRIP.

Mrs. McDonald Is Trying to Get Back Her Pet Through Lost Column.

When Mrs. McDonald left the Hotel Walton for a motor ride on Monday evening, Mime, her small black pet dog, slipped out ahead of her. He was wearing the leather coat which he dons for the rides he enjoys so greatly. By the time Mrs. McDonald reached the car at the curb Mime had vanished, and he has not been seen thereabouts since.

It is supposed that, in his impatience to be whizzing down the street, the dog jumped into another car that may have appeared to be more on the point of an immediate start. Mrs. McDonald wants very much to have him back. She gives notice through THE TIMES Lost column of a liberal reward for him.

THE DECORATIONS BEAUTIFUL

Plays and Pageants Arranged by Ben Greet to Be Given Nightly—Rooms Reproduce Old English Scenes.

It was all sunshine and April weather, in spite of the clouds without, at the Elizabethan Fair and Festival of the Society for Ethical Culture opened at its new meeting house, Sixty-fourth Street and Central Park West, yesterday. It is one of the prettiest festivals ever given in New York, and it should be, for more than eight hundred women have been working on it for more than a year. It has its own scenery painted to order, the costumes are attractive, the girls are pictures and even the boys look handsome, and Percival Chubb and Ben Greet himself have looked after the little plays and dances that are given in "Ye Playhouse" every evening.

Mayor Gaynor opened the festival last night and wished the workers success in obtaining the money for the new building for which the fair is given, though he implied that he thought churches and Ethical Culture meeting houses should not have fashionable debt attachments, and that persons who believe in religion and ethical culture should be willing to pay for it. The Mayor was not in good voice, and it was a little difficult to hear him. He said in opening his remarks that when he had been asked to take part in the exercises his voice was making such good progress toward recovery that he had hoped it would be in better condition.

Mayor Opens the Fair.

The opening exercises were held in the large auditorium of the new meeting house, which was filled with the guests of the evening and those taking part in the fair. On the platform with the Mayor were Dr. Felix Adler and Prof. Seligman of Columbia University. There was enthusiastic applause when they made their appearance.

Dr. Adler in his address spoke of the days of the Italian Renaissance, when all the people came out to celebrate a new picture that had been painted, feeling that it belonged not only to the church in which it belonged, but to the whole city. So all educational work belonged to the whole city, he said, and the Chief Magistrate of the city was asked to appear as its representative.

"And it is a great pleasure not only to have the Chief Magistrate of the city here," he said, "but to have Mayor Gaynor as Chief Magistrate." There was another burst of applause and Dr. Adler went on to say that Mr. Gaynor had the complete confidence of his fellow citizens and would lead the people to a larger realization of civic righteousness. The Mayor expressed his pleasure at being present and said:

"Dr. Adler spoke of the bazaar being held to pay off the debt on your meeting house. I like that word meeting house, the same that the Quakers use. Dr. Adler didn't say how much the debt was. My mind is all full of debts, he added with a discouraged expression, and the audience laughed. It seems to be the habit of all churches and meeting houses for ethical culture and even Christian Science churches to have a debt. People talk a great deal about free religion or free preaching, but there is no such thing, some one always has to pay the piper. People take what they call an exalted stand, but it only means that some one else will pay for their religion or ethical culture. We have it from the Bible that the preacher of the Gospel or ethical culture shall live by the Gospel.

"I wish you great success in what you are undertaking. Your Dr. Adler is one of the great figures in New York. He doesn't need to die to have people know what he has done to uplift the world. People in history like you (he turned around to Dr. Adler) who have stepped out of the beaten track—I had almost said out of the cow path—have had to die before people knew what they were doing. I felicitate Dr. Adler that he has stepped a little out of the beaten cow track, and he is appreciated. I hope your work will continue to be a success in the future as in the past, and hope you will pay off your debt. Dr. Adler says there is to be no gambling, no chances here, and I think with the gambling spirit that is so much abroad you might add more to your resources if you had them, but I hope you will get all the money you need."

The Mayor declared the fair open, Prof. Seligman invited the people to the lower floor for the pageant and plays, and all the wheels began to turn at once.

"Good Queen Bess," a beautiful young woman, in royal robes. and crimson velvet court train, Miss Gertrude Dallas of Daniel Frohman's company, opened the pageant by reading queenly words from a scroll and then, preceded by a trumpeter, walking over Sir Walter Raleigh's coat, she took that gallant gentleman's arm, and the noble company, with the Mayor in its train, made a royal progress from booth to booth.

Sir Walter Raleigh Perplexed.

Sir Walter Raleigh, who was Percival Vivian of the Ben Greet Company, nearly came to grief in his efforts to live up to history. The clasp of his coat caught on his picturesque wide ruff, and if good Queen Bess had not been most benignant, waiting with a smile for her noble knight to extricate himself from his difficulties, she would have been obliged to dampen her dainty feet in water from a real fountain which bubbled up from real green turf in "ye garden plaisance," which was laid out in little greed-edged walks and which any one would have known from its charm was a real bit of Merrie England.

The fair takes up three floors of the new meeting house building: the basement and the two upper, above the auditorium, and the gymnasium of the old building, which Mr. Greet says makes one of the best settings for Shakespearean scenes he has seen in New York. This is used for a little theatre, where every night there is a different programme of plays and dances. All the parts are taken by members of the Ethical Culture Society.

There is a big millinery shop on the floor with the garden Plaisance, "Ye Head-Geare & Head-Tire Shop," where there are smart hats at reasonable prices, trimmed by members of the society so pretty that many of them were sold before the bazaar was fairly opened; there is "Ye Vanytie Shoppe," "Ye Smokers' Paradise," "Ye Daintie and Sweetmeate Barre"—they make fudge in a chafing dish—and these are only on the first floor. On the others there is a "Bookshoppe and Printerie," "Spicerie and Drysalterie;" there is the doll shop, the college shop, the housewives's shop, all with their appropriate old English names, and the signs are the old guild signs reproduced, and the painted scenery everywhere gives the atmosphere.

"Ye Mermaide Taverne" is an important feature of the top floor, everything being served on deal tables, with quaint signs around the room, and even a boar's head may be seen on the supply table. There will be dances and games every afternoon on the "Village Green" for the children. Distinguished people will be present different evenings. There is an artistic programme, which is a directory and gives the names of all the workers and the programmes of the plays for each day.

The bazaar will continue afternoon and evening during the week. Mrs. Henry Ollesheimer, Mrs. Frances Hellman, Mrs. George L. Beer, Percival Chubb, John Splain, and Arthur Essing are a few among the members of the Executive Committee working for the bazaar, but there have been 800 "fair" women, as Dr. Adler said, who have been giving all their time for months to make it a success.

A HIGH-PRICED INQUIRY.

Public Service Commission Was Right at Hand in Bridge Tie-Up.

Officers of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company received evidence in Monday night's tie-up on the Brooklyn Bridge that the Public Service Commission is active in the matter of accident inspection.

C. W. Wilder, the electrical engineer of the commission was on the car which caused the accident, and immediately started to investigate. On the platform, as the train pulled out, was E. W. Connette, the transportation engineer of the commission, who had arrived just too late to join Mr. Wilder in his trip across the bridge. Mr. Connette also undertook the inquiry as to the cause of the accident.

While Mr. Connette and Mr. Wilder were busy in their inquiries, Secretary Whitney of the commission also came along, and he, too, joined the investigation. As Mr. Whitney draws a salary of $6,000, Mr. Connette a salary of $8,000, and Mr. Wilder a salary of $3,000, it was figured up that the commission had $17,000 worth of talent investigating one accident.

In consequence of the examination which Mr. Connette made of the antiquated pattern of trucks of the car to which the accident happened, a substantial improvement of Brooklyn Rapid Transit equipment in the bridge service may be had. Mr. Connette said the trucks were not suited for service on the bridge.

TALK TO GENESEE FOLK.

Topics of Dix, Littleton, W. C. Brown, and Austen G. Fox at Annual Dinner.

The thirteenth annual dinner of the Society of the Genesee will take place at the Hotel Plaza on Saturday evening, Dec. 10. It will be in honor of Albert H. Harris, Vice President and general counsel of the New York Central lines, and will have several interesting features. Gov.-elect John A. Dix has promised to attend, and it is expected that he will outline some of his plans for his administration. Congressman-elect Martin W. Littleton in his speech will discuss the need for a Committee on Waste of the House of Representatives and his proposal for a Federal Clearing House for Labor. President William C. Brown of the New York Central lines will take advantage of the opportunity to make an important utterance on the railroad rate question. Austen G. Fox will speak on the relation of the lawyer to his client, as that affects the public welfare. Commander Robert E. Peary will also be a guest of the society.

J. W. Greene of the Hotel Endicott is the treasurer of the society, who is apportioning seats for the dinner.

SHOP EARLY FOR CHRISTMAS.

League Sends Out Appeal to Buyers to Spare Overworked Girl Clerks.

The Consumers' League of New Jersey, a Jersey City organization which looks after the welfare of many of the Jersey girls employed in this city, has issued an appeal to the public to do Christmas shopping this year earlier than ever. The league has started a slogan on the Jersey side of the Hudson, "Shop early; early in the day; early in the month."

The league tells what risks many of the Jersey City girls run on going home late in the night after remaining in the New York stores until nearly midnight to wait on Christmas shoppers.

"Last year," says the league's appeal, "late shopping meant to one young girl, barely 17, the terror of walking home alone nine blocks in one of the most dangerous districts in New Jersey, under three railroad trestles between 12 P. M. and 1 A. M. for two weeks before Christmas. To another young girl it meant, afterward, three months of sickness, of doctor's bills and no salary, all the result of standing on her feet more than fourteen hours a day for fourteen days, waiting on a never-ending stream of tired, nervous, rushed Christmas shoppers.

"These are only two cases in thousands. For thousands of saleswomen, cash-children, wrappers, delivery boys and messengers Christmas means only fourteen to sixteen hours per day of unceasing labor, rushed meals, utter exhaustion, joylessness, suffering and sickness."

The appeal is sent out by Miss Alice Jaynes, Secretary of the league at 174 Grand Street, Jersey City.

WINNERS GET THEIR TIMES ESSAY MEDALS

GREAT DAY FOR PUPILS

All Join in Cheering the Winners in the Bergen History Contest.

Nothing could have been more enthusiastic than the reception given yesterday by those of the school children of Jersey City to whom THE NEW YORK TIMES presented some of the medals awarded for excellence in composition in connection with the recent 250th anniversary of the founding of Bergen Village. The Principals and teachers of the schools which THE TIMES representatives found it possible to visit, with the Tiffany silver medals and the certificates of merit for the winners in the essay contest, entered fully into the spirit of the occasion, and besides assembling all the pupils at their respective schools to witness the ceremonies, helped out by treating THE TIMES's emissaries to choruses in which, at each school, about five hundred pupils joined.

Time of study permitted of visits to four of the schools in the lower section of Jersey City. At each there were singing by the little ones and a pleasant little address by Col. James Molony of THE NEW YORK TIMES staff, and by the Principals. Col. Molony varied his remarks at each of the schools, but in all he urged upon the pupils the idea of persevering in effort, till the end is attained if it be attainable, and of disregarding the failures that come all too often even to the most courageous, energetic, and patient of workers.

At Public School 1, in York Street, that from which the late Dr. Linsley departed five years ago, after fifty-six years of educational service in Jersey City, Dr. Henry Snyder, the Superintendent of the City Schools, participated in the exercises. He said among other things that a failure is not to be deplored so much as lowness of aim, and urged the children to look high and be ambitious for the best attainable.

The schools visited yesterday were, as stated, No. 1, of which P. S. Hulsizer is principal; No. 4, in Eighth Street, of which James T. Mackay is principal; No. 5, in Bay Street, whose principal is W. J. Tuers, and No. 21, in Twelfth Street, William A. Messler, principal. The teachers and principals at Nos. 5 and 21 were inclined to apologize for their shabby school buildings, and told THE TIMES visitor of the beautiful new school in Seventh Street, in which they hope to be located within the next few days. Dr. Snyder, indeed, suggested that the presentation of the medals be delayed till the removal had been accomplished, but as Col. Molony said, the bright faces of the children were ample compensation for the smoky old classrooms in which they were gathered.

School No. 1 was reached just about the morning assembly hour, and pleasant expectations beamed from the faces of all the children as they came marching to a piano accompaniment. Led by Principal Hulsizer, they sang the song "My Jersey Land" to the air of the famous Southern song "Maryland, My Maryland," which all the assembled schools had rendered in the anniversary exercises in Bergen Square while the fête was on. The medals and diplomas were left with Mr. Hulsizer for distribution in the classrooms. In the other schools, however, the blushing little girls and the bashful boys who had won them received them, with a pleasant little personal congratulation from THE TIMES representatives.

Schools 4 and 21 are old style schools, and the throwing back of the sliding doors between the class rooms at bell signals brought the whole school before the visitors' eyes. School 5 was reached at a study period, and Mrs. Carswell rang the bell that called them in from all the surrounding classrooms.

"I know you were all glad to hear that bell ring," said Principal Tuers when they had been seated. "You have been looking forward to the occasion."

The children in School 21 received Principal Messler's announcement that the medal bearers had come with a round of cheers.

"Who in this room," said the Principal, when silence came at last, "can tell what THE NEW YORK TIMES is?"

"A great New York newspaper," came in chorus from 500 throats. At that school little Miss Feldmann, one of the prize winners, played the piano accompaniments for the school's songs.

THE TIMES's representatives left School 21 just about the dismissal hour. The released children, who crowded the streets, recognized them, and saluted them with round after round of cheers.

To-day the schools in the Hudson City section of the city—or as many of them as time will permit—will be visited by the medal bearers.

Autoist Charged with Girl's Death.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 29.—John C. Jefferds, Jr., son of a well-known Worcester merchant, was arrested on a charge of manslaughter to-day, after an inquest into the death of Miss Emma St. Martin of Leicester, who was run down by an automobile driven by him on Nov. 19, and died of her injuries.

FRANCHISE TAX UPSET.

Interborough Wins in Court of Appeals—New Assessment Ordered.

ALBANY, Nov. 29.—The Court of Appeals to-day set aside the State's assessment for franchise taxes against the Interborough Rapid Transit Company for the three years ending June 30, 1909, and ordered State Controller Williams to make a new assessment.

The tax levied originally was for $914,468. The company contended that this tax should be reduced by an amount measured by the earnings derived from the operation of the Subway railroad, on the ground that the Interborough's interest in the Subway is exempt from taxation under the rapid transit law.

Judge Hiscock, writing the opinion of the court, says the tax law applicable to this case is somewhat ambiguous, and concludes:

"It does not seem to us that because of its operation of an elevated railroad the company should be assessed for dividends declared upon its capital invested in the Subway roads. We see no reason to doubt that the provisions of the tax law are broad enough to provide for a franchise tax against the company in respect to its equipment, maintenance, and operation of the Subway roads."

NEGRO SHOOTS FIVE.

Kills Woman at Her Door and Wounds Four Others—Escapes to Woods.

Special to The New York Times.

WAVERLY, Va., Nov. 29.—Mack Neal, colored, known as a bad negro, shot and instantly killed Mrs. Annie Johnson, seriously wounded two colored people, a man and a woman, and after spending the night in the woods, shot two sons of Walter Jackson, colored, badly wounding them in the legs, and made his escape.

Last night Neal went to the home of Mrs. Johnson, and after knocking at the door, drew a big Colt revolver. When she opened the door, he fired point blank at her, and she fell dead. Two negroes ran to her assistance and were in turn seriously shot. Neal then fled followed by a crowd which had gather at the sound of the reports. He escaped to the surrounding woods and search for him was continued unsuccessfully throughout the night.

The two colored boys who were going to work through the woods at an early hour to-day, were fired on by a negro, afterwards said by them to be Neal, from behind the bushes.

ISAAC STERN RETIRES.

Louis Stern Buys His Great Dry Goods Interest and May Sell Some Stock.

Announcement was made yesterday that Isaac Stern has retired from the firm of Stern Brothers, his interest being acquired by Louis Stern, who now becomes the sole proprietor of the business of Stern Brothers.

The business was incorporated about a year ago with $10,500,000 capital, of which $3,000,000 is preferred stock, which may later be offered to the public.

The firm of Stern Brothers was established by Louis and Isaaac Stern in 1867, in Sixth Avenue, between Twenty-second and Twenty-third Streets, and in 1878 was transferred to its present location in Twenty-third Street. The new addition in Twenty-second Street will be completed in a few days and added to the present establishment, which will make it one of the largest strictly dry goods establishments in the United States.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 29.—Stern Brothers of New York certified to the Secretary of State to-day that they have increased their capital stock from $7,500,000 to $10,500,000. The certificate is signed by Isaac Stern, President, and Louis Stern, Secretary.

DOUBTS SOLID AUTO FUEL.

Standard Oil Chemist Sceptical About a Reported Roumanian Discovery.

Whatever visions of automobiles without carbureters, without smoke, smell, and a great many other nuisances, which may have been raised yesterday for automobilists on reading the report cabled from London that a certain Roumanian engineer, M. Constantinescu, had found a successful form of solid petrol for automobile use, were blurred a short while later by George E. Saybolt, chemist for the Standard Oil Company.

Mr. Saybolt was immensely interested when informed that his Roumanian confrère had found a means of substituting solid petroleum for gasoline in running automobiles. He sent at once for a paper containing the cable dispatch and read it with increasing interest. When he had finished he said to a TIMES reporter:

"Don't you take it too seriously. This solid petrol won't do the work. In order to solidify petroleum it is necessary to combine with it a very large proportion of uninflammable material. The result is that when the substance burns there is left an almost unmanageable quantity of residue. That would make it impracticable for use in automobiles."

Summing up Mr. Saybolt said the idea was all right, except for the rather important fact that it didn't have enough legs to stand on. It was like a great many other schemes for the use of solid petrol, it wouldn't make good.

MAYOR AND M'ADOO TALK OVER SUBWAYS

McAdoo Proposal Looks Right for Brooklyn, Mayor Says, but Won't Make Up Mind Yet.

HEARING ON LOCAL SERVICE

Washington Heights Taxpayers Will Be There to Register Complaints Against the Interborough.

William G. McAdoo, who has proposed to operate the triborough subway with certain modifications, and is now preparing a supplementary proposal covering the operation of the Fourth Avenue, Brooklyn, subway and the Bronx extensions of the triborough, had a talk with Mayor Gaynor last yesterday afternoon, going over the details of his plan. Mr. McAdoo expects to see Chairman Willcox this morning.

Mr. McAdoo would not discuss his visit to the Mayor. The Mayor said it related to the subway situation in general. He had a map of the McAdoo proposal on his desk as he talked with reporters, and remarked, as he followed the course of the McAdoo offer for Brooklyn with his pencil, that it seemed to give Brooklyn about all the subway development it had asked for. The Mayor was asked what conclusion, if any, he had formed as the result of the talk, and he replied that he did not propose to make up his mind definitely until the last gun had been fired.

The Public Service Commission is anxious to get Mr. McAdoo's amended proposition in its hands, or at least to get a definite idea of its terms so that some of the contracts for the triborough route can be sent over to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. There are several sections of the triborough, such, for instance, as the section of the Broadway-Lexington Avenue line from Forty-second Street north up Lexington Avenue to the Harlem River, the contracts for which could be let according to the plans adopted by the commission, without waiting for a definite decision on the McAdoo offer to operate a modified triborough, as the modifications suggested by Mr. McAdoo do not affect such sections.

When any triborough contracts which may include the Lexington Avenue section go to the Board of Estimate, the issue will be joined on the whole question of the construction of the triborough route with city credit, inasmuch as this Lexington Avenue section has also been demanded by the Interborough, and is understood to be included in the Interborough plans now in process of preparation for submission to the Public Service Commission.

There is reason to believe that the Public Service Commission, which is committed to the triborough, is anxious to force the issue just as soon as possible, and that the members of the Board of Estimate who believe that the city should build the triborough on its own credit, and the Interborough construct its extensions on its own credit, share in the desire to have the controversy brought to a head. President Mitchel of the Board of Aldermen, who, with Controller Prendergast, is heading the support of the triborough in the Board of Estimate, had a long conference with Chairman Willcox yesterday.

Mr. McAdoo, in addition to seeking Mr. Willcox to-day, will make a trip with President Steers of the Borough of Brooklyn and several Brooklyn men who are working for the triborough route, over the extensions that have been laid out, namely, the Fourth Avenue subway, with its extensions to Coney Island and Fort Hamilton, and the Lafayette Avenue and Broadway-Williamsburg extensions.

Chairman Willcox also received yesterday a visit from a delegation representing various labor unions, who wanted to know what the prospects were for getting work on the new subways started. The Chairman assured the delegation that the commission was endeavoring to get the contracts ready for presentation to the Board of Estimate at the earliest possible moment.

There will be a hearing this afternoon before the commission on the subject of extending the local service in the Broadway branch of the Interborough Subway as far north as Dyckman Street. It is anticipated that a lively session will ensue, for the Washington Heights Taxpayers' Association is up in arms against present service conditions on the Broadway branch above Ninety-sixth Street, and will send a large delegation to the hearing.

The Mary Powell to Be Retired.

Special to The New York Times.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 29.—After a half century of continuous service the passenger steamer Mary Powell will be withdrawn from its route between Kingston and New York by the Hudson River Day Line at the close of next season, and the fiftieth anniversary of its service will be fittingly celebrated. The Powell, which for years was the fastest passenger steamer in the world, has been almost entirely rebuilt in recent years.

BLIND TO HAVE A FAIR.

Have Made Many Pretty Things for Sale in Their "Lighthouse."

Those interested in the work of the blind and those who should be interested are invited to a reception to be held at the Lighthouse for the Blind, 118 East Fifty-ninth Street, opening this afternoon and to be continued to-morrow afternoon and evening. The blind who have found "light" in paying handiwork will be seen at the Lighthouse doing various kinds of work, weaving rugs, scarfs, and pretty handbags on looms they have set up themselves. There will be blind broommakers and other artisans; a blind stenographer will write out on the typewriter a letter dictated to her; there will be exhibitions of wireless telegraphy given by the blind, and there will be many pretty things for sale, all made without the use of eyes.

Among these there are rugs hand woven which range in price from $1.50 to $5, and cushions of which they make a specialty at the Lighthouse, made of Indian hemp, rope material without the twist, one side in different pretty colors, and the other of burlap. They are durable cushions, most attractive for the bungalow, camp, and for hammock cushions. The scarfs made of natural color linens, with colored border designs, cost from $2.50 to $4, and are beautiful and desirable Christmas gifts. Their only failing is that they will never wear out. Tea trays of basket work with the centre glass over pretty cretonnes are $3.50; there are the pretty electric light bulb covers made of cut beads of any color desired for $1 each; scrap baskets, $1.50 to $3, and many other smaller articles at low prices.

There are many things for the use of the blind for sale—their checker boards, one set of men round and the others square; a chess board and men, and one of the newest things is the picture puzzles, which are put together in little wooden trays, and which have the design raised. These cost from 50 cents to $1.50. There will be a tea and coffee room. The invitations are issued by the New York Association for the Blind, Mr. John H. Finley President and Miss Winifred Holt Secretary. Miss Helen Keller is one of the Vice Presidents.

Mrs. Leslie Carter is nothing if not ambitious. Having apparently run the gamut of all the emotions possible to any one woman in the same play, she must needs act two now to satisfy the craving for display of energy, fire, passion, anger, grief, and further expression of moods more gentle. In other words, Mrs. Carter has found in "Two Women" a play which provides her with such opportunities as she probably likes best and which, also, the audiences that admire her undoubtedly prefer. As a result, her present engagement at the Lyric, begun last evening under auspicious circumstances, is likely to prove profitable.

Mr. Rupert Hughes is credited with the authorship of the play for which the basis is said to have been found in a drama by one T. Cicconi. The foreign origin of the original is further attested in a superabundance of text which while enabling Mrs. Carter from time to time to do those things she does best—and to do them very well indeed—is at the same time something of a handicap since it occasions repetitions and delay. Basically the play contains an interesting enough idea, though it is treated here in a purely artificial way—in fact, the smell of the theatre is all about it. But much might have been done in preparation to improve it as a story told in action. As it stands, however, it is in its entirety a moderately interesting if highly colored tale, with the occasional relief of flamboyant incident to add to its effect. Probability in these machine made plays is the last thing for which one asks.

Mrs. Carter's part in the affair is to represent successively a woman all purity and gentleness and sweetness, and subsequently the soiled dove of the Parisian fast life. The actress appears in the beginning as a little provincial seamstress who has met and loved a poor, struggling artist, married and suffered and struggled with him, and who, after narrating a wonderful dream in which she presumably stood at the gates of heaven, refused to enter paradise upon hearing the voice of her heart-broken husband calling to her from the distance. Die, however, she does, the close of the act showing the husband frantic with grief and utterly inconsolable.

Such indeed his state remains, though curiosity brings him to the Bal Tabarin in Paris to look at a woman who has been described as the very image of his dead wife. And there he sees Jeanine Bartet, a dancer and cocotte, a woman whose name is on every vile tongue in Paris.

As may be imagined this scene provides the opportunity for an exhibition of femininity and furbelows, the latter very often of an abreviated sort. There is a succession of incidents designed to show to the uninitiated what that gay Paris is like. And the scene is handled with plenty of noise and vivacity—gay in color, well sustained in its suggestion of varied movement, and with the contrasts which come from the presence of the dancer's rather festive lord, and the gloomy, depressed young artist, who cannot forget, but who—peculiarly enough—is willing to invite this soiled woman to his studio to take the place as model that he may finish a portrait of his lamented wife.

The climax of the scene showing Jeanine, discarded, or discarding, her lover, and now without a place to lay her head, is amusingly and effectively contrived. The lights are out, the guests departed, and the woman in her jewels and finery, yet homeless and an outcast, makes her bed on one of the tables as her former lover staggers by on his way into the street. Just why she should not have immediately secured more comfortable lodging on the value of any one of the jewels the unsophisticated does not ask—at the moment. It is enough to see Mrs. Carter in picturesqueness of attire and pose. And the curtain brings applause in plenty.

Once again the pure air of the country is the potent moral agent. Jeanine, from being a woman who has never gone to bed until the sun has risen, now rises in time to milk the cow and delight in bucolic pastimes, to buy neckties and hose for the painter—and she shows execrable taste. For one who dresses well herself she seems to have remarkably flamboyant ideas of men's attire. But thus the comic moment is assured.

Meanwhile the spark of love is kindled, and she begs the artist to link his fate with hers. But, though inclined to be generous, he reverts to his love for the dead wife, tells her that to him she is only a model, and sees her mad with jealousy about to knife the canvas which he treasures. Then, ready to take up her old life if need be, she goes back to Paris, subsequently repents, and when her lover comes to see her, holds him off, threatening to drink poison if he touches her. This moment Mrs. Carter handles most powerfully.

Ultimately she is rewarded with the knowledge that the painter has since come to love her. They agree to go away together, and there is then, as may be expected, the intrusion of the lover, with a quarrel between the two men, a duel, and an hour of agony for the woman, who finds the artist unwilling to believe that she has been faithful to her better self—and him.

All these things, as may be imagined, provide Mrs. Carter with the means to such self-expression in acting as she apparently likes best. She can be gentle at times as the cooing dove, patient and pathetic by turns, and then a raging torrent. She is best, perhaps, in the long reverberating passages when words pour from her lips and when in turn she cajoles, cries, commands, threatens, or pleads in turn. But one such passage is enough. And in such a scene of denunciation as the one which brings the fourth act to a close she reaches her supreme power—a high, sure note, pulsating with a suggestion of genuine passion, blending real sobs and tears, and extremely disturbing to the very sensitive and susceptible. Incidentally, in the course of the play, Mrs. Carter reveals some remarkably beautiful frocks and frills, these being an additional lure presumably for masculinity on the scene, and a positive one for femininity on the other side of the footlights.

In the actress's support Mr. Robert Warwick plays the young artist with dignity and enough of voluble and impassioned distress in the later scenes, while Harrison Hunter and Brandon Hurst contribute the next most important figures. Mr. Arthur Lawrence and Miss Helen Tracy play slight rôles with their familiar skill, a French maid is genuinely portrayed by Mlle. Andree Corday, and a neat bit is contributed by Lillian Tracy. There are also various ladies more or less beautiful who display more or less in the way of feminine charms and clothes—and at least one of them whose corsage needs prompt amendment.

TIRE OF BACKING ORCHESTRA

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Nov. 29.—Those backing the Pittsburg Symphony Orchestra have tired of the burden, and it is announced to-day officially that unless musical Pittsburg wakes up and loosens up her pursestrings the coming two concerts of the orchestra will be the last.

Edward Jenkins, a Pittsburg millionaire, who has played the "angel" part this season with the orchestra, has decided that he cannot go further. Already he is $14,000 behind, and he has figured that at the rate the Pittsburg concerts are now supported he would be at least $47,000 more behind at the close of the season. So Mr. Jenkins has decided, he says, that he has had enough.

The Executive Committee to-day gave out a statement that Pittsburg evidently did not want an orchestra, and that the Symphony Orchestra would pass out of existence with the next concerts unless there were many guarantees in the next few days.

The recent visit of Victor Herbert to Pittsburg, where he was the guest of rich music lovers, has, according to stories from all musical centres to-night, resulted in the formation of plans for giving Pittsburg an orchestra second to none in the country, and which will be endowed. There have for years been at least two bitter factions in orchestra work here, but the Herbert followers appear now to be in command.

FINED ON ANCIENT ORDINANCE

Academy of Music Manager Displayed Poster Depicting a Crime.

Richard Morris, manager of the Academy of Music, was fined $10 in the Yorkville Court yesterday morning for the violation of an ancient ordinance, which prohibits exposing posters displaying any act which could be classed as criminal. The fine was paid by Morris under protest, and his counsel, Max Berg, gave notice that he would appeal the case to the higher court.

Morris was served with a summons for his appearance in the Yorkville Court, before Magistrate Krotel, by Detective Buckridge of the Chief Inspector's staff, on Friday last, after Deputy Commissioner Driscoll had dug up the ordinance, rusty with age. The poster depicted a woman in the act of stabbing a man. It was a bill of the play "Siberia," which was playing at the Academy.

Mr. Berg called the attention of the court to posters of Shakespearean plays where murders and other crimes were depicted, and said that the ordinance had never been enforced.

ELECTRA IN ENGLISH BY COBURN PLAYERS

Fine Performance of Murray's Translation of the Tragedy of Euripides at Hudson Theatre.

PLAYERS READ VERSES WELL

ELECTRA OF EURIPIDES. Translated into English Rhyming Verse by Gilbert Murray. Hudson Theatre.

Clytemnestra	Miss Charlotte Lambert
Electra	Mrs. Coburn
Orestes	Mr. Coburn
A Peasant	J. Malcolm Dunn
An Old Man	Burr Caruth
Pylades	David Kirkland
Messenger	John E. Kellerd
An Attendant	Leopold Lane
Castor	Howard Kyle
Polydeuces	A. C. Carvel
Leader of Chorus	Miss Dorothy Turner
Second Leader of Chorus	Miss Amelia Barleon
An Argive Woman	Miss Grace Guernsey
Another Woman	Miss Frederica Going

In bringing to the stage Prof. Gilbert Murray's exquisite translation of the "Electra" of Euripides the Coburn players seen yesterday at the Hudson Theatre perform a useful service. And especially since they give a production of the tragedy which at no points offends good taste.

It is inevitable that in the modern representation of a Greek play something of the qualities which appealed to the ancients must be lost, but Euripides, the most modern of the classic authors, loses least, perhaps, in such transition. Such a production as this has interests in fact besides the purely literary ones. To begin with the old story of Orestes's return and the revenge which he and his sister accomplish upon the murderers of their father is in itself so powerful and moving that the bare recital of it commands attention. But the Euripidean tragedy has in it more of what we now term situations than many of the Greek plays, and in consequence a series of genuinely moving moments to add to its suspensive whole.

In the present representation, very colorful in costume and groupings, with pictures that now and then suggest the plastic grace of figures on a Greek frieze, the principal rôles are rather well developed. The highest histrionic genius would be required to make them completely satisfying, of course. But the Electra and Orestes, as Mr. and Mrs. Coburn act them, are very well done indeed. The players give the verse a snare of its natural sonority and suggest with very fair effect the tense emotionalism required.

The rôle of the messenger, with its very showy declamation of the story of Aegisthus's death, was beautifully given by John E. Kellard.

J. Malcolm Dunn, Howard Kyle, and David Kirkland also contribute values to the general performance. The play was admirably staged by Albert Lang.

Frohman to Produce "Fair Risette."

Charles Frohman announced yesterday that he has obtained the American rights to "Fair Risette," an operetta in two acts by Leo Fall, that was produced in Vienna last Saturday night. Mr. Frohman's contract calls for the purchase of the scenery and costumes as well as the rights to the piece. Leo Fall is the author of "The Dollar Princess" and of "The Girl in the Train."

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Pauline Chase will sail for England on the Mauretania to-day to begin rehearsals of "Peter Pan," in which she is to appear, as usual, during the Christmas holidays.

Rehearsals will begin to-day for "The Great Name," in which Henry Kolker is to be starred under the direction of Henry W. Savage. The play will open at Hartford, Conn., on Christmas Day.

Augustus Pitou, manager of Chauncey Olcott, will leave to-day for his Winter home at Hobe Sound, Fla. He will return to New York in April to prepare for Mr. Olcott's Spring tour.

The openings of "The Aviator," with Wallace Eddinger, at the Astor Theatre, and of Albert Chevalier in "Daddy Dufard," at the Hackett Theater, have both been postponed from Monday until Tuesday of next week.

Rehearsals of Eugene Walter's play, "Homeward Bound," the first of his three new American plays, will begin to-morrow under the direction of Charles Dillingham. It will be produced in Cleveland, Ohio, during the holidays. Other productions soon to be made by Mr. Dillingham are a new play by David Higgins and another by Anne Caldwell.

A one-act version of Jesse Lynch Williams's newspaper story, "The Stolen Story," will be presented at the American Music Hall next week under the direction of Arnold Daly. This story, in the form of a three-act play, was given several years ago, and the vaudeville sketch consists of the third act of this play.

Several hundred Scottish Rite Masons will give a theatre party at the Circle Theatre next Monday night in honor of Hollis E. Cooley, the house manager. This will also be the occasion of the 100th performance of Jules Eckert Goodman's play "Mother," and there will be souvenirs for the event.

Christie MacDonald and her company in "The Spring Maid" will leave for Waterbury, Conn., to-day for the first performance of the operetta prior to opening at the Tremont Street Theatre, Boston, next Monday.

MAN GETTING EFFEMINATE,

But Women Are Growing, Mrs. Finch Says, Pointing to Their Shoes.

In an address yesterday before the Woman Suffrage Association of Yonkers Mrs. Jessica G. Finch of this city declared that woman's age is at hand, and that while women are developing mentally and physically men as a rule are becoming more effeminate.

The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Peter Fletcher, 615 Palisade Avenue. Mrs. Finch was introduced by Mrs. Arthur L. Livermore, President of the Yonkers Woman's Suffrage Association. She said in part:

"This is rapidly becoming a woman's age. Women are attaining the highest measure of success in all spheres of endeavor. They have shown that when the door of opportunity is open to them they can make good. Women are developing mentally and physically, while the men are becoming effeminate."

Mrs. Finch told of a visit she had made to a girls' gymnasium, the head instructor of which informed her that the sizes of the shoes worn by the girls were in most cases Nos. 5 and 6. As it was the duty of the instructor to order the shoes for the girls, she knew whereof she spoke. Years ago, Mrs. Finch added, the average size of the shoes worn by girls of a similar age was No. 3 or 4. The speaker related other facts tending to show how young women have developed physically in recent years. She said that the interest in outdoor sports which most girls have been taking in the past decade has had much to do with their physical improvement.

Mrs. Finch stated that as a result of years' close observation she is convinced that the lower class of women are more intelligent than the lower class of men, and would, she was sure, cast their ballots with greater wisdom than the men, if allowed to vote.

On the other hand, she continued, she found, as a rule, that in the great middle class the men are intellectually superior to the women. As for the upper classes, she found that the men and women were about equal mentally. In concluding, Mrs. Finch combatted the idea that women, on receiving the ballot, would use it as a toy or a novelty and discard it after having voted at one or two elections. She was sure, she said, that women who had worked in factories, especially, will continue to vote at every election, and that in spite of the fact that they may leave the factories to become married.

"BISHOP" VANDERBILT AWAY.

Process Servers Looking for Her and Husband Says She's in Europe.

Through the efforts of private detectives to serve a summons on Mrs. May S. Scannell-Pepper-Vanderbilt, the once prominent "Bishop" of a spiritualistic cult in Brooklyn, it became known yesterday that she has been absent from her home at 585 St. Mark's Avenue since last July. Edward Ward Vanderbilt, her husband, says she has gone away for her health.

Miss Minerva, Vanderbilt's daughter, sought relief in the courts when he transferred his beautiful home in St. Mark's Avenue to the "Bishop." The courts finally adjudged him competent to manage his own affairs.

Now Miss Vanderbilt wants to collect certain fees which Edward Perles of 320 Broadway, Manhattan, who is her lawyer, finds are due her. The fees are said to amount to $5,000, and to get this money an action has been brought against the real property of Edward Ward Vanderbilt and his wife. Vanderbilt has been served with the papers in the suit, but his wife has not been located by the process servers.

STEEL MEN OPPOSED TO TARIFF CHANGING

FEARS INDUSTRIAL UNREST

Nor Will He Admit That a Reduction in Duties Would Decrease the Cost of Living.

Opposition on the part of the steel and iron interests to any downward revision, at present, of the tariff schedules affecting the industry has been voiced in a letter to President Taft by James M. Swank, Vice President and General Manager of the American Iron and Steel Association, whose monthly bulletin for more than a generation has been the organ of the trade. The letter, which is printed in the December issue of the bulletin, issued yesterday, points to the disturbance in the trade produced by the panic of 1907, which, it holds, was kept alive by the later tariff unsettlement, and deprecates any further stirring up of the situation. He says in part:

> Since the panic of October, 1907, three years ago, this country has passed through a turmoil of excitement, political, industrial, and financial, such as it has seldom experienced in time of peace.
> Contributing to the unrest and discontent of the past three years was the revision of the tariff by the present Congress. Granting, but not conceding, that there has existed a popular demand for this revision which could not be ignored, surely there exists no good reason why another tariff revision should be attempted, as is now proposed, before the tariff act of 1909 is a year and a half old.
> We know of no good reason why this country should now be disturbed by a fresh tariff agitation. The new tariff, with the aid of the corporation tax, of which it forms a part, produces sufficient revenue to meet the wants of the Government if these wants be kept within reasonable bounds. There is therefore no question of revenue involved in the proposition to have another tariff revision.

The Cost of Living.

There might be some reason for the revival of tariff agitation if it were reasonably certain that a new tariff would result in a reduction in the cost of the necessaries of life, but this result cannot be inferred from a study of the causes of high prices which are now known. Furthermore, the prices of some necessaries are now receding. With regard especially to the prices of manufactured products it can be said with entire truthfulness that few of these which enter into general consumption are now higher in price than they have been for many years, while it is equally true that the general advance in the wages of workingmen and the increased prosperity of the farmers have more than kept pace with the increased cost of these manufactured goods; indeed, one cause of their increased cost is the increase that has taken place in wages.

But some of our people are injuriously affected to-day by the insufficient protection afforded by the tariff of 1909 in certain schedules, resulting in either a diminished demand for labor, which means a diminution of wages and a consequent decrease in their purchasing power, or in a checking of manufacturing enterprise, which means a locking up of capital. If a large steel plant is operated only four days out of six, or even five days out of six, the workmen in that plant necessarily lose a proportionate part of their wages. Many of our manufacturing establishments are now running on short time or with reduced capacity.

Points to Iron Imports.

Mr. Swank here takes up the large importation of foreign manufactured goods, drawing a comparison between the conditions under the old Dingley tariff and those existing to-day under the Payne tariff. On this point he says:

> In the fiscal year 1908, ended with June 30, we imported manufactures of iron and steel amounting to $27,607,909; in the fiscal year 1909 they amounted to $22,439,787, and in the fiscal year 1910 they amounted to $38,502,457. Admitting that some of these imported iron and steel products could not have been obtained at home, the great bulk of them could have been made here if higher duties had prevailed. In the fiscal year 1908 our imports of manufactures of wool amounted to $19,387,978, in the fiscal year of 1909 they amounted to $18,102,461, and in the fiscal year 1910 they amounted to $23,532,175. In the fiscal year 1908 our imports of manufactures of cotton amounted to $68,379,781; in the fiscal year 1909 they amounted to $62,010,286, and in the fiscal year 1910 they amounted to $66,473,143.
> These official Government statistics are really startling. They show conclusively that duties in the Dingley tariff permitted large importations of manufactured products, and that the Payne tariff still permits these importations to be made. We have selected for illustration the three schedules of both tariffs against which there has been the loudest demand for a downward reduction of duties. If further tariff revision should now take place the duties in these schedules would undoubtedly be reduced, with the inevitable result of increased importations.

The official views of the American Iron and Steel Association expressed in Mr. Swank's letter to the President are not entirely in line with the attitude of the largest steel interests, notably the United States Steel Corporation, which accepted the Payne-Aldrich tariff with equanimity. During the past year the United States Steel Corporation has reported more encouraging returns from its export trade than from any other branch of its business.

INDICT MAYOR'S ASSAILANT.

Gallagher Will Only Be Arraigned at Present for Shooting Edwards.

James Gallagher, who shot Mayor Gaynor on Aug. 9 last, will to-day be in the Hudson County Court House in Jersey City to answer to indictments for assaulting with intent to kill Commissioner Edwards of the Street Cleaning Department and for carrying concealed weapons. He will not be put on trial for the present for shooting Mayor Gaynor.

The indictments for the charges on which he will plead to-day were handed up yesterday in the Court of Common Pleas in Jersey City to Judge John A. Blair, together with an indictment for assault with intent to kill Mayor Gaynor. Prosecutor Garven has decided not to proceed with the charge concerning Mayor Gaynor for the present. His reason for delaying this trial is that he has been advised by high legal authority that if Gallagher was now indicted for assault with intent to kill Mayor Gaynor and the Mayor chanced, after all, to die as the result of his wound, it would be impossible to reindict Gallagher for murder.

Mr. Garven has no reason, it was explained last night, to suppose that anything untoward is likely to happen to the Mayor, and has received from his physician, Dr. Samuel Prentice, a certificate that he is entirely out of danger. But as the law does not compel the trial to be begun till a year and a day after the shooting, the Prosecutor has decided that he had better wait a little longer.

Mr. Garven will apply to-day for a struck jury, and it is probable that the formalities involved cannot be fulfilled so as to have the trial begin before Dec. 29. Gallagher will be represented by Alexander Simpson and Samuel Jacktoff and the State by Mr. Garven and George Vickers.

GIRL RUNS SHIP'S WIRELESS.

Miss Packer to Make a Test Trip on a Clyde Liner.

The chief object of interest to the 300 first cabin passengers who sailed yesterday on the Clyde liner Mohawk for Jacksonville was a young woman wearing a blue serge uniform with short skirt and navy cap, who stood on the promenade deck forward on the starboard side waiting for the gangway to be taken down. She was the last improvement in wireless telegraphy, Capt. Kemble said—a woman operator.

Miss Graynella Packer of Jacksonville will have charge of the Mohawk's wireless room on the trip to Jacksonville and back. She is the first woman to take this post on board ship, coastwise or otherwise. If the experiment proves a success the company will put women on their other vessels, the officials said yesterday.

LAWYER'S TESTIMONY WRONG

Osborne Hastens to Correct His Story in Yeandle Bribery Trial.

The trial of George W. Yeandle, the juror in the trial of Edward T. Rosenheimer, who was arrested on a charge of soliciting a bribe, was continued yesterday before Justice Blanchard in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court. Dagobert Timendorfer, Yeandle's former friend and the co-defendant, was again called to the stand.

Timendorfer was the first witness called on Monday, and frankly told about his part in the transaction. On cross-examination yesterday he again told of seeing J. W. Osborne, Rosenheimer's chief counsel, and telling him there was a juror sitting in the Rosenheimer trial who for $3,000 would hang the jury and obtain an acquittal. He did admit, however, that Yeandle had said when arrested in his company: "This is all a mystery to me. I never saw you before," meaning George A. Knobloch, one of Mr. Osborne's assistants, who handed $500 in marked bills to Timendorfer.

Mr. Osborne followed Timendorfer on the stand. He told of meeting Timendorfer at the Sherman Square Hotel and making arrangements to obtain the help of Yeandle, whose name he said was not mentioned, Timendorfer referring to him all through the proceedings as "Juror No. 7." He then told of telephoning to Justice O'Gorman and District Attorney Whitman and telling them about his talk with Timendorfer, and how they had met at District Attorney Whitman's apartments in the Hotel Iroquois and arranged a trap for Timendorfer and Yeandle. Mr. Osborne said he had handed the marked money to two detectives so that they could hand it to Timendorfer the next day. He then left the stand, and was followed by Mr. Knobloch.

Mr. Knobloch had hardly begun to give his testimony when Mr. Osborne came rushing back into the courtroom and said a few words to Clark L. Jordon, Yeandle's lawyer, and Assistant District Attorney Maynard, who is prosecuting the case. After a short consultation Mr. Osborne walked to the witness stand, from which Mr. Knobloch had been recalled, and smilingly announced that he wished to change his testimony, as it had not been correct the first time. He was allowed to do this, and said that he had made a mistake when he said he had given the marked money to the detectives, saying he had given it to Mr. Knobloch in Healey's instead.

Mr. Knobloch was then recalled, and told about handing the money to Timendorfer and signaling to the detectives to arrest him and Yeandle, to whom Timendorfer handed the money. He said that Yeandle did not take it when Timendorfer handed it to him, but pushed his hand to one side, saying that he could give it to him at another time.

On cross-examination Mr. Knobloch was asked by Mr. Jordon if it was not a fact that the purpose of himself and Mr. Osborne in trapping Timendorfer and Yeandle was to influence the other jurors in favor of his client. Mr. Knobloch admitted that such was the case, but said that they also wished to uncover a crime.

"ACCIDENT ARTIST" ON TRIAL.

Host of Railroad Witnesses Ready to Testify Against Mrs. Strula.

Mrs. Anna A. Strula, "the banana peel artist," who in the last five years has collected more than $5,000 from various railroad and steamship companies throughout the country, was placed on trial before Judge Rosalsky in General Sessions yesterday charged with having obtained $500 from the New York Central Railroad by false pretenses.

Since the arrest of Mrs. Strula early in November more than seventeen different complaints have been lodged against her in District Attorney Whitman's office. All these are to the effect that she has collected or tried to collect damages for alleged falls from various railroad and steamship companies. In the majority of cases settlements ranging from $50 to $1,000 have been made by the companies complained of. In almost every case the fall has been occasioned by a banana peel.

In General Sessions a few weeks ago the woman pleaded guilty to an indictment charging her with obtaining $500 from the New York Central Railroad. When she was brought in court for sentence, however, she said that she did not believe she was morally guilty, as she had made no demand for money, but that it had been offered to her by the New York Central if she would not press the charge.

Judge Rosalsky allowed her to change her plea to one of not guilty, and District Attorney Whitman set the trial for yesterday.

Assistant District Attorney McCormack said the prosecution would seek to show that the injuries upon which she had based her claim were old and not actually sustained on Oct. 16, the time she alleged.

SALE OF WHISTLER WORKS.

Some Interesting Thackeray Items Also Go with Bentham Library.

The second session of the sale of George Bentham's library, which was held at Anderson's on Tuesday, contained, according to the auctioneers, one of the most remarkable collections of the works of James McNeill Whistler, his letters, association copies, and books relating to him ever offered at auction. The highest price of the day was $200, paid by Mr. Bonner, for a copy of "The Etched Work of Whistler," by Edward G. Kennedy and Royal Cortissoz, the latest publication of the Grolier Club, and one of 402 copies, printed by the De Vinne Press in 1910, on old Stratford paper.

It is considered to be the most exhaustive publication that has appeared on the etched work of Whistler.

There were also some interesting William M. Thackeray items. A copy, supposed to be his, of Vol. XVI. of "The Works of Lord Byron with His Life and Letters," by Thomas Moore, London, 1833, brought only $10. An original drawing by Thackeray, presumed to represent Lord Steyne, and similar to the suppressed woodcut in "Vanity Fair," signed "W. M. T.," and with the eyeglasses, sold for $26; another original drawing of a woman purchasing a piece of cloth, and, at the same time, flirting with the clerk behind the corner, signed "W. M. T.," $25; another original drawing of a dude, in full evening dress, wearing a monocle, signed "W. M T.," and with the eyeglasses, presumed to be one of the characters in the Yellowplush Papers, $25, and a fourth original drawing of a man dressed in flashy apparel, signed "W. M. T.," and with the eyeglasses, $26; a presentation copy from Whistler to Charles E. Holloway of "The Gentle Art of Making Enemies," with autograph inscription and the "butterfly," sold for $45.

FIGHTING HOFFMAN ESTATE.

Connecticut May Sell Property to Collect Inheritance Tax.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 29.—The State of Connecticut has taken unusual action to recover the inheritance tax due from the estate of Jacob Hoffman, a rich brewer of Brooklyn, N. Y., who died five years ago. The trustees never qualified in the local probate district, and the estate never passed through probate here.

The Hoffman estate is located in Waterford, just outside of New London, and includes a fine Summer residence. At the instance of Attorney General Light for the State, Judge Alfred Coit has named Attorney Warren B. Burrows, administrator in this probate district. Appraisers have valued the property at $25,500, and the next step will be an application for an order of sale by the administrator. This probably will be done next Wednesday.

JAPANESE GIVE US A MEMORIAL TABLET

To Commemorate Hudson-Fulton Celebration in Riverside Drive.

CHERRY TREES TO COME

Twenty-One Hundred, Growing in Tokio, to Be Transplanted Here—Tablet Represents Them.

A bronze tablet has been presented to the city by a committee of Japanese residents and probably will be placed on a boulder adjoining Grant's Tomb on Riverside Drive. The formal presentation was made on Monday night by the Japanese committee at a dinner at the Nippon Club to Park Commissioner Stover, representing the city, and Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, as President of the Hudson-Fulton Celebration, in connection with which the gift is made.

At the time of the celebration the Japanese residents proposed to present to the city 2,100 cherry trees from their native land, the number being arrived at by multiplying the 300 years which the celebration commemorated by seven, the fortunate number. When the trees arrived, however, it was discovered that they were infected with a botanical disease and harbored noxious insects, and all of them had to be destroyed. The Japanese decided to replace their gift, and now have under special cultivation in the Royal Botanical Gardens, at Tokio, a number of young cherry trees which will be sent to this country probably in the Spring of 1912, after they have been thoroughly inspected, to make sure that they are entirely free from disease or insects.

As an earnest of the gift, in the meantime, the bronze tablet was wrought in the National Art School of Tokio. It is a fine form of art and displays Grant's Tomb with some of the cherry trees surrounding it. It bears this inscription signalizing the gift of the cherry trees:

> To Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, President, Hudson-Fulton Celebration Commission:
> Dear Sir: Your honorable commission and the Government of your great city having graciously signified to the undersigned committee of Japanese residents their pleasure in permitting us to take part in the momentous Hudson-Fulton Celebration by accepting our offering of 2,100 cherry trees from Japan to be planted along your beautiful and unique Riverside Drive, we beg hereby to tender them to you in the fullest and warmest spirit of affection, gratitude, and good-will.
>
> What the cherry tree is to Japan we would wish it to symbolize to you—the ever-living spirit of the land, bringing with every Spring a world of blossom and joy. Along the banks of the mighty stream whose discoverer and first steam navigator we celebrate to-day, and around the tomb of Gen. Grant, whose memory we of Japan hold dear, may the river of Japanese blooms flow year after year a flowering witness to all time of our affection for New York and the United States.
>
> We thank you and the municipal authorities for the precious privilege of taking this humble part in the great and historic celebration and feelingly subscribe ourselves.
> KOKICHI MIDZUNO,
> JOKICHI TAKAMINE,
> RIOICHIRO ARAI,
> DAIJIRO USHIKUBO,
> KIKUSABURO FUKUI,
> Committee of Japanese Residents of New York.
> Sept. 25, 1909.

Commissioner Stover said last night he expected that after the tablet had been formally passed on by the Municipal Art Commission it would be placed on a boulder near Grant's Tomb, in a similar way to that which commemorates the planting of a tree in the same place by Li Hung Chang. The cherry trees, he hopes, will be planted along Riverside Park between 120th and 129th Streets. A few of the trees may also be placed about the lawns surrounding Grant's Tomb, in accordance with the view of that monument on the tablet.

WORTHEN GETS PROMOTION.

Western Union's New Southern Superintendent Has Risen Rapidly.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 29.—Word was received here to-day that H. C. Worthen, General Inspector in the New York office of Belvidere Brooks, General Manager of the Western Union, has been appointed General Superintendent of the Southern Division to succeed the late B. F. Dillon. The appointment is effective Dec. 1.

Mr. Worthen is a Southerner, and at the age of thirty-four has reached one of the high positions in the telegraph service. He was born in Shelby, N. C., and being left alone by the death of his parents, was raised in the Oxford Orphan Asylum, where he learned telegraphy.

When thirteen years old he started out for himself as an operator on the Seaboard Air Line. In 1898 he joined the Western Union forces as an operator and was stationed in several Eastern cities. His rise was rapid, and in the recent reorganization of the company he assumed a prominent position in the traffic department at New York headquarters.

The position of General Superintendent of the Southern Division is a very responsible one, and takes in a large territory, including all the Southern States and adjoining territory.

GIVES BAIL IN CUSTOMS CASE.

Clarence H. Walters Released Under a $10,000 Bond

Clarence A. Walters of the woolen manufacturing and importing firm of John F. Briggs & Sons of Bradford, England, and 43 East Nineteenth Street, who was arrested on Monday on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the Government in the importation of woolen goods on the basis of undervaluations, was released yesterday in $10,000 bail by United States Commissioner Shields.

Walters is a British subject. He was held for examination Dec. 5.

Dwyer Again Leads Over Fallon.

With three more ballot boxes left to be opened out of forty-four, the suit brought by Joseph P. Fallon to contest the Justiceship of the Eighth Municipal Court District is drawing to a close. Yesterday's recounting ended with Fallon 20 votes in the lead of John J. Dwyer, who was declared elected after the returns in 1909. Dwyer was the Democratic candidate, while Fallon was supported by the Civic Alliance for re-election.

Senator Scott Has Nervous Breakdown

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Both the United States Senators from West Virginia now are on the sick list. Senator Nathan B. Scott was taken ill to-day, suffering from indigestion and a general nervous breakdown. His physicians, however, declared to-night that Senator Scott probably will be able to take his seat when Congress convenes next Monday. Senator Stephen B. Elkins is reported somewhat improved, though still not able to attend the opening of Congress.

LOVE FOR TAFT, NO VOTE.

President Tells of the Non-Political Praise of a Virginian.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—President Taft has been telling a story on himself that came out at Richmond the other day:

"I always enjoy going to Richmond," he said. "They have a way of making you feel perfectly at home. And it is simply because they have the greatest respect for the Presidency and the man who happens for the time being to fill the office. There is not a bit of politics in the reception they give you. I know this absolutely."

He explained that a Democrat sitting next to Major J. C. Hemphill, editor of The Richmond Times-Dispatch, at the Taft luncheon, became enthusiastic about the President.

"Taft is simply a bully fellow," declared the Democrat. "He is the kind of a man you love."

"You bet he is," remarked the Major. "But by the way, are you going to vote for him next time?"

"Vote for him? Vote for him?" exclaimed the astonished luncheon guest. "I'd see him in hell first."

GROWTH OF TWO STATES.

Maryland and Nebraska Gain Over 9 and 11 Per Cent., Respectively.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The population of the State of Maryland is 1,294,450, according to statistics of the thirteenth census made public to-day. This is an increase of 106,406, or 9 per cent., over 1,188,044 in 1900. The increase from 1890 to 1900 was 145,654, or 14 per cent.

The population of the State of Nebraska is 1,192,214, an increase of 125,914, or 11.8 per cent., over 1,066,300 in 1900. The increase from 1890 to 1900 was 7,390, or 0.7 per cent.

The population of Duluth, Minn., is 78,466, an increase of 25,497, or 48.1 per cent., over 52,969 in 1900.

OLD COUNTERFEITS REAPPEAR

Coins and Bills Long Thought Obsolete Turn Up in This City.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Counterfeit coins and bills which the Secret Service long has considered out of circulation lately have been turned into the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue at New York.

F. L. Marshall came to washington today and showed to Chief Wilkie a collection of counterfeits which had been used to pay revenue taxes.

Mrs. McDonald Has the Youth Who Found Them Arrested.

Jeremiah J. Murphy, 18 years old, of 15 Ferry Street, Jersey City, an electrical battery worker at the Pennsylvania Station, was held in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday in $1,500 bail for examination to-day on the charge of grand larceny.

He was arrested on complaint of Mrs. Alexander McDonald of 313 West Eighty-second Street, who formerly owned the Empire City race track. She arrived here from Philadelphia yesterday on the Pennsylvania, and upon leaving a Pullman car forgot her black leather jewel case handbag, which contained a diamond necklace, front piece, rings, and a gold bracelet valued all told at $4,500.

She discovered her loss and hurried back, but the case was not in the car. She reported the loss to the authorities.

Inspector George Spencer of the railroad questioned all employes, and after much questioning, Murphy, who had done some work about the car, it is alleged, turned over about $2,000 worth of jewelry which belonged to Mrs. McDonald, and said the car had been taken to the yards at Sunnyside, L. I.

TAFT CUTS DEEPER INTO ESTIMATES

GOES FULLY INTO DETAILS

First of the Rivers and Harbors Bill to Be Prepared Under New Plan Will Call for $30,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—President Taft to-day informed his Cabinet officers, after scrutinizing the final draft of the estimates of the various Government departments for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1911, that they were not sufficiently reduced in their present form, and that there must be a further and deeper cut in them.

In response to the urgent demands of the President, the heads of the various departments had already restricted their estimates to what they considered rock-bottom figures, but the President pointed out a number of places where he said the pruning knife could be used to advantage.

The President went into the details of each department. He inaugurated last year the policy of giving personal attention to the estimated expenditure of the Government, declaring that the best way to wipe out the deficiency in the Treasury was to reduce the outgo of the public funds. The President believes he has made considerable headway in holding down expenditures for the current year, but he hopes to make a still greater stride toward economy in 1911.

Representative Alexander of New York, Chairman of the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and Gen. Bixby, Chief of Engineers of the Army, and the three District of Columbia Commissioners, participated in the conference, which was of several hours' duration.

At the conclusion of the conference Mr. Alexander announced that the Rivers and Harbors bill to be reported to Congress at the coming session would carry approximately $30,000,000 in appropriations and authorizations.

This is the first bill to be prepared under the plan for an annual River and Harbor bill.

BURST GUN WAS DEFECTIVE.

Fatal Accident at Indian Head Was Due to a Projecting Firing Pin.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—An investigation of the fatal accident at Indian Head, on Oct. 19, during a proving test of a five-inch gun, which cost the lives of four men, has established that the design of the breech mechanism of the gun is faulty. The pattern is now being changed at the Washington Navy Yard. The accident was investigated by a board appointed by the Secretary of the Navy.

The premature discharge of the cartridge case, which blew out the breech plug, the board finds, was due to a projecting firing pin. This firing pin the board considers imperfect, and before the guns are issued the pins will be altered, so that a similar accident cannot happen.

There are only sixteen guns with this type of breech mechanism, fifteen having been proved successfully. Not until the last gun was reached was the imperfection demonstrated. The board relieved the gun crew of all suspicion of carelessness, and said that all precautions had been taken in loading and in handling the ammunition.

SUICIDE ON THIRD ATTEMPT.

Men Suspected of Killing Him Had Twice Stayed His Hand.

What seemed early yesterday morning to be a murder turned out last night, according to the testimony of three men who surrendered to the police, to be merely a successful attempt on the part of a fourth comrade to commit suicide after he had been twice deterred therefrom by them.

The three men, who are held as suspicious persons, are Warren Roach, a foreman, of 459 West Thirty-fifth Street; John Sullivan, a foreman, of 415 West Thirty-fifth Street, and John Johnson, a bricklayer, of 328 West Thirty-first Street. They went to the home of Detective Forbes, whom they knew, last night and told him of the case. With John Koerner of 416 West Twenty-ninth Street, they said, they visited two saloons at Thirty-seventh Street and Ninth Avenue and at 104th Street and Eighth Avenue. At the second place, Sullivan said, drink made Koerner melancholy and he retired to a rear room. Sullivan followed him just in time, he says, to wrest from his hand a revolver he had pressed against his breast.

Later, he said, Koerner begged for the revolver, promising not to use it, and Sullivan, in disgust at his conduct, let him have it. They went to another friend, Larry Baker, living on the top floor of 43 Manhattan Street, but by mistake knocked on the wrong door.

As they turned toward the stairs, Sullivan says, Koerner again drew his revolver, and a struggle ensued, in which both Koerner and Sullivan fell down to the next floor. They went together to the street, and had gotten to 31 Manhattan Street, when Koerner again drew his revolver and fired a bullet through his heart. The three others say they were thrown into panic and fled. Reading of the case and finding that Vincenzo Biondo, at whose door they had knocked by mistake, had seen them run as Koerner fell, they decided they had better tell the police.

They say Koerner was morbid over an approaching trial on a charge of stealing a bale of tobacco from a truck last May. He was out on $3,000 bail. They told the police also that Koerner had admitted to them that he stole a truck, horse, and consignment of forty-five cases of champagne that disappeared from in front of Delmonico's on the night of Nov. 21, and that he sold the wine, part of which the police recovered, to a man who was tried yesterday for receiving stolen property, and dismissed in court.

William N. Coler, Jr., Dead.

William N. Coler, Jr., a retired banker and expert on finances, died yesterday at his home, Coleridge Hall, Summit, N. J., following an operation. He was a brother of Bird S. Coler, formerly President of the Borough of Brooklyn. Mr. Coler was 52 years old and was born at Champaign, Ill. On the retirement of his father, William N. Coler, in 1888, he became the head of the banking house of W. N. Coler & Co. He retired in 1897 and was succeeded by his brother, Bird S. Coler. He was a Director of the Western National Bank, the Equitable Trust Company, and the Fidelity and Trust Company and other financial institutions. Mr. Coler was a member of the Lawyers', Calumet, and Knickerbocker Clubs and the Hamilton Club of Brooklyn. He was a veteran of the Twenty-third Regiment. He is survived by two sons.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, NOV. 30, 1910.

THE NEW YORK SENATORSHIP.

This is no time to waste the New York Senatorship upon respectable mediocrity. It is no time to summon out of the past as a candidate for that office any of the political toilers of a former day. One paramount consideration should control New York's choice of a Senator, a consideration that should be kept steadily in view to the exclusion of all minor and negligible motives, interests, and inclinations. It is this: The Democratic Senator from New York must be a man intellectually capable of taking and holding his place in the Senate as the equal of ELIHU ROOT. To choose as Senator a man of stature inferior to Mr. ROOT would put the Senatorial representation of New York out of balance, and leave the Democracy of the State now in control, with half a representative to measure his feebler capacities against the ripe powers and great experience of the Republican Senator.

It is amazing that there should be talk of minor men at a time when the future of the Democracy not only in the State but in the Nation will very largely depend upon the choice of Senators made in States where that party has come into control of Legislatures. Let the Republicans play the Bourbon rôle, forgetting nothing, learning nothing; let them obstinately turn their faces backward, ignoring the loud warning and command their party has just received to take wiser account of the temper of the times and the newly awakened spirit of the people. Let them be content with the crusted conservatism of LODGE, who represents nothing but blind resistance to well-justified demands of the people. Let them be content with sending LIPPIT as their Senator from Rhode Island, LIPPIT, who as a mill owner has a personal interest in the outrageous duties of the cotton schedule of which he himself has been a skilled manipulator, who would be not less loyal than ALDRICH himself to all the interests from which the people demand emancipation. The Republicans are welcome to whatever political prosperity may come to them through such policies. For the Democrats a new era has opened, and promise and opportunity beckon them to make choice of the right path along which alone the Democracy can hope to hold the astonishing advance it has made, and to make further progress to full possession of power in the Nation.

By choosing a Senator whose views and aspirations would cause men to class him at once with WOODROW WILSON, who would in the Senate command the attention of the country, and whose election would be due notice to the Democracy of the Nation that the Democrats of New York had returned to the habit, long abandoned, of calling into their service their greatest men, this State would regain the place it so long held, the place of Democratic leadership in the country. The wreck of the party in 1896 might have been averted had New York been worthily represented in the Senate. The Democrats of the South years ago lost respect for the representatives of the New York Democracy in the Senate and the House. They would not acknowledge the leadership of such men, they have not been in political affiliation with them. We should but continue the old bad tradition if we conferred this great honor upon an aspirant less worthy than the worthiest.

The test of worth is beyond all question intellectual and statesmanlike capacity. We should humble ourselves, we should be discredited, disgraced, if the Democratic Senator from New York should be a man incapable of intelligent and illuminating discussion of the great questions that will come before the Senate during the next half dozen years. The tariff, the currency, the relation of the public to great business corporations, the return to Constitutional practice in respect to the limits of Federal and State authority, the problems of conservation and of wise economy in public expenditures—all these will engage the attention of the Senate. Shall we have in that Chamber a man who must either sit dumb while the great debates proceed, or who can add to them nothing of the slightest worth, interest, and influence? These are demands to be met only by minds equipped for such high service.

They say that Mr. MURPHY will control the choice of the New York Senator. Mr. MURPHY cannot control the action of the Legislature if the majority of the Democrats recently elected to the Senate and Assembly take an enlightened view, even an enlightened party view, of their duty. It may make very little difference to Mr. MURPHY whether a Democratic President be elected in 1912 or whether the State remain in Democratic control, or speedily pass back into the grasp of the Republicans. The field of Mr. MURPHY's interest and endeavor is local. But it will make, politically speaking, all the difference in the world to the Democrats who are not of Tammany whether the bright promise of the present be realized or blasted. If they vote together the control will be theirs. Mr. MURPHY will have nothing to do but to follow their leadership, to accept their choice. It depends upon them whether the New York Legislature shall send to Washington a Democratic Senator whose name, whose abilities, and whose service will put heart into the Democracy of the Nation, or whether a choice shall be made that will make the Democrats of other States turn away in disgust from the hopelessly Tammanyized Democracy of the Empire State who should be the leaders in the work of making the party once more coherent, powerful, victorious.

THE BOMB THROWERS.

The exploding bomb that shook a whole block in the Italian community yesterday morning was planted by one of many hundreds of desperadoes, perhaps many thousands of them, who work entirely without fear. Their unpunished crimes are numberless. Practically nothing is known of the life of this Italian population, which is larger than that of Rome. Little is done for its protection. The Italian-American Civic League memorialized Acting Mayor MITCHEL last Summer, pleading that crimes had "disastrously increased since April, 1909," when, after the assassination of Lieut. PETROSINO, the force of Italian detectives was left weakened.

This league asked three things: First, a reorganization of the Italian Detective Bureau; second, an additional detail of men to strengthen this bureau, and, third, the further assignment of "a certain number of first-class detectives" for secret service.

The Italian-American Civic League should take this occasion to renew its petition to Mayor GAYNOR and to the Board of Aldermen, asking money—not much is needed—for a secret service that will "clean out" the Black Handers. Placed in the hands of Commissioner CROPSEY, and administered under the supervision of Mayor GAYNOR and one other high officer of the city, this fund would be safeguarded from improper uses. Deputy Commissioner FLYNN, who is a master of secret service methods, doubtless knows how to obtain efficient men. The newspapers have published long lists of crimes among the Italians. Is it not time to arrest their perpetrators?

WOODROW WILSON, LEADER.

At the Conference of Governors Dr. WOODROW WILSON, by his opening address last evening, modestly but unmistakably, took a distinctive and leading place. With no assumption of authority, with entire respect for his associates, and with full recognition of the coöperative nature of the conference, by virtue of his clear and careful and comprehensive study of the situation, he defined the principles and the aims of the movement; in effect, he took the lead.

The somewhat sudden development of the faculty of political leadership and of willingness to accept the responsibilities of the exercise of that faculty in the case of Dr. WILSON is the most interesting feature of recent politics. In his own State and in his own party it has excited the deepest interest and may have very substantial consequences. It is, as we have said, a somewhat sudden process, but it has been very open and above board. Early in his campaign and in every part of the State Dr. WILSON submitted his leadership frankly and explicitly as an issue—as the chief issue—in the election, and explained what lines, if his leadership were accepted, he intended to pursue. He made it clear that he would regard his commission, should he receive it, as coming from the voters, who would be entitled to the fullest accounting of his use of his delegated powers and performance of the duties imposed. It was responsible leadership, not arbitrary, open not concealed, that he sought. The answer was very decided. It was rendered, not only by his party, the full strength of which was brought out, but by a very large number of independents and Republicans, who declared, by their votes, that under his leadership they were ready to act with the Democratic Party. It is by virtue of this mandate that the Governor-elect has been guided, obviously, in his course regarding the Senatorship. He believes that Mr. MARTINE is, and Mr. SMITH is not, the choice of the party, and he is determined to use such influence as he has to vindicate that choice.

At the Conference of Governors the part of Dr. WILSON is, of course, quite different from that he is called upon to take in his own State. But it is a happy omen that that body should have selected him, in convention parlance, to sound the keynote, because he is so clearly equipped for the duty. His analysis of the general situation arising from the rapid and great development of centralization in business through the creation of corporations and demanding regulation by the authority which created them is admirable. Equally so is his tracing in general terms the lines of demarkation between Federal and State power to deal with this situation. It was natural to turn to legal centralization as a protection against commercial centralization, and to seek it at Washington. "But this intimate task of regulation was not one for which the Constitution had furnished" the Federal Government "with actually suitable or entirely adequate powers and authority. Only the States were fully equipped with the legislative and executive powers to handle at will and as they pleased this new organization of business and manufacture." Moreover, > to put Federal law back of the great corporations would have been to give them the right to dominate and override local conditions, to equip them with the majesty and supremacy of the law which created and regulated them, and to level the variety of communities before them. No absolute, uniform set of rules are likely to fit the infinitely various circumstances of the States and their people. Hence this conference.

Dr. WILSON disclaims any animosity toward the Federal Government: "We have no foolish or pedantic jealousy of the Federal power. We believe in the exercise of the Federal powers to the utmost wherein it is necessary that they should be brought into action for the common benefit. But we do not believe the invention of [new] Federal powers is either necessary or desirable." This is a cool and comprehensive statement the application of which no one can mistake. It will attract attention and interest and approval. A few weeks since the country was deafened by the loud and persistent assertion that the Rooseveltian version of the Ten Commandments was of higher authority and much more wise than the Constitution of the United States, and that nothing anywhere could be done about anything worth doing except in accordance with this version and under the immediate supervision of its author. It is an immense relief to hear the calm voice of a competent and sober student of facts and principles setting forth a more practical, simple, and wholesome doctrine. It is a very impressive statement of the purpose and spirit of the Conference of Governors:

> It is our privilege and duty to study the problems common to all the States, and to suggest the means by which the States, without loss of their natural variety or of their opportunities of local adaptation, may yet freely throw their energies into a common task of protection and development, as if in the spirit of a single commonwealth, their measures varied but their purpose the same. Our effort to render this service may result in the setting up of one of those voluntary institutions of counsel by which the life of free countries is enriched, both in action and in opinion. We shall be all the more sober, I believe, because we speak by no authority but that of reasonableness and good sense. Where we go astray we bind no one; where we are right we shall prevail.

MONEYED ALIENS.

To Mr. LAJOS STEINER belongs the honor of calling public attention to the fact that there is to-day no direct, purposeful effort in State or Nation to persuade the 400,000 resident immigrants who each year go abroad with their accumulations of savings, amounting easily to $275,000,000 or $300,000,000, to invest them in American farm lands. It is foolish for this State, or for any State, or for the Nation, to advertise abroad for fresh immigrants. Mr. STEINER points out, and very pertinently, that newly arrived immigrants have no funds wherewith to purchase farms, and their labor is best rewarded, not on our farms, but in the mines, factories, and on great works of construction. But from such work they save money.

And they are hungry for land. As owners they would till our fertile Eastern farms by the intensive methods learned in Europe. They would bring in their friends and relatives to help them, who would thickly settle the rural districts. If they knew that agricultural land within easy access of the great American markets was obtainable at from $15 to $100 an acre, they would cease investing in lands in Austria and Italy, the value of which has been increased within a decade to $400 or $500 an acre.

Why are not the officials of the Department of Agriculture in this and other States, of the Bureau of Information in the Federal Immigration Service, and of the National Agricultural Department busily spreading broadcast among the aliens resident in New York City information about investments in American farms? Is it because no such information is to be had? Or is it because they do not realize that here is a method of influencing directly and profoundly, and for the better, conditions of prosperity in this country?

INFORMATION FOR BROOKLYN.

It is to be feared that a disillusionment awaits the general Brooklyn public regarding its Triborough route not less cruel than the experience of a gentleman who responded to an advertisement of a room and bath. Being shown to the room he asked where was the bath, and was told that the bath was on the fourth floor above. The Triborough system occupies one story of the several stories in which the subway system is being developed. In the words of TRAVIS WHITNEY, Secretary of the Public Service Commission, "the Canal Street section of the Triborough route connecting with the Manhattan Bridge is constructed on the second level and will go underneath the Broadway-Lexington and the present subways."

It follows that whoever, coming from Brooklyn, wishes to go north or south of Canal Street in Manhattan must change cars. Changing cars on the subway is a matter of stepping across a platform. On the Triborough the change involves ascending or descending—according to the direction of travel—eighteen steps, and walking a train length, 530 feet, say two blocks or more. This is the only way for passengers on the Fourth Avenue route to go north or south in Manhattan. There is an alternative, for the Triborough also crosses the Williamsburg Bridge. Passengers over this route can take a car through the ten-million-dollar Centre Street subway, which will land them at the City Hall, practically at the present terminus of the Brooklyn Bridge. But this route offers no attraction to any who wish to go south of the Manhattan City Hall, or north of the Williamsburg Bridge terminal, or east of Centre Street. Brooklynites will return the way they come, of course. There will be no other way for them to get to Brooklyn on the Triborough route. It ends at the Battery, and there is no communication with Brooklyn except over the bridges mentioned.

It is easy to see why the Public Service Commission laid out these routes. It saw the city with bridges and subways together costing some scores of millions, and either idle or used to poor advantage. They sought to make some use of the failures in municipal transit construction, and probably would have been censured if they had not done so. Mr. McADOO laid a healing finger on the tender spot of the Triborough scheme when he declined to have anything to do with the bridges. He is a subway builder, and knows that continuous travel is necessary for popular approval, and he proposed another tunnel to Brooklyn. In this all Brooklyn will be with him, for they have lived through the purgatory of changes of vehicles and repetition of fares into the blessed experience of one ride in one vehicle for one fare on the Subway. They want more of the same.

This is not so fatal a criticism of the Triborough as it ought to be. Is not a large part of the Board of Estimate pledged to the Triborough route, regardless of faults or merits? And is it the main purpose of the Triborough to accommodate travel? There are those who think that its main object is to sell suburban lots, and either to build up in the region of detached one-family dwellings a congested population, or else to produce a lusty deficit, which Mr. McADOO very rightly is designing shall not fall upon his capital. No route of travel which fails to give unbroken transit is a convenience of travel. Any route which fails in this respect is open to the reproach of being a device of real estate boomers, and of deriving its strength from log rolling. Brooklynites should go down on their knees over the Triborough map and learn what they are shouting for. This advice is not addressed to those who are leading the shouting. They know their business.

DRINKS AND SMOKES.

Alas, as the Nation passes more prohibition and "dry" local option laws it becomes more addicted to drinking and smoking. For the year ended June 30, it consumed 30,000,000 gallons in excess of the 163,000,000 gallons of distilled spirits drunk in 1909; it swallowed 3,000,000 barrels of fermented beverages above the 59,485,117 barrels tapped the year before. It smoked 160,000,000 more cigars, and a solid billion more cigarettes. Out West they have anti-cigarette laws, but the smoking of cigarettes increased in the Nation by one-sixth.

The consumption of narcotics per capita has increased for more than a generation. Of wines and liquors each individual in the United States, according to the Statistical Abstract, drank an average of 7.70 gallons in 1870, 10.08 gallons in 1880, 15.53 gallons in 1890, 17.69 gallons in 1900, and, in 1909, 21.85 gallons. Most of this increase has been in the lighter fermented beverages. But the consumption of distilled spirits has also steadily increased since 1896 from 1.01 gallons per capita to 1.37 gallons in 1909. The figures for the present year will not comfort the Prohibitionists, nor should they comfort anybody. But they do show that, in a country full of State and local prohibitory ordinances, Prohibition does not make the people more abstinent.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Manhattan Hospital Revelations. Indignation over the thefts of meat at the Manhattan State Hospital will be absurdly and ridiculously futile if it centres upon the half dozen or so of men who were directly concerned in them and subsides after those men have been jailed or dismissed. "Grafting," as was stated by Dr. WILLIAM H. ALLEN of the Bureau of Municipal Research in his recent address at the annual meeting of the Municipal League in Buffalo, is not an animal to be captured, but a condition to be uncovered, and the really important thing done by the legislative investigators is the disclosure, not that thieves stole, but that the absence of any system of accounting and checking at the hospital made stealing easy, which is the same thing as saying made it inevitable.

There will be, of course, a certain satisfaction in punishing the rascals who have been utilizing the opportunities provided for them by the negligence and incompetence of high officials, the Legislature, and the general public, but as a matter of hard, cold fact those particular rascals might just as well be allowed to go on doing as they have done unless effective measures are to be taken to make such acts as theirs more dangerous than profitable. As Dr. ALLEN also said, it is not the public conscience that needs arousing, but the public eye that needs opening. There is no difference of opinion as to the proper characterization of robbery or of robbers and their accomplices. What there is not is full appreciation of the fact that the amount of stealing done varies inversely with the likelihood of its immediate detection.

To prevent most of it, therefore, it is not necessary to wait for the millennium—for the realization by everybody that honesty is the best policy. The desired result, at least in such matters as that of the hospital provisioning, can be attained at once by the adoption and following of an adequate system of bookkeeping.

The investigators seem not yet to have taken up the interesting question whether the helpless inmates of the hospital suffered in amount and quality of food because of the systematic abstractions that had long gone on. Incidentally, several witnesses, in self-exculpation, have said that the tables were well and abundantly served. It is easier to hope so than to believe, but it may be true, nevertheless.

Guarding Against Kidnappers. It is indeed awful that the London police now have to guard from the attacks of frenzied and ferocious Suffragettes, not only the members of the Cabinet, but the presumably innocent wives of those members and their certainly innocent little babies. ("Innocent" is here used, of course, as it is when applied to the bystander or passerby who is always getting shot in quarrels in which he has no more than an academic interest, if that.) There is at least a chance, however, that, instead of beginning these remarks with "it is indeed awful that," the start should have been "it is indeed awful if."

That the London police are now extending a special protection to the families of the Cabinet officials, or some of them, or one of them, is stated as a fact in the cable dispatches, but even in minds where lurks no sympathy with the violent methods of militant suffragettancy, there springs a doubt as to the reality of the danger which menaces the daughter of WINSTON CHURCHILL, aged 4 months. Several of the fiercest Suffragettes have been seen over here, and seen at close quarters, and they did not give the impression that they were women who would steal babies from perambulators or elsewhere.

They seemed, it must be confessed, as little likely to do various other things which they not only confessed, but boasted of and there is apparently no doubt that one of them did kick in the shins the aged Secretary of State for Ireland, against whom she could have had about as much and as real personal grievance as against the Churchill infant. Still, a man is a man and a baby is a baby, and the kicking of the one is different from the kidnapping of the other. In short, the detective trailing along behind the perambulator is a rather amusing spectacle, and rather indicative of exaggerated panic, somewhere.

The one excuse for the detective is the possibility that suffragette excitement may in some instances have passed into outright insanity of the near-homicidal type. Perhaps the Ministers have private information on that subject, in which case their precautions are well justified.

Vindication for the Bluejackets. According to the latest information, our sailors have not been misbehaving in France any more than in other countries, but have, on the contrary, conducted themselves with propriety.

That they have had a number of rows in Brest and Cherbourg is admitted, but with the admissions goes the declaration that the rows were the result of nothing worse than refusals to submit to robbery in the guise of outrageous prices demanded in shops and restaurants.

When a sailor ashore finds intolerably high the price of anything he wants it must be altitudinous indeed, and the fact that the French papers are justifying the bluejackets and denouncing the port populations for attempted extortion is convincing evidence that the visitors have not forfeited the reputation for sense and orderliness well earned in so many parts of the world in recent years.

FASTEST TRAINS.

The English Expresses Make Better Time Than Ours.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am interested in your announcement of the Jersey City to Philadelphia ninety-mile run scheduled for 96 minutes, but think that you are out in your surmise that it may be the fastest train in the world.

The average speed of trains in England is a good deal in excess of that of trains here, as will be seen from a selection given below. The times given are start to stop, regular schedule—the only basis of comparison.

Railway. Between.	Miles.	H. M.	Miles Per Hr.
Great Western—London-Bristol	118	2:00	59.0
Gt. West'n—Leamington-Ealing	100¾	1:41	59.0
North Eastern—Darlington-York	44¼	0:43	61.7
North Eastern—York-Newcastle	80½	1:22	58.9
G. N'th'n—Grantham-Doncaster	50½	0:52	58.2
Gt. Northern—Peterboro-London	76¼	1:19	57.9
North Western—London-Birmingham (9 trains daily)	113	2:00	56.5

The following long runs make pretty good time:

Railway. Between.	Miles.	H. M.	Miles Per Hr.
Gt. Western—London-Plymouth	225¾	4:07	54.6
North Western—London-Rhyle	209¼	3:57	52.9
Gt. Central—London-Sheffield	164¾	2:57	55.8
N. Western—Willesden-Coventry	88½	1:32	57.7
Gt. Central—London-Leicester	107¼	1:52	57.2
Caledonian—Forfar-Perth	32½	0:32	60.9
London & South Western—London-Andover	65	1:08	57.5
Midland—London-Leicester	99	1:45	56.5

In France they run expresses between Calais and Paris and the latter city and Marseilles whose average rate of speed is higher than that of any of the English trains. I have not the figures by me, however. These trains are doubtless the fastest in the world. B. R. C.

Concealed Weapons.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In theory a "Bureau of Firearms," as proposed by William Campbell and seconded by E. H. N. Southwick, appears to be an excellent scheme, but how would it work out in practice? Does not the law now provide sufficiently against the willful "gun toter"? Would a "Bureau of Firearms" prove any more efficient in rounding him up than do present ordinances, with the kind of administration of the law with which we have been made familiar?

True, the law-abiding citizen who for self-protection might deem it necessary to carry firearms would duly file application with the bureau and be granted the privilege, or, more likely, be turned down.

But the "tough citizen," he of criminal intent—what about him? He puts a pistol in his pocket with the idea of committing a felony. Wherefore, then, the deterrent effect of a further construction of felonious intent?

What we want is better administration of the laws we already have. If Mr. Campbell should slip a revolver into his hip pocket and go about with that suspicious protuberance in the surface of his coattail, his apprehension by an alert policeman would shortly follow. And yet there are plenty of men at large among us who are known "gun toters." Their records entitle them to the distinction. But some mysterious influence preserves them, outlaws as they are, free from the law.

The man who is ready to "pull a gun" is usually a man with another kind of "pull" to back him: a "pull" that the police regard philosophically as useless to combat. Al they can hope to get "on him" is to catch him "with the goods," that is, after he has used his gun with deadly effect.

Stamp out the "strong-arm man," the "heeler," the "gangster," or whatever you choose to call him, and the present penalty for carrying firearms without a permit will be sufficient. J. W. E.

GETTING THE FARMERS.

Canada and Argentina Triumph Over the United States.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Evening Post on the 25th inst. published valuable information under the heading "New York in the Census," and enumerated facts showing in our State's rapid urban growth and slow increase, or even decrease, in rural population. Twenty-four out of sixty-one counties of New York State have declined in numbers or been practically stationary in their population. Fifteen counties have less population now than they had ten years ago. Nine others increased less than 2 per cent.; all these are rural counties.

It is obvious, as The Post says, that people are leaving the farms for life in the towns. On our own hemisphere Canada and Argentina are exceptions to this rule. In both of these countries systematic Governmental work is carried on for providing a farming population, and of course the work is successful. Governmental work is successful when the appointive officers are in earnest. This sort of work could be carried on with less difficulties and greater success in the United States, because we have much of good "material."

We have millions of resident immigrants, raised and trained in agriculture, who are saving part of their earnings for the purpose of re-engaging in agriculture when adequate amounts have been secured. Each year several hundred thousands of such parties have completed the accumulation of savings and depart from the United States to purchase land in foreign countries. We lose thus about $300,000,000 each year and the respective farmers.

Thousands of so-called "immigrant banks" are engaged in the export of the savings of our resident immigrants and in selling them transportation to foreign countries. The activity of these "banks" and lack of proper information regarding our agricultural opportunities, have created and continue our peculiar and deplorable condition. Tremendous power is being exerted to antagonize the efforts which are made to remedy this condition.

Unlike Canada and Argentina we have hundreds of thousands of competent parties each year ready to purchase and farm our tillable land. Providence supplied us with good "material"; we have sufficient numbers of competent resident immigrants to augment our agriculture. Our peasant immigrants are enthusiastic for agriculture and experienced in producing good crops on land which has been farmed for over 1,000 years. Immigrants would prefer to farm our lands if they would have an opportunity to purchase the same, instead of the worn-out lands of Europe. Up to this date they had no opportunity to satisfy their land hunger, except by paying inflated prices for land in Europe. Lately Canada and Argentina are furnishing opportunities, so both of these countries are getting farmers, who, but for our indifference, would be farming here.—Peasant immigrants are immune against the allurement of city amusements, and would stay on their farms. They do appreciate Americanism and are loyal to our ideals once they have a chance to absorb American ideals; their children are bound to be thoroughly assimilated Americans by the teachings received in our schools.

Immigrant banks should be regulated and supervised. Proper information should be compiled and disseminated. Congress and the State Legislatures should provide adequate facilities for this work. Proper legislation and expedient administrative work could soon change for the better our present suicidal proceeding. LAJOS STEINER.

SUBWAYS AND SAVINGS.

Points Out Civic Value of Interesting the Small Investor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It seems strange that in all the discussion of the subway problem no attempt is being made to utilize the small savings of the people as a means of raising the capital necessary for construction. Certainly no business proposition is surer to return a fair rate of interest on the capital invested than subways in the thickly populated districts of New York City. If the management could be as safely guarded as, for example, is the management of our savings banks, it does not seem unreasonable to think that the small savings of New York's own citizens—to say nothing of people outside the city—could be attracted.

Any one can see the immense civic value of having the people—not the city—own their own subways. Such ownership would do much to counteract the tendencies of the present day toward a radical form of Socialism. It would help hold together the people and their institutions.

Hasn't New York some man big enough, disinterested enough, and far-sighted enough to utilize the small savings of our own citizens in solving the financial part of the subway problem? C. C.

PLANTATION CHILDREN.

Booker T. Washington Makes an Appeal for Their Christmas.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Persons who live in large cities and in enlightened sections of the country do not realize that Christmas means very little in the way of happiness, enjoyment, and cheer to many of those who live in the remote rural districts of the South, especially those who live on the large plantations.

For a number of years it has been a privilege, as well as a pleasure, to receive cards and other Christmas presents for distribution through various teachers in the South among children in the plantation districts, who have very little to make the Christmas season one to be remembered. Such gifts mean much to them. Anything of the kind indicated can be addressed to me, and I will see that it accomplishes the purpose for which it is sent. BOOKER T. WASHINGTON.

Socialists as Jurors.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Perhaps my experience might interest "Independent," whose letter appeared in your paper. I am a Socialist and have served on juries ever since I have been eligible to serve. I served in March of this year in the Supreme Court, and in one case on which I sat there were five Socialists. This, of course, was unusual, and not by design, for no question as to economic ideas was asked of the talesmen. On another case in the same court there were three Socialists.

That does not look as though Socialists evaded their duty, does it?

With respect to the friend of "Independent," who is "highly intelligent and exceptionally well educated," but who refuses to act as a juror because he might lose some of his pupils, and who deliberately evades his duty as a citizen, I submit that it should be brought to that man's attention that if he expects the protection of the law he should aid the law, and the work he evades must be performed by some one else. The unfairness of such actions must be manifest to any fair-minded man. THOMAS A. M. KANE.

Advertising the Navy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The present Administration is certainly making itself conspicuous by the introduction of novelties. The latest is recorded in the press dispatches this morning, which state that the Secretary of the Navy, for advertising purposes, contemplates sending a battleship up the Mississippi River, trusting in that way to popularize the navy and to arouse a public sentiment that will force the continuation of the policy of two battleships a year, which was initiated by the late Administration.

It would seem to unprejudiced people that just now economy should be the first consideration of the Government, and these artificial movements to excite popular feeling in favor of extravagance are ill-timed. It seems very hard for President Taft and his advisers to adopt and pursue any plan of economy.

But they should recognize that economy is inevitable, and they should make every effort to obtain credit for a move in that direction.

PRESENT STATUS OF EHRLICH'S REMEDY

Doctors in Germany Report Many Relapses Along with Successful Uses.

NOT SO ENTHUSIASTIC NOW

Dr. W. J. Robinson Says There Are Many Wrong Ideas of the Famous Discovery.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a rule, I am not in favor of discussing technical medical problems or the virtues and defects of medicinal agents in the lay press. Not that I am opposed to sharing with the public all the useful medical knowledge that we possess. On the contrary. But it is exceedingly difficult for the untrained layman to see medical problems in their proper perspective. When a remedy or a method proves to yield 50, 25, or even 10 per cent. better results than any remedy or method hitherto known, we are happy to welcome it to our therapeutic armamentarium. But it is a peculiarity of the human mind to dislike to take things by halves. A thing is either wholly good or wholly bad. A man must be either a saint or a devil. And to the average layman a medicine must be either an absolutely infallible specific or it must be utterly worthless. And it must be so wonderful, so universally useful, as to be applicable in all cases without exception.

That the knowledge of the discovery of paradoxydiamidoarsenobenzol didydrochloride, popularly "606," and just now rechristened "salvarsan," should not have been kept from the public goes without saying. The public is entitled to know of great discoveries in medicine, as it is entitled to know of great discoveries in wireless telegraphy, for instance. But that considerable harm has been done by the discussion of the remedy in the public press, which, I repeat, has become prematurely popular, is also beyond question. People have applied to me for "606" in whom the administration of the drug would have been equivalent to a five-grain dose of potassium cyanide or a well-directed bullet. People between 60 and 70—there was one man of 74—with dilated hearts and leaky valves, atheromatous arteries, and contracted kidneys, have come to me clamoring for the treatment. And when you tell them reluctantly that they are not fit subjects for "606," they are skeptical, because they have read in the papers that the remedy was "perfectly harmless." On the other hand, people whom I had discharged ten or fifteen years ago as well, and who during the entire period have shown no evidences whatever of disease, who are fathers of perfectly healthy children, have been begging for a dose of "606," just to make "perfectly sure." And when they are told that they are not in need of the remedy, and that, besides, an injection of "606" would make nothing "perfectly sure," no more than an injection of mercury would, they are again skeptical, for they have read "different."

As THE TIMES has devoted considerable space to a consideration of Ehrlich's remedy, perhaps you will grant me a little more space for registering the present status of the remedy, as established by the latest reports from Germany. The editor of the Medizinische Klinik of Berlin has sent around letters of inquiry to those who had used "606," with the request that they state the number of cases treated and the number of relapses. In the last two issues of the Klinik—Nov. 6 and 13—are the replies, and almost every one, without exception, reports relapses. While the number of relapses is small in comparison to the total number of cases treated, the writers are careful to mention that the figures are not to be taken as showing the actual percentage of relapses, because the time is too short and because the total number of patients who presented themselves after treatment for observation purposes is but a small fraction of the total number treated.

And the tone of the reports is decidedly not so enthusiastic as it was two months, or even a month, ago. Dr. Géronne of the City Hospital in Wiesbaden, for instance, who has had twenty-two relapses in seventy-one cases treated between April and July, says that they have no high expectations from "606." He believes that most cases will require for a permanent cure mercury and potassium iodide in addition to "606." And Prof. Bruhns of the Hospital Charlottenburg, Berlin, refers to several cases which responded poorly to "606," but showed greater improvement under mercury. Which corroborates the statement made by me in the last letter to THE TIMES that mercury and the iodides have not yet lost their raison d'être, and will probably retain it for some time to come.

The writer feels like adding: Probably forever.

Cost of Education in the South.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with interest the article in THE TIMES of Nov. 28 which says that the Governor-elect of South Carolina favors a division of the public school money between the white and colored schools on the basis of the amount of taxes paid by the people of the two races. I have before me the report of the State Superintendent of Education of South Carolina for 1907, and find some rather surprising figures. The number of white children enrolled is given as 144,668 for the whole State, and the total amount expended for them is given as $1,148,474.11, or about $7.94 per capita, and the number of negro children enrolled is given as 169,731, with a total amount expended for them of $267,250.18, or about $1.57 per capita. In Newberry County, from which the Governor-elect comes, the enrollment of white children is given as 2,718, with an expenditure for them of $25,709.32, or $9.46 per capita; and the number of negro children is given as 4,835, with an expenditure for them of $6,640.58, or $1.37 per capita. An explanation of this great disparity in the apportionment of the public school funds under the present system might be a suggestive introduction to the proposed new legislation.

A BEWILDERED INQUIRER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is said that the Newark factory building that went up in smoke on Saturday had been three times condemned as unsafe by the Building Department. What mysterious "influence" enabled the proprietor to continue to use it, notwithstanding, without let or hindrance? It is also said that the entrances to the fire escapes were so clogged with boxes and bales that it was impossible for the poor girls who lost their lives to use them.

Jersey justice prides itself on being stern and swift in its dealings with malefactors. Here is a shining mark for it. Will it make any effort to convict the murderers? I trow not. The election is safely over, and the people will forget.

It is further said that there are many similar fire traps in Newark. Will anything be done to close them? D. L.

WITHDRAW "SALOME" AFTER POLICE FIAT

MARY GARDEN OBJECTED

"I Won't Do Anything by Halves," She Said, Refusing to Eliminate Any of Her Lines or Poses.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Following official criticism from the Chicago Police Department, through Chief of Police Steward, the production of "Salome," in which Mary Garden had twice appeared here, was withdrawn from the Grand Opera programme for Friday night.

The Chief of Police informed the management that "offensive" features, particularly the "head scene," should be toned down. Miss Garden strenuously objected to eliminating any of her lines or poses, and accordingly the production for Friday evening was withdrawn.

The fiat of the Chief of Police was given by Police Censor O'Donnell to the opera company management last night, but was not communicated to Miss Garden until to-day.

"If they touch it or try to cut any of my performance they can get some one else to dance it. I won't," said Miss Garden, "I won't do anything by halves. I suppose they want me to stand behind a screen and timidly speak the lines."

After the announcement that "Salome" would not be presented Friday night it was further declared by the Grand Opera management that other artists had refused to substitute their productions for the withdrawn opera, and in consequence the stage would be dark that night.

THE PHILHARMONIC CONCERT.

Elgar's Variations, Mozart Played by Small Orchestra—MacMillan Soloist.

The fourth of the Philharmonic Society's evening concerts was given yesterday in Carnegie Hall. The programme contained nothing that was new to New York, though the concerto for violin by Carl Goldmark that Mr. Francis MacMillen played has been heard here so rarely and so long ago that it was unfamiliar to many of those who heard it last evening. Mr. Mahler began with Sir Edward Elgar's "Variations on an Original Theme" for orchestra, to which the composer has attributed the properties of an "enigma" that he declines to explain, and which he has undertaken to make a succession of portraits of friends whom he has not named—"a personal matter."

Neither the enigma nor the personalities need trouble the listener, for whom the variations are a brilliant, ingenious, and resourceful employment of one of the oldest of musical forms, in a strong and vigorous modern spirit. Such a performance as Mr. Mahler gave of them last evening richly elaborated in detail, delicate, and strong in nuance, is needed to show forth their intrinsic interest. They have been played here when they sounded dull. They are indeed of diverse musical value, but they have an underlying unity, and there are beauty and strongly marked expression of mood in them, and a genuine and individual musical utterance.

The symphony was Mozart's in G minor; and in this Mr. Mahler gave the audience a surprise. He had it played by a much reduced number of orchestral players, on the basis of eight first violins instead of the sixteen that make up the normal number of the orchestra. The other stringed instruments were reduced in proportion; some of the wind instruments were also lessened in number, but there were four flutes, though they did not always all play. The intention obviously was to give, as far as might be, the effect of such an orchestra as Mozart had in mind when he composed the symphony—an effect in which the wind instruments have a larger share than they have in performances of such works by the modern orchestra.

But it may be doubted whether the results falling upon the ears of auditors in Carnegie Hall were such as were heard by listeners of Mozart's time; for they were those of a small orchestra in a large hall, instead of a small orchestra in a hall suited to its number. They were interesting results, however. The sonority was greater than was to be expected, and the quality of the orchestral color, with the increased proportion of the wind instruments, was no doubt new to many to whom the symphony has been a lifelong friend. It may be questioned whether this attempt was convincing to those who know the symphony as it is usually played in these days, or whether many will wish to hear Mozart's symphonic music hereafter in no other guise.

The performance was not so finished as most that have been heard recently from the Philharmonic; and Mr. Mahler made more free with tempo and phrasing than he did in a memorable performance of Mozart's C major symphony last season. This was particularly true of the andante, whose serenity and poise do not invite such treatment as he gave it last evening.

Mr. MacMillen played better than he did at his own concert some weeks ago. He played more unaffectedly and with more breadth and power. His tone, while it was not powerful, was refined and searching, his technique, on the whole, secure; but his intonation in certain passages was not exactly true. The concerto itself is not one of the great works for the instrument; and yet it would seem, in the dearth of substantial compositions for violinists to play with the orchestra, to merit somewhat more attention than is given it. Mr. MacMillen gave pleasure in it, and was several times recalled.

The concert was ended with Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream" overture.

MELBA APPEARS IN "LA TRAVIATA"

Few Singers Who Can Cope with Her Performance of Sempre Libre and Libiamo.

McCORMACK AS ALFREDO

Carlo Galeffi, Baritone, Makes Debut Here—Melba in 1830 Gowns and Rest in 18th Century Garb.

Violetta	Nellie Melba
Flora Bervoise	Jeanne Maubourg
Annina	Marie Mattfeld
Alfredo	John McCormack
Georgio Germont	Carlo Galeffi
Gastone	Pietro Audisio
Barone Douphol	Vincenzo Reschiglian
Marchese D'Obigny	Bernard Begue
Dottore Grenvil	Giulio Rossi

Conductor, Vittorio Podesti.

A special Tuesday night performance served to introduce "La Traviata" to this year's operagoers last night at the Metropolitan Opera House. The occasion was also the second of the series of performances which Mme. Melba is singing at this theatre. That singer was much more the mistress of her voice even than when she sang Gilda last week. Some of the music, particularly that in the second act, she sang in a matchless manner. She has probably sung the "Sempre Libre" and "Libiamo" of the first act more brilliantly herself in years gone past, but there are few singers alive to-day who can cope with her present performance of them.

John McCormack, now a member of the Chicago Opera Company, was brought to New York for this single performance. He has often been heard to more advantage in the part of Alfredo at the Manhattan. However, he sang with effect.

Mr. Galeffi, the baritone, is said to have been imported from Boston. It is not likely that he will give many representations here. His natural voice, at least it seemed so at times, must be one of beauty but his method of singing is not calculated to please the ear. Nevertheless his air in the second act was warmly applauded.

The costuming of this opera has always been a matter of doubt. There are some in "Traviata" audiences who wait with bated breath for the rise of the curtain to see what period is to be graced by this story of Violetta's unfortunate history. For years the chorus and all but the leading soprano wore costumes of the eighteenth century, while she wore a gown of the latest mode.

Mme. Melba in London introduced the fashion of costuming the opera in the period of Dumas's story—about 1830. This custom was followed at the Manhattan when the Australian soprano sang there. But when Mme. Tetrazzini appeared the entire cast was attired in clothes of the present day.

Last night at the Metropolitan, which likewise has costumed the opera in different styles during the past few years, Mme. Melba wore her 1830 gowns, and the rest of the cast reverted to eighteenth century garb.

The audience did not fill the theatre, but it was a large one considering the fact that the performance was given outside the subscription series.

Since 1871 he had been at the head of the University of Vermont, and under his Presidency the university made great progress both in the increased number of its students and in its efficiency as an educational institution.

DORANCE ATWATER DEAD.

Made Secret Record of Deaths of Union Prisoners at Andersonville.

MERIDEN, Conn., Nov. 29.—A message to Francis Atwater, a newspaper publisher of this city, from San Francisco to-day brought word of the death of his brother, Dorance Atwater, who made the secret record of the deaths of Federal prisoners in the Confederate military prison at Andersonville. Mr. Atwater at the age of 16 enlisted for the war with the First Squadron, Connecticut Cavalry, and later served with the Harris Light Cavalry of New York.

He was taken prisoner in 1864 and sent to Andersonville Prison, where he was detailed to make a record for the prison of the deaths among the Federal prisoners. Suspecting that the list as compiled by him was not being sent to the Government, Mr. Atwater made a duplicate of the list given the prison authorities, keeping it from their knowledge. His list contained 13,000 names.

When, in 1865, he was sent to the parole camp at Annapolis he carried this list with him secreted in the lining of his coat. Recently recognition of his services was given Mr. Atwater by the Government.

Fine American Pearls

When Australian pearls were first brought to Europe the conservative jeweller was as loth to accord them rank with the Indian pearls as he was a few years before to admit the African diamonds as rivals to those from the old mines of India and Brazil. The Australian pearl is to-day as prized as the choicest product of the Indian Ocean, which it rivals in beauty and price. It will not be long before fine specimens of American pearls, which to-day cost about a quarter of the price of Oriental pearls, will be as eagerly sought after by lovers of pearls. Prejudice dies with increase of knowledge, and it is certain that when it is known that many of the pearls found in our inland waters are not only as beautiful, but as solid, as permanent, and in every way as sound as the pearls of the Oriental seas, the prices demanded for fine American specimens will equal those obtained for the choicest pearls from the East.

CHURCH UNITY PLEA OPENS NEW SEMINARY

Church in Gravest Evils from Division, Declares Prof. Briggs at Union's Dedication.

MANY NOTABLES ATTEND

Five Denominations Among the Students Taught—Diners Pleased by This.

The new $2,500,000 Union Theological Seminary buildings at Broadway and 120th Street were dedicated yesterday with all-day exercises. There was an alumni service in the morning, with speeches by the Rev. Dr. Henry Hamlin Stebbins of Rochester, the Rev. Dr. Howard Sweetser Bliss, President of the Syrian Baptist College at Beirut, Syria; the Rev. Dr. William Pierson Merrill of Chicago, and the Rev. Dr. Thomas Brown of the seminary's Faculty.

Then came an informal luncheon to the seminary's alumni and to the prominent prelates and laymen, gathered from all parts of the country to be present at the exercises. In the afternoon, before an imposing assemblage of Protestant clergymen and representatives of many universities, the dedication proper took place.

The afternoon dedication services were held in the new Gothic columned chapel. There were speeches by President Robert C. Ogden of the seminary's Board of Directors, and the Rev. Dr. Francis Brown of the seminary's Faculty. A dedicatory prayer was offered by the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst and Prof. Charles A. Briggs, who has been connected with the seminary as student and teacher for fifty years, including some pretty stormy ones, delivered a final address.

All the guests and delegates expected Dr. Briggs to say something that would startle them. And he did this, when during one part of his address he began urging "church consolidation."

Dr. Briggs Regrets Divisions.

"No one man can any longer fulfill all the requirements for a church minister," said Dr. Briggs on this point. "The splitting up of the people into little denominational congregations, which has gone to such extremes in modern Protestantism in this country has brought the Church into the gravest evils. The ministers strive to do everything and do nothing. There must be a consolidation on a grand scale. The small congregations must be consolidated into great ones. There must be comprehensive Christian Churches served by a Presbytery of ministers. There will be one minister as the church's executive head, who will be versed in ecclesiastical law, another minister to take charge of the pastoral affairs, another to do the teaching, and another to do the soul-stirring preaching."

Dr. Briggs also told the 500 clergymen in the audience that "the rise and growth of Christian Science, Faith Cure, and the like practical radicalisms which are springing up in the Christian Church of our time are the revenge of human nature against the neglect of pastoral medicine by the Christian ministry; and they can only be overcome by the recognition of all that is good in them."

The Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, who delivered the dedicatory prayer preceding Dr. Briggs's address, said in the invocation that the seminary's new building, grounds, and equipment were an "attestation of the faith of the seminary's founders, benefactors, and Faculty in the advancement of God's Kingdom." He prayed that the seminary "may be spared the dishonor of becoming a scholastic institution."

Such a notable company of this country's college Presidents, university professors, and Protestant churchmen has not met in this city in a long time as formed in line in the hall of the seminary's new Administration Building at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. All wore the black, scarlet-hooded gowns of Doctor of Divinity or of various other academic degrees. Andrew Carnegie, Bishop Greer, President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia, President Faunce of Brown, President Demarest of Rutgers, President Garfield of Williams, George Foster Peabody, representing the University of Georgia; Gen. Horatio King, representing Dickinson; Gen. Thomas H. Hubbard, representing Bowdoin; President Richmond of Union College, President Moffat of Washington and Jefferson College, President Thomas of Middlebury College, President Mary E. Woolley of Mount Holyoke, and President Falconer of Toronto were among the 124 delegates of various universities who took part in the proceedings. The procession moved through the main corridor of the Administration Building and downstairs to another long corridor, connecting with the chapel. The delegates of the youngest universities were put in front. The Rev. James I. Good of the Central Theological Seminary (founded 1907) marched in front. The Rev. Prof. J. C. Roper, representing the University of Oxford, England, (founded 872,) brought up the rear. In the front row of the spectators in the chapel was the venerable John Bigelow, and one of the figures in the front of the chapel who interested the audience greatly was the Rev. Mr. Stoddard, an uncle of Dr. Charles Stoddard of The Observer, whose long beard and hair were snowy white and who had come over from New Jersey to see the dedication, although he is over 90 years old.

Morgan and Schiff at Dinner.

Five hundred prominent churchmen, educators, and philanthropists of this country and Europe attended a dinner at the Waldorf last night in honor of the dedication of the new seminary buildings. J. Pierpont Morgan, Jacob H. Schiff, John Wanamaker, Seth Low, and many others who have contributed much in the past to education in this city, occupied seats at the speakers' table. The speakers themselves were President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia, Bishop David H. Greer of the New York Episcopal Diocese, the Rev. George Alexander of Princeton Theological Seminary, Prof. Edward C. Moore of Harvard, Bishop William Lawrence of the University of Durham, the Rev. Prof. George William Knox of Yale, President McClure of the McCormick Theological Seminary of Chicago, and President Faunce of Brown University.

It had been mentioned at the dedication services at the seminary itself in the afternoon that Union Seminary now gives instruction to theological students of five different denominations of Protestantism; and all the speakers at the dinner took turns in congratulating President Brown of the Seminary's Faculty and President Ogden of the seminary's trustees on this fact and its significance as an indication of the ever broadening lines on which theological education is being conducted in this country nowadays.

Prof. Moore of Harvard, for example, in his speech described how different theological education was a generation ago, how tightly the narrow sectarian lines were drawn and what a tragedy from the Christian Church's point of view that narrow sectarianism had been.

Bishop Lawrence of Durham, when his turn came, told the diners frankly that there was no theological seminary in all England which received and gave instruction to five different denominations of young men who were studying for the ministry, and that, if there were theological seminaries in the United States that did this, he believed that this country was going to be able to solve a lot of the ecclesiastical problems which have troubled England for generations.

President Robert C. Ogden of the seminary's Board of Directors presided at the meeting and began by telling the diners that he had received a message of good wishes from President Taft, who had been invited to the dinner. Then he introduced President Butler of Columbia, who welcomed the seminary as a new neighbor of Columbia's on Morningside Heights.

"Morningside Heights is rapidly becoming the citadel of this city's intellectual life," President Butler said. "We have there a great Episcopalian Cathedral, a great hospital, a great university, and now a great school for the study of the queen of sciences. The coming of the seminary is another step in the mobilizing of the forces of civilization there. Your buildings are an altar on which the everlasting fire will be burning. No neighbor could be more welcome than this splendid company of scholars."

Bishop Greer caused a laugh at the opening of his speech by saying that the diners, as he looked out over their faces, seemed to wear an unmistakably "Presbyterian hue."

"But I feel most at home here because I love you all," Bishop Geer went on. "I hope that the proximity of our Episcopalian Cathedral will encourage some of your students in the new seminary buildings to take advantage of it and come into the Episcopalian Church."

Church Needs Good Men.

The Rev. George Alexander, who was once a teacher in Union Seminary, intimated humorously to President Ogden and the diners, when his turn came, that he was a very staunch Presbyterian and not inclined to let down the denominational lines too much.

"But the Church, as a whole, needs men," he added, "and if the Union Theological Seminary helps to fit students for what President Taft calls the 'nuclei of civilization,' it will be a splendid thing for the Holy Church throughout all the world."

Prof. Moore of Harvard began by calling attention to the fact thta the theological seminaries nowadays are becoming less and less denominational.

"Men who go into the ministry to-day must be educated," he said with unusual earnestness. "The faculties of the theological seminaries are beginning to understand this, and the students themselves are beginning to understand it also. The old barrier separating theological education with the academic education of culture and broad-mindedness is breaking down. The modern theological student is rapidly being allowed to learn academic subjects in an unamateurish way from the best teachers and in the most enlightened surroundings. The modern theological seminary and the modern university are working hand in hand for the intellectual life of the world."

Bishop Lawrence of Durham referred at once to the statement that there were five Protestant denominations among the Union Seminary's students.

"If this is so, God be praised," he said. "It would not be possible in England. Now I begin to see how America is working out the problems of the Christian Church. If your churches are willing to let every man seek the truth, we have every faith that you will solve these problems and give you Godspeed."

Speeches by Prof. Knox and Presidents McClure, Faunce, Brown, and Ogden followed.

The Russian blouse style is one of the best things that ever came out of that picturesque land.

Especially when cut like ours, it certainly does set off a youngster's good looks.

Novelties are not lacking among kiddies' overcoats, either.

Fancy tweeds, for example. Then there's a large shepherd plaid of chinchilla which mothers term very chic.

Men's silk and "silk lisle" socks; plain colors. 50c and 75c regularly.

Carnival Abandoned for a Year—Garden Dates Unsatisfactory.

Giving as a reason that Madison Square Garden could not be engaged for a desirable night next March the General Athletic Association at Columbia University yesterday announced that the annual Columbia relay carnival will not be held next year. Although there is little doubt but that the event will be carded again in another year all hope of having the games this winter is given up by the Morningside track men.

Considerable disappointment is felt among those interested in track athletics up on the heights, and there is little doubt that this move will be strenuously criticised, especially since it is maintained by the association that it is not made because of the fact that in the past few years it has not been a financial success. Notices have been sent to those colleges and organizations who are usually entered that the meet will not take place.

After a lapse of a year Columbia University will be able to witness some dual swimming meets in her own tank. A schedule comprising four home meets and three outside ones has been arranged by Manager Kinsman for the Morningside team. This schedule of seven meets is in addition to the Intercollegiate Championships, which will be held at Columbia, the date being finally set for March 4. The remodeling of the pool for these events is completed and practice in the newly outlined tank began yesterday. The schedule follows:

Dec. 10, Twenty-third Street Young Men's Christian Association, at Columbia; Dec. 17, Cornell, at Columbia; Jan. 14, College of the City of New York, at the College of the City of New York; Feb. 3, Pennsylvania, at Columbia; Feb. 10, Princeton, at Columbia; Feb. 17, Yale, at New Haven; Feb. 24, College of the City of New York and Amherst, at the College of the City of New York; March 4, Intercollegiate Championships, at Columbia.

The Columbia freshman team will have a triangular meet with Yale freshmen and the De Witt Clinton High School teams and a dual meet with the College of the City of New York freshman team on dates to be announced later.

Wills to Coach Navy in Basket Ball.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 29.—Midshipman B. O. Wills, Captain of the Naval Academy basket ball team of last season, will coach the team this year, and is expected in Annapolis this week. W. L. Lush, who coached with much success for two seasons, will coach the basket ball and baseball teams of Yale this year. There are sixty midshipmen out for the basket ball five this year.

Trophies for College Shooters.

To get around the question of whether in the intercollegiate rifle matches it is fair for a non-military school or college to have to submit to the same conditions as the military colleges, Capt. J. A. Baker, Jr., of the Columbia team has presented the association with a trophy to go to the team making the best record in the league matches from among those representing the organizations not having military departments. Thus the intercollegiate league for 1911 will have two trophies to compete for besides the individual medals.

Hans Holmer and William Queal, winners of the recent 20-mile team race at Madison Square Garden, again demonstrated their superiority at long-distance team running at the Garden last night when they carried the stars and stripes to victory in the international team race over the full Marathon distance. Taking the lead in the first lap of the first mile the Americans never gave up the advantage, and they finished more than three laps ahead of St. Yves and Svanberg, the France-Sweden team, which took second money. Their time for the distance was 2:02:16 1-5, which is seven minutes better than the alleged record made by Kolehmainen and Nienimen at Philadelphia some time ago.

Representatives of five teams toed the starting mark, but only three of the five teams finished. The English team, made up of Al Shrubb, the great middle-distance runner, and A. E. Wood, who recently came over here with a fine middle-distance record, had been regarded as favorites, but they did not reach the halfway mark, Shrubb being forced to retire in the early part of the thirteenth mile. Wood ran in half-mile jaunts until near the end of the race in order to figure in the money. The Canadians, Meadows and Woods, had to retire early on account of some foot trouble which overtook Meadows in the fourth mile. Woods had been going fine, but he made no effort to remain in the race after his partner gave up.

Holmer and Queal ran a wonderful race from the start. Queal led the field at the end of the first lap, and the team set the pace to the finish. Near the end of the fourth mile they succeeded in gaining a lap on the entire field, St. Yves and Shrubb being the last to fall, and in the nineteenth they added another full lap. During the last few miles, when the fight was on strong for second place, the Americans kept up the swift pace and drew another lap ahead of the France-Sweden team. Both men finished in good shape. St. Yves and Svanberg, after a great fight to hold the advantage in the last few miles, finished second in 2:04:38 1-5, and Kolehmainen and Nienimen, whose running featured the closing miles, took third money in 2:04:47 4-5, only half a lap behind the France-Sweden pair.

Shrubb and Wood, the English team, were the first to appear for a little workout before the big race. The two were applauded as they ran around the track, Shrubb showing the way to his partner at 8:45 o'clock. Nienimen of the Finland team was the next to go around, and Svanberg of the France-Sweden team followed shortly after. St. Yves, the French Marathoner, who was teamed with Svanberg, was quickly recognized and received considerable applause as he dashed around the boards. The others were content to rest up until the race. It was announced that no relays would be allowed on the first 300 or the last 300 yards, equivalent to one and one-half laps.

St. Yves had the pole when Senator Timothy D. Sullivan started the representatives of the five teams on their way. Kolehmainen of the Finland team drew a position next to the little Frenchman, Woods of the Canadian team was at the middle position, with Shrubb fourth and Queal of the American team on the outside. There was a hot scramble for the leadership at the end of the first lap, and the honor went to Queal, who crossed the starting line a few yards ahead of Woods, the Canadian. Shrubb was close behind, with St. Yves and Kolehmainen drawing up in the order named. The entire first mile saw this order unchanged, although the American team gained considerable ground and the other teams became strung out. The time for the first mile was 3:57, or 3 4-5 seconds better than the mark made by Holmer and Queal in the recent 20-mile race at the Garden.

Throughout the second mile the men held the same relative positions, and although Holmer and Queal continued to hold a commanding lead they were unable to lap any of the teams. The Finland team, which had held last place from the start, was only ten yards ahead of the Americans at the end of two miles. The time for the distance was 8:18 4-5, or 2 3-5 seconds ahead of their previous record. In the first lap of the third mile Kolehmainen of the Finland team fell behind Queal, the American, and before the mile was over the American team had materially gained on the rest of the field. The third mile ended with Holmer and Queal three-quarters of a lap ahead of the field with the record time of 12:42, more than seven seconds ahead of the previous figures. Early in the fourth mile the Canadian team had been lapped, and the team retired from the field. Meadows had been in evident distress for the last mile, and, although Woods was running in fine form, it was useless to attempt further running. In the eighth lap of the fourth mile St. Yves and Shrubb, the last of the field, were forced to fall behind the speedy Americans. The mile ended with only four of the five teams running, in the following order: America, France, Sweden, England, and Finland. The time for the distance was 17:00 4-5, almost eighteen seconds ahead of the record for the distance.

The fifth mile was a repetition of what had gone before. The American team continued to set a record-breaking pace and drew further away from the reduced field. St. Yves and Svanberg, who had jumped into second place early in the third, were next in line, but unable to reduce the one-lap advantage gained in the previous mile. Shrubb and Wood continued to hold third place, but were weakening, and the Finns, Kolehmainen and Nienimen, were gradually closing up the distance which they had fallen behind in the earlier miles. The five-mile mark was passed in 21:28 3-5, almost twenty seconds ahead of the record. All the teams on the floor were holding up splendidly under the grueling pace. St. Yves and Svanberg followed the Americans, Shrubb and Wood were third, and Kolehmainen and Nienimen were in the rear.

The sixth mile, finished in the same order eighteen seconds ahead of the record, saw the gradual dropping back of Shrubb and Wood, and in the seventh mile the Englishmen were passed out by the Finland team. The team which had been picked as the favorite was far from the form expected, and from this stage lost ground consistently. Kolehmainen was in third place when the mile ended, and the Americans were a trifle more than a lap ahead of St. Yves and Svanberg. The time for seven miles was 30:35 4-5, about eleven seconds ahead of the record. The pace was beginning to show and the men were dropping back to a slightly slower pace. The principal interest in the race at this stage were the continual one-lap battle between Queal and Homer and the French team, the four keeping close together and passing one another out on almost every lap. The Americans were one lap ahead, and the Frenchmen were making them travel at top speed to hold the advantage. They proved equal to the task, and the contest lent much of the spectacular to what might otherwise have been an uninteresting race. Kolehmainen and Nienimen were showing much better form than their earlier work had promised and had no trouble keeping ahead of the Englishmen.

The eighth mile was finished in the same order as the seventh, and was marked by the same spirited battle between the American team and the two Frenchmen, who were carrying the battle to the leaders in determined style. In the last lap of this mile Holmer and Queal fell behind the record for the first time since the first lap. The time for eight miles was 35:17 4-5, or 1 4-5 seconds behind the record for the distance. In the ninth mile the leaders fell back 15 seconds more, and in the tenth 8 more seconds were added to the previous loss. The time for ten miles was 44:35, and there was no change in the order. St. Yves and Svanberg were second, Kolehmainen and Nienimen were third, and the English team, Shrubb and Wood, in the rear.

From the eleventh to the fifteenth miles there was no change in the relative positions of the three leaders, neither was there any change in the distance separating the men. The figures began to go further and further above the record and the first lap of the thirteenth mile saw the leaders a full minute behind the record and falling further behind all the time. In the first lap of the thirteenth mile Shrubb was forced to give up and for a time it looked as if the team was out of the race. But after losing three more laps Wood reappeared and announced that he would continue the race alone. This would qualify his team for fourth money, or 10 per cent. of the runners' share of the purse. The going became harder at each lap and the contestants were showing plainly the effects of the record breaking work in the early miles. The fifteen miles were finished in 1:08:35; which time lacks only seven seconds of being two minutes poorer than the record established by Holmes and Queal at the Garden three weeks ago. One lap separated the two leading teams at the end of the fifteenth mile and the Finland team was four laps behind Holmes and Queal. Wood, of the English team, was running alone, retiring every few laps, but always returning to the track, enough to keep his team in the race.

From the fifteenth to the twentieth mile St. Yves and Svanberg lost ground. Gradually the pace set by the Americans wore down St. Yves, and he lost ground on all his relays. His partner, Svanberg, was still running beautifully, but the little French Marathoner seemed unable to do as well as his partner. Gradually the distance between the American and French teams, widened, and in the first half of the nineteenth mile Holmer, running for the Americans, passed St. Yves, making the lead two laps over the field. Kolehmainen and his partner were running fine, and managed to keep pace with the Americans, while the French team was being lapped. At the end of twenty miles Holmer and Queal were two laps ahead of the Frenchmen and four laps ahead of the Finns. The time for twenty miles was 1:32:18 2-5, almost three seconds behind the best team figure for this distance. From the twentieth mile all marks are new figures, as last night's event was the first big team race over the full Marathon distance.

From the twentieth mile to the finish Holmer and Queal managed to remain four laps ahead of the Finns, who did better running in the closing part of the race than in the early miles. They were in much better shape at the finish than St. Yves of the France-Sweden team, and gradually pulled down the two-lap lead which St. Yves and Svanberg held at the twentieth mile. The last three miles showed a great battle by the Finns to capture second money, and they were within a lap of the Frenchman and his partner at the finish. The lead of Holmer and Queal was never threatened in the closing miles and they finished in 2:02:16 1-5. St. Yves and Svanberg, three and one-half laps behind, covered the distance in 2:04:38 1-5, and Kolehmainen and Nienimen, four laps behind the leaders, finished in 2:04:47 4-5.

Gardner Beats Klaus Easily.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Jimmy Gardner of Lowell clearly outclassed and badly defeated Frank Klaus of Pittsburg before the Armory Athletic Association to-night. Gardner received the decision at the end of twelve rounds. Klaus at no time had a lead.

DE ORO CUTS DOWN KEOGH'S BIG LEAD

Champion Now Only Thirty Points Ahead in 600-Point Pool Match.

Jerome Keogh and Alfred De Oro played on even terms in the second block of the 600-point match for the world's pool championship, the score being 201 to 201. The total score for the match is 411 to 381, Keogh gaining his advantage of 30 points on the first night. Last night's match furnished plenty of excitement for the pool enthusiasts, for De Oro toward the end, when it looked as if he was so far behind that he would be easily beaten on the night's play, suddenly showed a reversal of form and played a remarkably skillful game of pool. His high run was 29, while Keogh had a high run of 21.

The champion played his usual steady, slow, tiresome game, and the players were at the table for nearly five hours. This evening's match will begin at 7:30. Both players made difficult combinations and negotiated difficult shots from all angles. De Oro's quick, sharp stroke was a direct contrast to the slow, deliberate stroke of his opponent.

NEW RECORD FOR HOPPE.

Breaks His World's Mark by Making a Run of 155 Points in 18.1 Billiards.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—Willie Hoppe to-night broke the world's record for a high run at 18.1 billiards in his game with Joseph Mayer, the amateur champion of this city, by piling up 155 points. The best previous record of 150 was made by Hoppe four weeks ago in New York.

Hoppe, who is to play 1,800 points at 18.1 to Mayer's 1,400 points at 18.2, now leads in the three blocks play by 442 points, the score being Hoppe, 1,100; Mayer, 658. Hoppe's high run to-night was 155 and his average 31 1-13. Mayer's best run was 42, with an average of 8 4-13. The score to-night was: Hoppe, 404; Mayer, 108.

In the afternoon game Mayer scored 262 points to Hoppe's 296. Hoppe was to play 300 against 250 for Mayer. The latter made a high run of 86, while Hoppe's best effort wa 60. Hoppe's average was 21 2-14, and Mayer's, 17 7-15.

Louderback Beaten by Mason.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Boston again defeated Brooklyn in the match to-night in the National Billiard League three-cushion carrom play. Mason made 50, with a high run of 5, defeating Louderback of Brooklyn, who made 44 with a high run of 3. The play will be continued to-morrow night.

Morin Wins from Maupome.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 29.—Charles Morin of Chicago to-night defeated P. Maupome of St. Louis in the second game of the Chicago-St. Louis series of the National three-cushion billiard tournament. The score was 50 to 28, in 105 innings. Averages—Morin, 77, and Maupome 48.

American Power Boat Meeting.

At a special meeting of the American Power Boat Association held last night at the Waldorf-Astoria, a number of important changes were made in the rules that govern racing and cruising boats.

By unanimous vote of the club representatives present it was decided that hereafter all boats shall be weighed upon scales to be provided at various coastwise and inland ports instead of being measured, as has been the custom. Three limited classes were established. They are for boats 21 feet over all that must weigh 1,600 pounds; 26 feet over all, weighing 2,100 pounds, and 32 feet over all, weighing 2,900 pounds. There is also to be a restricted volume to the cylinders.

AA racing boats hereafter are to be weighed without the crew and 300 pounds added for the crew. All other boats are to be measured with the crew on board. It was recommended that in the future all classes of racing boats shall be started according to handicap, so that the spectators may know that the first boat at the finish line is the winner in her class. The rule relating to equipment is amended to read: "One serviceable anchor and cable and such equipment of lights, whistles, bells, and fog horns as are required by law."

The racing status of the hydroplane was not taken up at the meeting, but it was the general feeling that there should be no restriction placed upon the high-speed boats used for international racing. According to the last report the association now has a membership of 25,000, representing 106 clubs, and new clubs are coming in at the rate of one a week.

Mr. Brush Going South To-day.

Beals Becker, substitute outfielder, and Arthur Fletcher, emergency infielder, sent in their signed contracts for 1911 to the New York National League Club to-day. Manager McGraw of the Giants has changed his plans and will not go South with President Brush, who leaves for San Antonio to-day. He will remain here for the National League meeting on Dec. 13, and probably will be empowered to represent the New York Club at this session.

Garaging Electric Vehicles.

At the first regular meeting of the Electric Vehicle Association of America, which includes in its membership not only manufacturers, but also a large number of users, C. L. Morgan, manager of the Maintenance Department, General Vehicle Company, read a paper on "Proper Garaging of Electric Vehicles." Considerable discussion followed, and various phases of practical service were closely analyzed. There were other subjects discussed, among which were the results and value of the recent commercial vehicle contests.

THE PURE FOOD LAW—A MAGNIFICENT VICTORY

Never was such a law more needed than in this country, nor more welcome than to us, who have suffered enormously from the fraudulent imitation of popular labels. This law, some years ago, would have saved us hundreds of thousands of dollars. Yet, to our amazement, a law designed to protect honest manufacturers no less than the public, was immediately made the pretext for an attack upon our world-wide and previously unimpeached reputation. After a costly contest, lasting four years, we have gained a signal and complete victory: in doing which, we have also shown that the law is the just measure it was intended to be.

We have not, as the public has been led to believe, obstructed the PURE FOOD LAW nor opposed the views of the GOVERNMENT. We have simply resisted a mere Bureau's usurpation of authority, and its novel and preposterous theories, submission to which would have driven us out of the American market.

The story is almost incredible, and difficult to tell briefly; yet, in justice to ourselves, and to the patrons who have remained so splendidly loyal to us, we must outline the facts.

For generations, the one universally recognized impurity of Whisky has been FUSEL OIL, which we have always removed by distillation. The Bureau referred to, as late as 1904, insisted that to be "good for consumption" Whisky must have practically no FUSEL OIL.

Kentucky "Straight Whisky," when new, is rank with FUSEL OIL, but the makers always assured consumers that this noxious impurity was transformed by age into delightful ethers, etc. A few years ago it was found that age makes no change in the FUSEL OIL except to remove its vile odor. The Kentucky distillers, knowing well the aversion to FUSEL OIL, were in desperate straits; so they boldly declared that REAL Whisky new or old, must contain all the FUSEL OIL, and denounced all REFINED WHISKY as a base imitation. And the Bureau backed them up.

This is no pleasantry, but sober fact. CANADIAN CLUB WHISKY was condemned, solely because it contains practically no FUSEL OIL.

Some months ago, President Taft, after a searching investigation by the Solicitor-General, overruled the Bureau completely. Now the Attorney-General has decided that the PURE FOOD LAW does not require our label to be changed by a single letter.

At the WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION in 1893, Dr. H. W. Wiley, then, as now, Chief of the Bureau referred to, reported CANADIAN CLUB to be "pure and fully up to the examination required," and, by authority of Congress, it received an award for "Fine aroma, very pleasant taste, thorough maturity, purity and absence of alien matter," which expresses every excellence any whisky can possess. CANADIAN CLUB is the same now as then.

If any consumers really want FUSEL OIL in their whisky, they should use Kentucky "Straight Whisky:" CANADIAN CLUB will not suit them. All who desire that the PURE FOOD LAW shall be rationally administered, and not as the weapon of any one man, should send for our History of this remarkable case. Please name this paper.

ENDURANCE RUN IN RAIN.

Twenty Cars Checked After Trip to Danbury and Return.

Twenty automobiles made the run yesterday from New York to Danbury and return. It was the first day's trip of a two-day-reliability run under the auspices of the New York Automobile Trade Association. Despite the unfavorable weather conditions, all but two of the cars made the round trip of 136 miles in less than eleven hours. The twenty cars that made the trip were put under control until this morning, when they will make the run to Newburg, N. Y., and back, when the cars will be checked out from the Jersey side of the Forty-second Street Ferry.

The run, which was made without any noteworthy interest, will end to-night, when valuable trophies will be awarded: An additional silver cup, donated by the Dorian Remountable Rim Company, was announced last night. This will make about a dozen trophies to be competed for.

During yesterday's run the Pope-Hartford car, driven by Louis Disbrow, was the only auto in all the controls that was ahead of all the other contestants. It is the same car that competed in the Vanderbilt Cup race, and, in spite of the fact that it did not start from the checking stations until all the contesting cars had left, it was always waiting at the next checking station for the first car.

NATIONAL GOLF TOURNEYS.

Six Clubs in Field to Obtain Three Championships.

Thus far six clubs have sent in applications for next year's National golf championships. Those after the amateur event are the Apawamis Club of Rye, in the Metropolitan Golf Association district; Philadelphia Cricket Club, where the last open championship took place, and the Denver, Col., Country Club. The only applicant for the open is the Essex County Club of Manchester, Mass., where R. E. Hunter won his intercollegiate title last September.

There are no specific applications for the women's championship, but the Nassau Country Club and the Garden City Golf Club have placed their links at the disposal of the United States Golf Association for either of the three title contests.

Nothing has as yet been heard from the Oakmont Country Club of Pittsburg or from the Deal Golf and Country Club of New Jersey. The latter club stated in a letter read at the last United States Golf Association meeting that it would ask for the 1911 amateur competition, while Oakmont is the home of W. C. Fownes, the present titleholder, and has been mentioned as a probable applicant.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., Nov. 29.—The annual court tennis club championship of the Tuxedo Tennis and Racquet Club was decided on the Tuxedo courts to-day, resulting in a victory for Pierre Lorillard, Jr., defeating William B. Dinsmore three sets to one by a score of 6—0, 6—3, 4—6, 6—3.

The match was very exciting from start to finish as each contestant was in fine form, and some of the best tennis of the season was witnessed by a fashionable audience.

The racquet championship matches were also started and reached the final round, leaving Robert D. Wrenn and Erskine Hewitt in the final, which will be played next Saturday. The club handicap matches in both tennis and racquet were also started this week, with some very keen playing. The first round was reached in the racquet tournament, in which Wrenn defeated Erskine Hewitt after some very exciting play after Hewitt had taken the first two games, Wrenn with effective service winning the three following games. The score was 3—15, 6—15, 15—7, 18—17, 15—12.

The semi-finals were reached in the club handicap, leaving C. S. Lee, Richmond Talbot, Pierre Lorillard, Jr., and Frederick Frelinghuysen to fight it out next week.

The annual lawn tennis club championship was won by Clarence C. Pell last week. The summaries:

HAND TENNIS AT N. Y. A. C.

Championship Tourney Begun with Some Good Matches Resulting.

Championship hand tennis was the order of things yesterday at the New York Athletic Club when the series for the H. G. Silleck-B. D. Harned Trophy began. Five matches were played of the eight carded for the first round. Some fast games resulted, the favorites, however, in the respective draws coming through as anticipated. The best series of the afternoon was between E. McHose and J. Mahoney, and saw the former the winner in straight sets, although it looked as though Mahoney would be returned the victor in the first set, in which he was beaten two points.

W. E. McCready and Dr. Kenyon had a long-drawn-out battle in the single game which they played, poor light precluding a continuation of the match. W. D. Bourne had a somewhat easy time with one of the joint donors of the trophy at issue, defeating B. D. Harned in straight sets with the score 25—16, 25—8. The summary:

W. C. Hines, 25—25; Dr. Bogart, 8—11.
W. D. Bourne, 25—25; B. D. Harned, 16—8.
W. E. McCready, 25; Dr. Kenyon, 7.
E. McHose, 25—25; J. Mahoney, 23—8.
F. Olsen, 25—25; Dr. West, 8—13.
Referee—E. J. Giannini.

LYNCH SURE TO STAY.

National League Will Re-Elect Its President, This Time for 3 Years.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 29.—That Thomas J. Lynch will be re-elected President of the National Baseball League without opposition and that this will in all probability be for a term of three years, was the statement made this afternoon by President Herrmann of the Cincinnati Club.

Mr. Herrmann says that he has sounded the magnates who are supposed to be favorable to Mr. Lynch's election and that Mr. Lynch will have enough votes to retain him in the League Presidency for three years. The leader of the League has said that he will not try to be re-elected if the election is for less than three years, and that he would rather have nothing to do with the organization if he cannot have the continued support of the Presidents of the eight clubs for that length of time.

"I think I may safely say that President Lynch's election is now an assured fact," said Herrmann this afternoon.

"He is a remarkable President, and I for one am in favor of his retention to the office for a long period. He is building up the umpiring staff of the National League, and is taking care of the other matters covered by that office. One thing that I admire in him is his fearlessness. Lynch is always on the right side. I shall vote for him, and I know of four other officials who will do likewise. That is enough, isn't it?"

Pitcher Coombs Married.

PALESTINE, Texas, Nov. 29.—John Coombs, pitcher of the Philadelphia American League Baseball Club, was married to-night to Miss May Russ of this city. The couple left later for Cuba.

Neal Ball Released to Portland.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 29.—Neal Ball, utility infielder of the Cleveland baseball club, who acquired fame in the 1909 season by making a triple play unassisted, was released to-day to the Portland, Ore., club. He formerly played with the New York American League club.

Gargan to Coach Rutgers Again.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 29.—Howard Gargan, who coached the Rutgers College football team this season and turned out the best eleven the college had had in years, has signed a contract with the Rutgers Athletic Association to serve as football coach for the next three years. This action on the part of the association meets with the hearty approval of both the alumni and the undergraduates.

Sprackling Is Brown's Captain.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 29.—William Earl Sprackling, '12, of Cleveland, was elected Captain of next year's Brown University football team to-day. Sprackling has played three years on the team and this year is the choice of most of the football experts of the country for quarter back on the "All-American" eleven.

Capablanca Beats 16 at Chess.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 29.—Jose R. Capablanca, the celebrated Cuban chess expert, played seventeen men at the Hotel Griswold, defeating sixteen opponents and losing the remaining game in the remarkably short time of 1 hour and 25 minutes. So rapidly did he go from board to board that his adversaries could not give their moves due deliberation, and were therefore quickly disposed of. The Cuban, who is trying hard to break the world's record for simultaneous play, is now ahead of the record, having a score to date of 49 wins, 1 loss, and 1 draw. Many prominent residents of the city who are interested in the royal game were present and seemed greatly to enjoy the facility with which the clever Cuban took the measure of his opponents.

Chess Game Adjourned Again.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—Play was resumed to-day in the eighth game of the championship chess match between D. Janowski and Emanuel Lasker. This game was adjourned Monday evening when Janowski seemed to have a winning chance, but in the play to-day Lasker equalized matters, and when a second adjournment was declared it was expected a draw will eventually result. The score: Lasker, 4; Janowski, none; drawn, 3.

INDOOR SWIMMING MEET.

Large Crowd Attends Opening at Interior Baths—Water Polo Features.

The indoor swimming season of 1910-11 was opened in New York last night when the Deal Beach Swimming Club held a meet at the Interior Baths, 232 West Sixtieth Street. A crowd of at least 1,000 persons including 400 women, attended the opening.

The feature of the evening was the water polo game between the New York A. C. team and a sextet composed of Columbia graduates and present 'Varsity players, which was won by the boys from the New York A. C. by the score of 10 goals to 0. The All-Star team proved to be no match for the New York A. C. and was outclassed all the way. Handley and Goodwin of the New York A. C. team played splendid water polo, each scoring three goals. Ruddy and Trubenbach also played a good game, each scoring 2 points. American polo rules governed the contest.

R. Behren of Germany, who finished second in the fancy diving contest at the Olympic games in London, did not put in an appearance last night. He was scheduled to make his American début in the fancy diving event. The entry list was very large, and splendid competition was the result. The summaries:

60-Yard Swim, (Novice.)—Won by L. Dinkelspiel, Columbia University; D. Culhane, St. Monica's Lyceum, second; B. Prenholn, De Witt Clinton H. S., third. Time—0:38 2-5.
60-Yard Swim, (Handicap.)—Won by R. Edmans, (8 seconds,) De Witt Clinton H. S.; H. O'Sullivan (6 seconds,) New York A. C., second; C. Ash, (5 seconds,) Newark Y. M. C. A., third. Time—0:33 4-5.
200-Yard Dash, (Handicap.)—Won by J. Manley, (24 seconds,) the New York A. C.; N. Neried, (11 seconds,) New York A. C., second; H. B. Rogers, (29 seconds,) Townsend Harris Hall H. S., third. Time—2:34 2-5.
Fancy Diving.—Won by J. H. Reilly, New York A. C., 62 1-3 points; A. McAleenan, New York A. C., 58¼ points; R. Paterson, Columbia University, third, 52¼ points.
Water Polo.—Won by New York A. C., 10 goals; All-Star team, 0.

MOORE MAY BEAT ATTELL.

Philadelphian Has Advantage in Weight, But Champion Is Clever.

Is Abe Attell to be the next of the noted boxing masters to meet his Waterloo? Many people fear that Attell, the featherweight champion for many years, will hit the boards to-night at the Fairmont Athletic Club when he starts to swap punches with Pal Moore. Attell has fought strong and clever boys in the past, but never before has he tackled a lad that, on past performances, shapes up as formidable as Pal Moore. Attell is going against a boy that is now good enough to hold the lightweight title, and probably will be the champoin within a short time.

Attell is giving away about eight pounds in weight, a tremendous handicap when meeting a boxer of Moore's ability. But Abe is confident that he can stand off the Philadelphian through his cleverness and ability to hit. Moore will want to rough it from the start. Attell, on the other hand, will box as carefully as he always does.

Jimmy De Forrest, who handles Moore, is a very conservative trainer. He never boasts, but this time he sincerely believes that Moore will win. He says that Attell's "dope" is all wrong. Abe says that Jimmy Walsh won a decision over Moore, while Attell stopped Walsh in eight rounds. The main bout to-night will be staged at 10 o'clock.

Star Bout at Long Acre A. C.

The star bout of the Long Acre A. C. tomorrow night between Joe Seiger, better known as the Iron Man, and Young Otto promises to be a slashing good bout from bell to bell. Many persons have in the past predicted that Otto will make a champion if properly handled and this was proved in his last fight, in which Dannie McKetrick advised and made him put up a game fight against Lew Powell. Seiger has never been knocked out and is a rugged fighter, continually boring in on his opponent without a let up. If both men are in condition and fight up to their reputations there is not the least doubt that the entire membership will go away satisfied. Seiger has never been in the land of dreams, although he has met many of the best men in his class. Otto is of the belief that a man must be knocked out some time during his career and he believes he will be the one to accomplish the deed when the pair meet to-morrow.

Substitute Bout at Sharkey A. C.

Jeff Doherty, the New Haven welterweight, who was matched to meet "Unk" Russell of Philadelphia in the star bout of the Sharkey A. C. stag to-night, notified the management that he would be unable to appear and the officials had to cancel the bout. Manager Buckley had to arrange another bill which, it is expected, will meet with favor by the members of the club. He engaged Marty Brown, a promising featherweight, to box Dick Thomas in the final number of the card, and as both boys are willing and aggressive boxers, the bout should be productive of a good finish. Jeff Smith, the Bayonne fighter, who has always give a good account of himself in the ring, will meet Battling Larry in a return match in the semi-final. Harry Engle will box Mike Carroll in a six-round contest, and two other preliminaries will constitute the programme.

Moran and Stagg at Metropolitan.

Jimmy Moran, the Brooklyn featherweight, and Tommy Stagg of Philadelphia will meet in the ten-round final bout at the Metropolitan Athletic Club to-morrow night. In the semi-final Joe Allen will meet Al Dundee in a ten-round bout. There will be several preliminaries to these two main contests.

Young Wagner Defeats Jack Doyle.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 29.—Young Wagner of New York outpointed Jack Doyle of Philadelphia in a ten-round fight before the Greenwood Athletic Club there to-night. Wagner was faster and cleverer, and showed his superiority all the way.

Wrestling Carnival at Palace.

The wrestling carnival at Grand Central Palace on Friday night has aroused interest among the local lovers of the grappling game, and the contesting champions are all in hard training to make the matches of a calibre that will re-establish the sport in the metropolis. The promoters are banking upon hard fought contests. There will be no hippodroming, as Charlie White will immediately retire from the mat any grappler not doing his best and observing the rules.

Tom Jenkins, who is to be one of Zbysko's opponents, sent word to Joe Humphreys yesterday that he is in fine condition. Tom has been training for the past two months at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson. This will be his first appearance sice his memorable match with Mahmout at the Garden two years ago, and his many admirers and old-time friends will turn out to see the American favorite compete against the best man that Europe has turned out since the days of the powerful Yousoff.

Joe Rogers and George Bothner are hard at work at Brown's Gymnasium. Johnny Niflot is training at Columbia University. Will Bingham, his opponent, has been getting himself in shape at his own place at Broadway and Twenty-sixth Street. Prof. Childs, who wrestles Bingham Jiu-Jitsu style, also will give a good demonstration.

Basket Ball at West Point.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 29.—Cadet Neil Finch, manager of the army basket ball team, gave out to-day the schedule for the season which will open Saturday in a game with Manhattan College. The army team last year was the best that West Point ever turned out, and for their exceptional record the athletic council awarded them the letter "A," something never done before.

Of this strong aggregation, Capt. Milliken, forward, and Jones, centre, have graduated, but Surles, Arnold, and Morris are again in the game, and with some fifty new candidates the army should have a good team this year. Lieut. Joseph Stillwell is again coaching the men. The army has this year again been unsuccessful in getting a game with Columbia University, but the majority of the "Big Six" will play the cadets, all the games taking place at West Point. The completion of the new gymnasium gives the cadets two fine courts. Heretofore only one was available, that in the old building. The schedule follows:

Dec. 3, Manhattan; Dec. 10, Trinity; Dec. 17, Penn State; Jan. 7, Union; Jan. 14, Princeton; Jan. 21, Swarthmore; Jan. 28, Yale; Feb. 4, University of Pennsylvania; Feb. 11, Colgate; Feb. 18, Rochester; Feb. 22, Dickinson; Feb. 25, New York University.

Columbia Basketball Dates.

The basketball season at Columbia will open on Friday, Dec. 2, when Trinity plays at Morningside Heights. The team is out again for the intercollegiate championship and large squad has been working out under Coach Harry A. Fisher. The schedule for the season is: Dec. 9, Georgetown; Dec. 16, Penn State; Jan. 7, Cornell, at Ithaca; Jan. 11, Princeton; Jan. 14, Wesleyan; Jan. 17, Princeton, at Princeton; Jan. 20, Cornell; Feb. 9, Carlisle; Feb. 13, Pennsylvania; Feb. 17, Yale; Feb. 22, New York University; Feb. 28, Yale, at New Haven; March 4, Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia.

FLY MODELS AEROPLANES.

Frank Hader with Biplane Wins Competition in Y. M. H. A. Gymnasium.

Frank Hader with an originally designed biplane yesterday won the model aeroplane competition in the gymnasium of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, Ninety-second Street and Lexington Avenue. Hader's model flew 198 feet and outclassed the other fourteen models. Jerome Jacoby, with a Bieriot monoplane, was second with 165 feet, while Victor Eye, who entered a Wright biplane model, was placed third with a distance of 160 feet. Jules Menken exhibited a miniature Antoinette and was credited with 145 feet, securing fourth position.

Fifteen schoolboys flew their models, several of which were unique in design. The event is competed for once every two months and is open to all boys of the high and public schools in Manhattan Borough. Hader's flight has never been beaten in these competitions.

Turf Victory for Widener.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—The Prix Gar de Feu, run at Auteuil to-day, was won by J. E. Widener's Petropolis III.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

WHEAT.—The impetus toward lower prices was again received from Liverpool cables, which were decidedly lower than anticipated. Their market was a reflection of bearish news factors including freer Argentine offerings, fine weather for harvesting in that country, and weakness in spot markets which exceeded the decline scored in futures. A summary relative to foreign crop conditions was also published by Broomhall, which in the main was highly favorable, reporting rapid progress having been made toward the completion of seeding operations in many of the important countries. It was also said that the Australian yield would be a good one, with prospects of a seventy-five-million-bushel outturn. In response to this array of bearish news our markets opened with general losses of approximately ½c. An absence of pressure was noted, however, on the decline, and bears were not disposed to press their advantage with the market showing a surprisingly firm undertone. There was a good deal of buying by local operators in anticipation of a bullish Bradstreet's statement and also on continuation of dry weather in many ports of the American Southwest. Offerings tended to increase on the small bulge, with selling by Western elevator interests, and some pressure also developed when private reports were received stating that precipitation was falling in different parts of the Winter wheat belt. Bradstreet's showed a decrease for the week of 2,740,000 bushels in the world's visible against an increase of 2,112,000 bushels in last week's and an increase of 1,748,000 bushels a year ago. World's stocks at present aggregate to approximately 45,000,000 more than last year. Receipts so far this year at principal primary points amount to 1,738,000 bushels, with shipments for the same period 935,000 bushels. These totals are almost identical with the amounts given last week, although exports from Seaboard ports were 229,000, against only 65,000 bushels last week. In the late trading the market again recovered to about last night's final influenced by reports of sale of No. 2 red Winter wheat to France from Baltimore amounting to 120,000 bushels, and also on a decided improvement in the cash markets at the Northwest and Southwest. While it is true that many interests are not disposed to buy, owing to fears of unloading on the part of bulls, it is apparent that there is also an absence of bear leadership in the market at present. Export sales amounted to 312,000 bushels, of which 96,000 bushels was Manitoba wheat from New York and the balance the No. 2 Red referred to above. Cash quoted No. 2 red, 96c, elevator, and 95½c, free on board, afloat, for export; No. 2 hard Winter, $1.00⅞; No. 1 Northern Spring, $1.15, and No. 1 Manitoba, $1.03¼.

CORN.—Decided firmness prevailed throughout the entire session, and while the opening was slightly easier with wheat the same sort of buying which has been in evidence the past several days again made itself felt. Weather conditions are favorable and country advices of a bearish tenor, but these factors are having but little influence with the general inclination among large interests to cover shorts. Probably the fair export business doing from day to day is having effect, but at all events a marked degree of stubbornness is being displayed. The close was firm at the best of the session, with the steadiness of the cash situation despite free offerings favorably commented upon. Bradstreet's for the week decreased slightly over 1,000,000 bushels, against a decrease of 301,000 last week and an increase of 1,017,000 a year ago. Export sales amounted to 112,000. Cash No. 2, free on board, afloat, for export quoted at 52c.

OATS.—The market was firm with other grain and on the fair cash demand reported. While large interests are talking "liquidation" they seem to be buying, and this with other short covering is imparting a good undertone to the dealings. Bradstreet's decreased for the week 275,000 bushels, against 333,000 bushels decrease last week and 200,000 bushels increase a year ago. Cash standards quoted at 37¾c, No. 2 white 38¼c, and No. 3 white 37¼c.

PROVISIONS.—Easiness prevailed at the outset on free offerings from packers, but later there was considerable covering of shorts by commission houses, with but little opposition shown toward the advance. The strength in corn had a sympathetic effect.

COTTONSEED OIL.

A slightly higher range of values was established in the oil market during yesterday's session. While the same interests that were instrumental toward the decline of the previous day were selling, offerings were in smaller volume, and there appeared to be sufficient buying by local operators and shorts to impart a fairly good undertone to the trade. It was first-notice day for December delivery, but there were practically no tenders in circulation, although it is expected that deliveries for the month will be in fair volume. It is also said that large refining interests which have been liquidating quite freely during the past several days will be liberal tenderers during the Winter, it being asserted that, owing to the inability to dispose of oil more advantageously, the future market was resorted to. Crude oil in the meanwhile is featureless, with the light offerings counteracted by the absence of demand.

COTTON.

Yesterday's heavy selling was continued this morning by Wall Street, ring traders and commission houses. Stop loss orders were reached and quite general realizing developed, with Liverpool cables lower than due. This selling continued until our market was from 15 to 18 points lower than last night's closing figures, but at this point the market turned stronger with general covering of shorts and buying by large spot interests and southern speculators. The market continued to improve throughout the day and closed about 8 points higer than last night. Southern spot markets continued comparatively firm and were unchanged to ⅛ down, with many bullish dispatches received from southern cities. Business at Manchester was reported very optimistically, with prices improving on yarns and cloths. The trade is still very much mixed in regard to the size of the crop, but the bullish estimates seem to be predominating. The preliminary estimate of the Mercantile Cotton Crop Reporting Association was given out yesterday. The report was made up from two different kinds of replies, one by counties and the other by States. The replies by counties indicate a crop of 10,437,000 bales and the replies by States indicate a crop of 10,768,000 bales. The official report will be given out on Monday. This document had some effect; although there is still nervousness, as to how much of a bullish showing has already been discounted.

Late spot advices were somewhat conflicting There seems little doubt that just at present the American mills are not heavy buyers, but on the other hand the South is only selling sparingly and there is no great weight on the market. Receipts in the South are much larger at all ports and interiors points than at the same time last year, yet prices at the same points hold very firm. New York spot cotton quiet, 10 advance; middling uplands, 15.10; gulf, 15.35.

COFFEE.

Coffee showed an absence of aggressive operations either way. The market was narrow and easily influenced, but the undertone was rather nervous. At the opening prices were 5 to 10 points lower, but the cables later showed a somewhat steadier feeling, and the close was steady at a net decline of 3 to 8 points, with sales of 39,500 bags. Havre was ½f to 1f lower early, and prices regained part of the loss, and at the close was net unchanged to ½f lower, while Hamburg after declining ½ to ¾ pfennigs regained ¼, and at the close was ¼@½ net lower. Rio was steady and unchanged, while Santos was inactive at 100 reis decline.

CANAL BONDS FOR INVESTORS

Future Panama Issues Not to Be Used for National Bank Circulation.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—It is the desire of Secretary MacVeagh that any future issues of Panama bonds shall not be used as a basis for National bank circulation, but that they shall bear a rate of interest which will make them attractive to investors.

Secretary MacVeagh and Assistant Secretary A. Piatt Andrew are strongly of opinion that any issue in future ought to be at a rate which would cause the bonds to be absorbed by investors for their earning power without regard to any special privilege. No issue is likely at present.

The Treasury Department is not in favor of any inflation of National bank currency by means of bond issues at this time, in view of the possibility of a change in the banking laws. Mr. MacVeagh is now pursuing an investigation of the selling price and the earning power of the leading issues of other countries, and is in correspondence with bankers throughout the country to ascertain the proper rate at which United States bonds could be issued and absorbed for investment purposes, without regard to the National bank circulation privilege.

The Payne-Aldrich Tariff act fixed the rate of interest of future issues of Panama bonds at a rate not exceeding 3 per cent.

French rentes, which have a present market price of 97.97, bearing 3 per cent., earn 3.06. German imperial loan 3s, with a present market price of 83, earn 3.61. United States 4s, of the present issue, with a market price of 115¼, earn 2.70. English Consols, bearing 2½ per cent. at the present price of 79, earn 3.16.

After the investigation is completed, the Treasury expects to know whether the credit of the United States, when divorced from the circulation privilege, is substantially higher than that of England, Germany, or France, and to what extent.

If any future issues of Panama bonds are to be made and exempted from National bank circulation privileges, it will require legislation, which Secretary MacVeagh may recommend.

This will go to 64,869 holders of the company's stock, of whom 30,327 are women. All but 617 of the shareholders have filed permanent dividend orders with the company, which is pointed to as an indication of the extent to which stock in the Pennsylvania Railroad is held for permanent investment.

SUGAR TRUST CHANGES.

The American Sugar Refining Company announced yesterday that Joseph A. Ball, who has been connected with the corporation since its formation, and was with the old Boston Sugar Company from 1880 when he was taken into the trust in 1891, had been made assistant to President Thomas.

Judson Lounsbury, who has been in the sales department for fourteen years, has been put at the head of that department.

STEEL MEN MEET TO-DAY.

One of the Periodical Gatherings to Discuss Trade Conditions.

Another of the periodical meetings of the leading steel and iron interests will convene to-day at the Railroad Club at the invitation of E. H. Gary of the United States Steel Corporation. The last meeting held after the close of the dullest Summer season that the trade has had since the recovery from the panic was heralded as foreshadowing a general cut in steel prices. Nothing of the sort then happened, and after the meeting Judge Gary issued a reassuring statement describing steel conditions as on the whole satisfactory.

When the news became current yesterday that steel men were gathering for another meeting to-day stories of a forthcoming cut in steel prices were again revived, but there has been no intimation of any such intention on the part of the leading steel interest and, on the contrary, Directors of the United States Steel Corporation have said within the last few days that orders had improved compared with a few weeks ago.

Besides Chairman Gary and President W. E. Corey of the Steel Corporation the heads of its subsidiary companies will attend the meeting and luncheon. Representatives of most of the independent producers will take part in the general discussion of trade conditions, which has been the main purpose of these meetings.

Come See the Hudson "33"

Howard E. Coffin's Masterpiece

The One Different Car

The one different automobile for 1911 can now be seen.

It is the HUDSON "33."

You remember, it is Howard E. Coffin's masterpiece. This is the car for which orders for more than 10,000—a year's output—were received before a single model was shown. The dealers—the shrewdest automobile buyers of America—deposited hundreds of thousands of dollars and cast their business future with this car, just because of their confidence in Howard E. Coffin's ability to add his fifth great advancement in motor car designing.

It is not surprising that they did this.

No man is better known for the successes he has produced. No designer ever built more famous cars. Four, before the advent of this, his greatest car! Each marked an epoch in motordom. Each pushed standards up and brought costs down.

He designed race cars that made history in speed contests. He built cars that successfully went through the most severe reliability runs without a penalty. He learned by these tests. He devised new and simple, inexpensive ways for building better cars than were known before. That experience has resulted in the HUDSON "33"—a car without any "bugs" or "kinks" that must be "ironed out" such as is common to most new models, as time develops an unexpected weakness or an overlooked detail.

Such skill and such experience as Howard E. Coffin possesses made possible the HUDSON "33."

It was the confidence of the trade that has seen each of his cars take the lead of others in their time that inspired them to buy "sight unseen," as it were. It was just such knowledge of his ability that sent other cars—that for two and three years had held popular positions without material change or improvement—into a lower price class.

First Cost Practically Last Cost

But the greatest advancement is in the provision made for keeping down operation cost. Repairs, constant adjustment—all the annoying and expensive attention usually required has to a material degree been eliminated in the HUDSON "33."

First, this has been accomplished by reducing the number of parts used in the chassis of the average car selling at $2,000 and under by approximately 900. The valves are concealed in dust proof, oil tight chambers. There is no exposed mechanism. Simplicity, staunchness, tremendous power, wonderful quietness and beauty are also noticeable.

But accessibility contributes greatest to the low up-keep cost. Most motor owners have experienced enormous repair charges resulting from the necessity to dismantle the car in order to make what should have been a simple adjustment or repair.

Haven't you seen mechanics—at 60c and 75c an hour—fumble for twenty to thirty minutes, endeavoring to tighten up an inaccessible nut? Such expense is never possible with the HUDSON "33." Every nut is accessible. Every part is made to withstand wear and to render attention of rare requirement. But when replacement is necessary it can be made direct and without disturbing the entire car.

You Can Now See the Car

We have a HUDSON "33" here to show you. Come in and let us point out to you all the details that make this car different from others. Let us show you how the absence of a fan reduces noise and eliminates many possibilities for trouble. Take a ride in the car. We will be glad to show you how its flexible motor gives a pleasure in driving never before associated in a car at this price.

Since experienced buyers have put up hundreds of thousands of dollars just because they know that Howard E. Coffin's cars are the last word in motordom, don't you think you should at least examine the HUDSON "33" before you choose any car? It will not delay the delivery of the car you finally select—it may save you much expense and many regrets.

RECOVERY WAS IRREGULAR

Short Covering Extensive—Money Market Ease Leads Bankers Here to Put Out Millions Abroad.

As was to be expected the really vigorous buying in yesterday's recovery of prices from Monday's slump came from speculators short of the market. Among the leading shares, including Union Pacific, Reading, United States Steel, and Lehigh Valley, the rebound carried prices forward 2 points or thereabouts, while elsewhere through the list the irregularity of the recovery was illustrated by the varying, although in all cases much smaller increases. There was little evidence of further liquidation, and such selling of this character as went on was cared for by the short covering noted. The tendency of the market was toward quiet; transactions in the first hour alone made up practically one-half of the day's total dealings of some 575,000 shares. The weakness in General Electric and Westinghouse Electric issues was directly traceable to the day's reports regarding the investigation into the affairs of these concerns by the Government for the purpose of the institution of suits under the anti-trust law, but as a rule the day's developments favored the market. This was especially true of the prediction of Inter-State Commerce Commissioner Clements that a decision in the railroad rate cases might be reached by Jan. 31, while encouragement was also derived from the announcement by the Pennsylvania of the placing of rail orders involving 150,000 tons, an amount slightly below the takings of the present year, but above the average of other years. Late in the day it was made known that representatives of the leading steel companies are to hold a formal conference here to-day in accordance with their custom, and interest was, of course, keen regarding the upshot of the meeting.

Undoubtedly the most significant happening of the day was the movement among the large international banking houses to put out funds in loans on European markets. One of the largest of these houses has placed above $5,000,000 in London and Berlin within the past few days, the money being secured by Stock Exchange collateral as a rule, with the loans running for the most part to the close of the present year, with the prospect of renewals. It appears that these advances command from 5 to 5½ per cent., whereas on similar security little if anything above 4 per cent. can be obtained in this market. It is obvious from this brief recital of the facts in this movement that the money market position here at the moment is extremely easy, with every promise of a continuance of this condition, and it is perhaps not too much to reason from this that within a comparatively short time we shall have again a satisfactory bond market. Further engagements of gold for shipment to San Francisco and to Canada were made, amounting in all to a trifle less than $1,000,000, the addition of this sum bringing the total lost by the banks to the Sub-Treasury since Friday last to $5,170,000. These movements are seasonable, and the factors creating them will very shortly have been satisfied.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Tuesday.

Stocks were offered rather freely on the Consolidated Stock Exchange on the late afternoon advance, this imparting relative softness to the market at the close, compared with the New York Stock Exchange. This reflected a disposition on the part of the professional element on the floor to oppose any further improvement, although early in the day the general floor tendency was to cover shorts. Business was on a large scale, with the transactions totaling 92,760 shares and fifty-five different stocks represented on the list.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—Opening at 90¼, Lehigh Valley was just 1½ points above the New York quotation, which in the initial dealings was 179½. Later the parity became closer. Now that Lehigh Valley has become an arbitrage stock it is interesting to note that U. S. Steel has reassumed its position as the most active issue on the local Stock Exchange. As for the general tone, it was quiet and firm. Lake Superior improved a fraction. United Gas Improvement hardened slightly, and this was also true of Philadelphia Electric, but the Tractions merely marked time during the session.

CHICAGO STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Pool activity in Illinois Brick shares on the local Exchange to-day occasioned much criticism of the manner in which that stock has been manipulated of late. There have been no developments, it is declared, to cause any pronounced movement in Brick stock, and yet frequently of late it has gone up or down 10 or 12 points, according to which way those engaged in the manipulation might be in a position to profit. Officials of the company, it is said, are not in sympathy with these fluctuations because they tend to make the stock unpopular with investors. The price to-day jumped 5 points to 70 and then reacted somewhat. Other local stocks were only fairly active.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

U. P. Stock and Paris Listing.

Reports circulated in Wall Street yesterday that the plan to list Union Pacific stock in Paris had been definitely abandoned brought out the definite statement from interests close to the Union Pacific that neither the Union Pacific nor its banking affiliations had ever taken seriously the suggested listing of the road's stock on the Paris Bourse. The proposal has been advanced by certain Paris banking interests half a dozen times within the last two years, and never has the suggestion taken a form which gained for it even the interested attention of those closest to the road. One reason for this was that in connection with the plan to apply to the Paris Bourse for the listing of the stock options on large blocks of the stock were sought, and these the company could not give and the large holders of the stock did not care to give. In case of the efforts which were made to list Steel on the Paris Bourse an option on a large block of Steel common was given at a price which enabled the French bankers to exercise it and make a large profit, despite the collapse of the plan to have the stock listed in Paris. In the case of the Union Pacific the French bankers found it impossible to obtain the options they sought.

A Record Quotation.

Old-timers in Wall Street were at a loss to recall any such quotation for a stock as was given on the tape yesterday for Mahoning Coal Railroad, 500 bid, offered at 1,000. Not since the day of the Northern Pacific panic on May 9, 1901, has the Exchange seen as high a figure as 1,000 in a quotation for a railroad stock. That the bid price was 500 points under the offered price was pointed to by some as proof of the caution which buyers of stocks are disposed to show just at present, but even the bid of 500, though it was hundreds of points under the offered price, represented an advance of 50 points over the last previous bid, which for a number of days stood at 450 with no stock offered. There has not been a sale of Mahoning Coal Railroad on the Stock Exchange since July, 1896. In that month it sold between 101¾ and 108. Since then a good deal has happened to put up the quotation on the stock. For one thing, the road declared last year, in addition to its usual 12 per cent. dividend on the common stock, an extra dividend of 50 per cent., making a total of 62 per cent. paid on this stock in 1909. The company owns seventy miles of railway in Ohio which is leased to the Lake Shore in perpetuity. The Lake Shore owns a majority of the Mahoning Coal Railroad's stock, and the Vanderbilt interests are the reputed owners of most of the balance. The company has $661,367 of preferred stock upon which 5 per cent. dividends are paid, and $1,500,000 common stock.

Pennsylvania Order Liberal.

The announcement yesterday of the Pennsylvania Railroad's order for rails for 1911 delivery was encouraging because of its going above the proportions accepted in the Street. Gossip had named the Pennsylvania order at 140,000 tons, and the news from Philadelphia was 10,000 tons better than the expectation. The New York Central order for next year, which has been estimated at 100,000 tons, was reported placed late in the day, but no confirmation of the news was obtainable.

As is customary the Pennsylvania order is divided among the steel producers along its own lines—the Steel Corporation, the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the Lackawanna Steel Company, and, of course, the Pennsylvania and Cambria companies. The New York Central orders usually go in large part to the Illinois Steel Company and the Carnegie of the United States Steel interest and the Lackawanna.

Express Stocks Weak.

The express strike, but perhaps more potently the growing momentum of the parcels post agitation, has not been without its effect on the stocks of the big express companies. The American and Adams have been the least affected, but substantial losses have been made in the shares of the United States and Wells Fargo companies. Both are now selling at the lowest levels of the year. The Wells Fargo shares lost 13 points yesterday on sales of 260 shares, closing at 150, which is 36 points below the high level touched in January. The decline in United States shares yesterday was only 4½ points, but at 95, the closing price, the stock is 50 points down from the year's high level, also touched in January.

The news from Washington yesterday giving Attorney General Wickersham as ready to file a petition against the "Electric Trust" along the same lines as those adopted against the American Sugar Refining Company, the American Tobacco Company, and the Standard Oil Company was practically without effect on the shares. The shares of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company closed ⅝ up, and the General Electric stock showed a loss of only ⅜. The managements of the two companies have hitherto regarded the attitude of the Federal authorities with equanimity, professing to have received an unofficial clean bill of health. They arrest that their only agreement is in the matter of patent rights and that, as far as business goes, they have been the keenest sort of competitors. The fight between the direct and alternating current systems of the two concerns for recognition in railway electrification, as exemplified by the complications involved in the differing equipment of the New Haven and the New York Central at the Grand Central Station, is pointed to by the officials of the companies as evidence of good faith.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Senator Root Sells His Park Avenue Residence—The Old Hotel Raleigh to be Replaced by a Loft—Bronx and Suburban Realty Active.

The feature of yesterday's realty market was the sale of the residence of United States Senator Elihu Root at the southeast corner of Park Avenue and Seventy-first Street for about $350,000. Further details will be found in another column.

Several other important transactions were announced, among them being the sale of the old Raleigh Hotel property at 663 and 665 Broadway, opposite Bond Street.

The Bronx market continued strong and active, another block front being sold to a builder for improvement, while in the loft section there were a number of big leases, one of which was for five years at $50,000 a year.

Loft to Replace Hotel Raleigh.

The famous Broadway landmark, known in recent years as the Raleigh Hotel, occupying a plot 50 by 200 at 663 and 665 Broadway, and running through to 220 and 222 Mercer Street, has been purchased by the 663-665 Broadway Company, of which Harry Fischel is President, with offices at 63 Park Row. The new owners are having plans prepared for the erection on the site of a high class twelve-story fireproof commercial building, which is to be ready for occupancy by January, 1912. Work, it was said yesterday, would begin early next Spring.

The property was purchased from the Robert Fulton Company, which acquired it from the Stephen Whitney estate a little less than a year ago in exchange for an apartment house on the northeast corner of Riverside Drive and Ninety-fifth Street. The Raleigh Hotel adjoins the Broadway Central Hotel on the north. It has been used for hotel purposes under various names for over half a century.

The new owners announced that the Broadway store, the basement, and subbasement have been leased from the plans to a large millinery firm for a long term of years, a fact which seems to indicate the readiness of commercial firms to remain in the middle Broadway district provided proper buildings are provided for them in that section, which for a long time has shown little activity in building operations.

Buyers for Private Dwellings.

The Operating Realty Company has sold 171 East Eightieth Street, a three-story and basement brownstone private residence, 16.8 by 102.2. The purchaser intends to make extensive alterations for his own occupancy.

L. J. Phillips & Co. are reported to have sold for Mary L. B. Neathing 267 West Seventy-second Street, a four-story dwelling, on lot 25 by 100. The buyer will occupy the house.

Buys Harlem Apartments.

Henry Marks and Casper Levy have bought from the Ericson Realty Company the two five-story apartment houses at 51 and 53 St. Nicholas Avenue, between 112th and 113th Streets, on plot 63.4 by 124 feet.

Flats Traded for Dwelling.

Goldberg & Goldberg have sold, through Emanuel Simon, 949 Second Avenue, a four-story single flat, with stores, on a lot 20 by 66. The buyer, Barnard Kold, gave in part payment 174 East 117th Street, a three-story private dwelling, on a lot 16 by 100.

Another Bronx Block Front Sold.

Another Bronx block front, the second this week, was sold yesterday by Stephen B. Ayres for J. Lawrence Davis.

The parcel, which is known as Plots 66 and 67, on Tremont Terrace, has frontages of 440 feet, largely on the new Westchester Avenue. Frank J. Marvin, the buyer, will cut the property up into building lots and improve.

Bronx Sales.

Epstein & Yarfitz have sold for Louis M. Jones the plot 100 by 139 by irregular, on the east side of Mott Avenue, 100 feet north of 144th Street. The buyer is a builder, who will erect two five-story apartment houses, with stores.

The Kane Construction Company has purchased from the West Bronx Realty Company the plot 50 by 141.8, east side of Sedgwick Avenue, adjoining Washington Bridge Park on the north; also, a plot 50 by 100, east side of Sedgwick Avenue, adjoining the park on the south, and a plot, 100 by 114, on the west side of Boscobel Avenue, north of 169th Street. The above parcels were given in exchange for the two six-story flats on the south side of 142d Street, 225 feet east of Lenox Avenue, on plot 75 by 99.11, which were reported sold last week.

Max Just has purchased, through T. A. Wilson, the southwest corner of 237th Street and White Plains Road, being in size 75 by 81.

John A. Steinmetz has resold for S. R. Waldron to J. Hilbring 1,851 McGraw Avenue, corner of Tremont Avenue, a two-family brick house and barn, on plot 50 by 100.

David Leitner has sold for Mrs. E. Badger to L. Dorfman a four-story double flat at 748 Westchester Avenue.

New Jersey Sales.

Jacob Schnitzer has sold to Charles S. Niblett the property on the southeast corner of Bergen and Communipaw Avenues, Jersey City. The property consists of a three-story frame building covering the entire plot, and has a frontage of 52 feet on Communipaw Avenue, 69 feet on Bergen Avenue, and contains four stores on first floor and eight apartments above.

The Equitable Life Assurance Society of Manhattan has sold to John C. Eisele and Nathan King of Newark a plot of four lots, located on the easterly side of Avenue C, between West Second and West Third Streets, Bayonne. The property has a frontage of 100 feet on Avenue C and a depth of 144 feet.

Albert Losel has bought from the estate of the late Thomas Rehill the brick store and apartment house 469 Grove Street, between Seventh and Eighth Streets. The building contains two stores on the ground floor and eight apartments on the four upper floors. The price paid is reported at $15,500.

The Valencia Boat Club, the oldest rowing club in Hoboken, has purchased from Otto Lehman 1,036 Park Avenue, between Tenth and Eleventh Streets, Hoboken. The property consists of a three-story brick house, with a frontage of 30 feet on Park Avenue, and a depth of 100 feet. Extensive alterations will be made to the buildings.

New Realty Company.

The Realty Development and Improvement Company has been incorporated under the laws of New Jersey with a capital of $20,000. The company will operate in Hudson County real estate with offices at 718 Broadway, Bayonne. The incorporators are Hugh C. Colville, David F. Edwards, and Frank H. Hall.

Dennett Estate at Auction.

Bryan L. Kennelly will sell many valuable parcels to-day in the Exchange Salesroom, 14 Vesey Street: For the estate of Oren Dennett, 12 East Sixty-eighth Street; for the estate of Henry Karsch, 431 West Thirty-eighth Street; the estate of James King, 4,342 and 4,344 Broadway, corner West 185th Street; for account of former purchaser, 9 East Thirtieth Street. Mr. Kennelly will also sell the five-story apartment building at 525 Lenox Avenue, and also the choice building plot of about three and one-half lots at the northeast corner of Haven Avenue and West 169th Street.

Day will sell to-day two large plots, one at the southeast corner of Worth and Hudson Streets, containing about 10,000 square feet and occupied by a seven-story loft building, known as 62 to 68 Hudson Street, and 2 to 10 Worth Street, and also a plot adjoining on Worth Street, containing about 8,500 square feet, known as 12 to 16 Worth Street, running through to 91 Thomas Street.

Leases.

An important lease in the lower Broadway loft zone was negotiated yesterday by Frederick Fox & Co., who leased the six upper lofts in the new building at the southeast corner of Broadway and Fourth Street, running through to Lafayette Street, to Cohen, Goldman & Co., clothing manufacturers. The lease is for five years at an annual rental of $50,000. The building is being erected by the 694 Broadway Company.

Cammann, Voorhees & Floyd and Horace S. Ely & Co. have leased for Marie M. I. de Courval the five-story building 77 Water Street, corner of Old Slip, on lot 23.6 by 85, to the American Road Machine Company for a term of twenty-one years from May 1, 1911, on a net rental basis with a privilege of renewal for a further term of twenty-one years.

Eugene Higgins has leased to the L. T. Alton Realty Company a plot on the east side of Broadway, just north of Ninety-fourth Street, for 200 years. The property fronts 42 feet on Broadway and is 138 feet deep. It is now vacant, but will be improved by the Alton company with a six-story apartment house, plans for which are now being prepared. The lease becomes effective in February, and will expire on Feb. 1, 2111.

The lease is divided into ten periods of twenty years each. At the end of each period an appraisal of the property will be made, and the rent for the ensuing twenty years will be 5 per cent. of this appraisal. The total rent will run into the millions. H. H. Gibson of H. L. Moxley & Co. negotiated the lease.

Denzer Brothers have leased for the A. & S. Construction Company three lofts containing 10,500 square feet at 118 and 120 West Twenty-seventh Street; for B. Crystal & Son to N. Castelli the second loft containing 7,000 square feet, at 141 to 145 West Seventeenth Street, and for the Century Bank to a cloak and suit house the fourth loft at 135 Fifth Avenue, northeast corner of Twentieth Street.

Riverside Drive House Clipping.

Plans have been filed for removing the front of another Riverside Drive house, that at 103, owned by Maud M. Snow. The new front will be built at the building line as established by the Supreme Court. Clinton & Russell, architects, estimate the cost of this alteration at $2,500.

Notes.

Bernard & Cocks have secured for the Paterno & Son Contracting Company a first mortgage loan of $120,000 at 5 per cent. on 535 West 113th Street, an eight-story fireproof apartment house, on plot 50 by 100 feet.

The lien of $4,000, filed on Monday by the H. G. Vogel Company against the building at 76 and 78 Madison Avenue, of which the George Backer Construction Company is the owner and contractor, was discharged soon after it was filed.

COMMUTERS RIDE IN OLD WOODEN CARS

New Haven Road Admits of Sixty in Use for Suburban Traffic Only Ten Are of Steel.

THROUGH PASSENGERS HIT

New York Central Got $1,131,000 Last Year from the New Haven for Terminal and Operating Facilities.

A score or more commuters living along the line of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad appeared before the Public Service Commission of the Second District in the Engineers' Building in West Thirty-ninth Street yesterday to protest against the action of the officials of that road in raising commutation rates last July. It developed at the hearing that through passengers as well as commuters have been taxed an extra amount. Herbert L. Snow, auditor of the passenger receipts of the road, testified that since the new rates went into effect all passengers using the New Haven Road not only to and from points in this State, but from Boston, Springfield, and other cities, now pay 5 cents more than they did a year ago.

General Manager Samuel Higgins of the New Haven Road testified that the road's equipment of cars in use between New York and suburban points along the Sound were old fashioned. Between New York and Stamford, he said, there were twenty-two local trains running every day each way, and these contained sixty cars. Fifty of the sixty, he said, were old-style wooden ones and only ten built of steel. According to General Manager Higgins, it cost the New Haven Road $500,000 to electrify its lines, and this increased cost was responsible for the increase in rates. Opposing counsel, on the other hand, sought to show that it was a saving of money to use electricity, and that this was the only reason why the change of power was made. It was shown that more than 10,000,000 passengers used the road yearly.

Complaints have also been filed against the New York Central Railroad, but these will be taken up at another hearing. At the end of yesterday's session adjournment was taken until Wednesday, Dec. 7. Eight distinct complaints have been registered, and in each case the complainants appeared represented by counsel. Chairman Stevens, upon seeing the array of legal talent, suggested that one case be taken up at a time. The complaint of Mayor Edwin W. Fiske of Mount Vernon was taken up yesterday, and he was represented by Joseph S. Wood. The Mayors of Yonkers, New Rochelle, and White Plains will have their opportunity later. The railroad was represented by E. D. Robbins, Charles M. Sheafe, Jr., and B. I. Spock.

Mr. Robbins announced that the increase in the monthly commutation rate between New York and Mount Vernon was $1.15, and between New York and New Rochelle, $1.30. The general effect of the change, he said, increased the revenue from passengers 23 per cent. Mr. Snow told of the change in rates. He said he had made a thorough investigation of the rates, and believed them to be just.

Lawyer Robbins objected when Attorney Wood tried to draw from the witness what share of the earnings of the Pullman service the company received. It was brought out that the Pullman Company pays the New Haven road nothing for the use of the road. There is an agreement between the two whereby the railroad receives the revenue from the passengers riding in the Pullman cars one way, while the Pullman Company gets all receipts in the other direction. Lawyer Wood wanted some information regarding the rates in force in 1863 and 1879, as he could show by them, he said, that the company made enormous profits in those years when the traffic was one-twentieth what it is to-day. Then, he said, the company made 20 per cent. profit and paid 10 per cent. dividend. In 1860, he said, the company carried a passenger from Mount Vernon to Canal Street for $50 a year, while a single trip ticket cost 25 cents.

Thomas M. Prentice, chief clerk of the General Auditor, was the next witness. He supplied figures showing that the New Haven had to pay the New York Central to get into New York. For the year ending June 30, 1910, he said, it paid the New York Central $1,131,000, and this included the rental of the Grand Central Terminal and operating expenses.

This statement was issued last night by the New York general officials regarding the terms of operation between the Central and the New York, New Haven & Hartford:

In connection with the evidence introduced by the New Haven Road to-day, showing that a charge was made by the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad of $.0394 for each commutation passenger brought into Grand Central Terminal by the New Haven Road, it is desired that the public understand that the relations between the New York Central and New Haven Roads are the relations of landlord and tenant—the New York Central leasing to the New Haven and the New Haven leasing from the New York Central—the privileges of entry into Grand Central Terminal, including trackage facilities to Woodlawn.

All of these relations are set forth in a contract agreement dated July 24, 1907. The charges made by the Central and paid by the New Haven are based strictly on a proportionate charge for the operation of Grand Central Terminal, including station and tracks. North of Fifty-seventh Street the charge is so much per passenger, south of Fifty-seventh Street it is a proportion of the operating expense of the terminal distributed according to the actual use made of such terminal by the respective parties to the agreement.

But the point to be borne in mind is that all charges made by the Central and paid by the New Haven for Grand Central Terminal are proportionate charges of the expenses of the terminal, based upon the actual use made by the New Haven Railroad of such terminal.

The entire contract is available at any time for representatives of the press who may desire to see it.

The commission will meet to-day in Albany.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Antique Velvet and Brass Andirons Are Held Free of Duty.

E. F. Caldwell & Co. of New York won a tariff victory yesterday when the Board of United States General Appraisers decided that certain pieces of velvet and andirons of brass imported by the firm were more than twenty years old, and therefore subject to the provision in Paragraph 717 for free entry as being more than twenty years old.

William Loeb, Jr., Collector of the port, assessed the articles as manufactures of silk and manufactures of metal, respectively, calling for duty at either 60 or 45 per cent. on the valuation of the goods. Judge Waite, who writes the decision for the board, construes Paragraph 717. He says in part:

"Paragraph 717, tariff act of 1909, provides in its first half for the free entry, under certain conditions, of 'works of art.' It is held by the board that the objects in controversy are 'fine arts,' and hence, being more than twenty years old, entitled to free entry. The second half of the paragraph grants free entry to 'other works of art.' It is held that this provision is broader than that contained in the first half of the paragraph, and will include, if of the requisite age, the numerous ornamental antiquities which may be termed articles of virtu, as well as a class of objects embraced within the useful or industrial arts, if such objects are illustrative of the progress of the arts of educational value." Judge Waite finds in favor of the importers, the decision of the Collector being reversed.

TO THE BOARD OF ESTIMATE AND APPORTIONMENT:

The petition of the Union Railway Company of New York City respectfully shows:

That it is a street surface railroad company, organized July 5, 1892, operating a street surface railroad by electricity, in the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx. It desires to obtain and hereby applies to your Honorable Body for grants of franchises or rights to construct and operate by overhead electricity three double track extensions or branches of its railroad as follows:

From the present terminus of its road on the 155th Street Viaduct at or near Eighth Avenue, thence westerly in or upon the Viaduct and 155th Street with double tracks to Broadway, thence northerly in or upon Broadway to 157th Street, with a double track, thence easterly in or upon 157th Street, with a single track, to Amsterdam Avenue, thence southerly in or upon Amsterdam Avenue with a single track to 155th Street, connecting there with the tracks on said street proposed to be laid.

SECOND. From the terminus of the Company's double track road on Boscobel Avenue at or near Aqueduct Avenue to and across the Washington Bridge and the North and South Viaducts leading thereto, and also in or upon 181st Street from such southerly Viaduct to Broadway.

That each of said extensions will facilitate public travel between the Borough of Manhattan to the Borough of the Bronx.

Your petitioner prays that notice of such application be given and that grants of franchises or rights be made in accordance with the provisions of Section 74 of the Greater New York Charter and of the Railroad Law applicable to such proceedings.

POSTAL DEPARTMENT BITTERLY ATTACKED

SULZER TELLS OF INFLUENCE

Congress Always Throttled, He Says, in Attemps to Get Cheaper Rates on Packages—Hope Ahead.

Frederick C. Beach, editor of The Scientific American, told the Postal Progress League, of which he is President, yesterday that postal reform was bound to come, including the parcels post, which he declared could be operated without loss to the Government.

The Postal Progress League is composed of business men who insist that the Government can and should have a practicable and reasonable parcels post. It held its most important meeting of the year yesterday at the Merchants' Association Building, 54 Lafayette Street, in preparation for the fight to be made in the short session of Congress for the passage of the Sulzer bill installing a postal express.

This is the meeting whose object Mayor Gaynor recently indorsed and said he would like to attend. He had intended coming up to the last minute, so it was said by the officers of the league, but was prevented by his efforts to settle the taxicab strike. The meeting was delayed half an hour in the hope that the Mayor would after all find it possible to attend.

"For the last thirty or more years," said Mr. Beach, "we have had a restricted parcels post based on a high uniform rate and a low weight limit, as compared with the parcels post of other commercial nations of the world. We believe now is the time a change should be made for the benefit of our own business and commercial interests by the reduction of the present parcels post rate to the former rate of 1874-76 and by the increase of the weight limit to correspond with that of the present international standard.

"We, therefore, favor and demand an extended parcels post at the uniform rate of 8 cents a pound with a greater weight limit of from four to eleven pounds for a single parcel."

Criticises Postal Department.

The founder of the league and its Secretary, James L. Cowles, said the recent express strike had called the country's attention to the fact that the people should not continue to depend almost solely upon these private companies to carry its merchandise.

"In the Post Office," declared he, "there is no occasion for a strike either on the part of any citizen served by it or serving it. In the Post Office there can be no exploitation either of the ordinary citizen or of the postman.

"But there is a deficit in the postal revenues, we are told, even under the present service, and therefore it must not be extended. Yes, there is a deficit in this great public service, and is there any private business that would not show a deficit after it had been run a few years by its foes, as our wonderful Post Office is run by agents of our private express and railway companies to-day? Note the postal machinery which they provide for the metropolitan City of New York—Noah's arks dragged by half-dead horses and walking postmen burdened like pack mules."

R. R. Bowker expressed the hope that the Merchants' Association would stand behind the Postal Progress League, saying this country was far behind all others in postal facilities, and the victims of the worse features of a monopoly, while reaping none of its benefits. He said that while New York was familiar with all the express companies, they divided the territory outside among them, and any one using the three companies for the delivery of a single package had to pay three charges. He pointed out, also, what he termed the absurdity of paying 16 cents a pound for merchandise in the United States and 12 cents outside this country.

Sulzer's Explanation.

Congressman Sulzer, patron of the Parcels Post bill now before Congress, excited much interest at the outset by stating that the only reason he had ever been able to get for the failure of a Parcels Post bill to pass was that the express companies were behind it. He implied that there was a quiet but sinister influence at work in Washington which throttled every attempt to get reform in this matter. He did not say this influence was exerted by the express companies, and seemed to be in doubt whence it came. Regarding the charge that the express companies' hands were lifted against the reform, he said:

"I do not know if that be true. The express companies have never had anybody to appear against the bill, and they haven't sent me any communication on the subject. I don't believe that if the bill introduced by me is passed it will take away any of their profits.

"The bill has nothing against it, and it has been indorsed by all kinds of organizations, almost every civic body in America has indorsed it, and yet for some reason the Government does not give this boon to the people.

"If this bill were a law to-day, instead of there being a deficit in the Post Office Department there would be a surplus. So the Government cannot oppose it on that score; the argument of economy cannot be used against it."

George Blames Merchants.

On this point Congressman-elect Henry George, Jr., said the wholesale merchants as well as the express companies were against the parcels post.

"Mr. Sulzer," said he, "does not know why he meets with opposition. Post Master General Wanamaker said there were five reasons and these reasons were the express companies. Now another reason exists. It is the big wholesalers in the smaller cities who fear that if the Parcels Post bill goes through, the small merchants will do their business with the wholesaler in the larger cities by catalogue and then the Parcels Post will do the rest."

Mr. George favored a Nation-wide organization to fight for the parcels post and against the express companies and whoever else opposed it. Mr. Wanamaker had expected to speak, but sent word late in the day that he had been unavoidably detained.

The league adopted a resolution demanding immediate enactment at the coming session of Congress of legislation giving to Americans a parcels post at least as extended and as cheap as that which the "President and the Postmaster General have provided for foreigners."

BURGLARS AT PRINCETON.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 29.—When Prof. and Mrs. Lucius Hopkins Miller of 110 Bayard Lane, Princeton, returned home after having spent several days of Thanksgiving with friends, they found that burglars had ransacked the house and made away with $1,000 worth of valuables. A careful inventory was made by the householders and the police were notified, but no clue to the miscreants has been discovered. Prof. Miller is Assistant Professor Biblical Instruction in Princeton University.

Entrance to the house was effected by prying open a door. The burglars went from top to bottom of the house, and got away without disturbing the neighbors. They evidently operated at night, for bits of candle were found about the house. Prof. and Mrs. Miller think the burglary was committed on last Wednesday night.

SHOOTS WOMAN, KILLS SELF.

Pas Fires Four Shots at Mrs. Goldberger on Refusal to Leave Husband.

Peter Pas, a young Greek who lived in the Bronx with his parents, was introduced to Mrs. Rose Goldberger at her husband's harness shop in West Forty-seventh Street four months ago. He immediately became a regular caller at the Goldberger flat at 415 West Forty-fourth Street, and two months ago began to plead with Mrs. Goldberger to leave her husband and go with him to some Western city.

Mrs. Goldberger repulsed the young Greek, and two weeks ago she gave him a final answer, at the same time telling her husband what had occurred, and threatening the Greek in her husband's presence with arrest if he ever renewed his attentions to her. The husband joined in this threat.

While Mrs. Goldberger was drinking tea in her flat yesterday afternoon with Mrs. Teresa Harnett, a neighbor, who lives in the flat adjoining, the door was battered in and the young Greek rushed into the room. While Mrs. Harnett was calling for assistance and her five-year-old daughter, Evelyn, was running toward the staircase with the intention of calling Mrs. Goldberger's husband, Pas grabbed Mrs. Goldberger by the throat and told her he had come for a last time to beg her to come with him.

She cried out that she didn't want men coming to see her when her husband was not home and that he must go at once. Mrs. Harnett, out in the hall, sa wa revolver flashed, and before she could reach Mrs. Goldberger's side a shot was fired. Then three more followed it, and the Greek curled up on the floor, dead from a bullet wound through his forehead. Mrs. Goldberger staggered out into the hallway, wounded back of the right ear, and was found there by Policeman Anderson of the West Forty-seventh Street Station.

Mrs. Goldberger was conscious, but it was plain that she was badly hurt, and the policeman, after hastily wrapping her head in a handkerchief, summoned an ambulance from the Flower Hospital, to which the woman was hurried as soon as first-aid bandages had been applied. There it was said that the bullet had penetrated her skull and lodged in the brain.

Isaac Goldberger, the victim's husband, when informed by a policeman of what had occurred, hastened to the Flower Hospital, where he spent the night beside his wife's bed. She talked to him freely of the attempted killing and suicide, and said she was sorry she had not taken his advice to have Pas locked up instead of merely threatening to do it two weeks ago.

The sound of the revolver shots attracted a large crowd to the West Forty-second Street flat house where the Goldbergers lived on the third floor front. Neighbors said they had seen the young Greek, whom they knew only as Peter, following Mrs. Goldberger on her return from nearby grocery stores. On one occasion she had been seen to strike him with a can of tomatoes which she was bringing home, and at another time she had turned upon him, calling him a "low down loafer" and ordering him away.

Mrs. Goldberger, all agreed, had never allowed him to follow her past the front door, except at first when his calls were made in the evening, while Mr. Goldberger was home. Children said that after his rebuffs by Mrs. Goldberger on the streets he would talk to himself as he went away, often stopping at the street corner to berate the children who would follow him.

Mr. Goldberger said last night at the hospital that he believed the man was insane.

"My wife and I," he said, "have been married for thirteen years, and we have always been very happy. Four months ago this man came into my harness store to buy some trifle or other. There he saw Mrs. Goldberger, for it was her custom often to come over to the store to spend a few hours in the afternoon when she was lonesome.

"After that he came to our flat and we made him welcome a time or two, not knowing that anything was wrong. Then my wife told me not to let him come any more because he had called when I was not home, and annoyed her. I told him to keep away after that, but my wife did not tell me then he had proposed that she elope with him.

Later she told me this also, saying she had not done so before because she did not want me to do something for which I might get arrested or get into trouble.

In the revolver used by the Greek—a cheap .32-calibre—four exploded shells were found, a bullet hole in the glass doors separating the parlor from the dining room in the Goldberger flat indicating where one bullet had gone wild, and a hole in the parlor wall indicating the course taken by the second.

A small water spaniel belonging to the Goldbergers, which was in the flat when the shooting occurred, became terrified and ran behind a couch in the parlor. There Coroner Winterbottom discovered it, still crouching, on making a search of the rooms.

ASK MAYOR FOR A VETO.

Estimate Board Wants Aldermanic Cut of Budget Disapproved.

Controller Prendergast, President Mitchel of the Board of Aldermen, and Borough President McAneny of Manhattan, composing the Budget Committee of the Board of Estimate, have written to Mayor Gaynor urging him to veto the recent action of the Aldermen in cutting out of the budget for next year the $110,000 appropriated by the board for the investigation of the Health and Charities Departments, Bellevue and Allied Hospitals, the Board of Education, and the general question of salary grades in the city service.

The letter points out that the Mayor favored the resolutions authorizing the appropriations for the investigations when they were passed by the board, and urges him to use his veto in the interest of the constructive administrative policy of the new Board of Estiate.

"The consideration of the budget for 1911 gave to this committee a deeper insight into departmental work than had been afforded to its members heretofore. It suggested to them the necessity of the city determining at this time certain constructive policies which, if adopted, would not only render much easier the burden of the succeeding years of our administration, but also build strongly for continued good Government in the future. It was with this idea in mind, and with the further purpose of enabling the present Board of Estimate to judge with sympathetic intelligence of the requirements of many of our most important departments, that the investigations referred to were proposed by us. These departmental investigations (very important in themselves) are not comparable with what we believe to be one of the most pressing questions in our municipal problem. This is the standardization of salaries and grades throughout the city service with a view to reconciling inconsistencies in the character of those grades and in the rates of compensation paid at the present time.

"We do not deem worthy of consideration the claim made by the Board of Aldermen that the present Board of Estimate is attempting to deprive the Board of Aldermen of its charter powers. The nature of these proposed investigators, backed by the attitude of the present Board of Estimate from the beginning of the year, is the best evidence of the good faith behind them. We believe that the restoration of the budget for 1911 to the original form in which it left the Board of Estimate and Apportionment is essential to the continuance of the forward movement in government which has characterized this Administration. We therefore respectfully request you to veto the action of the Board of Aldermen."

The Mayor declined to say yesterday what action he would take, but it is known that he believes that, as a general rule, he should only exercise his veto power in case of illegal action on the part o fthe Aldermen.

NEWARK FIRE STARTS AN INQUIRY HERE

Trades Unions Worried for Fear Factory Disaster Could Be Repeated in This City.

MANY BUILDINGS UNSAFE

Superintendent Starts an Investigation to Make Sure That the Factory Laws Are Complied With.

Trade unionists in this city have noted with alarm the loss of life in the Newark fire, and are asking whether there are not many other small factories in this city which, so far as fire protection is concerned, are as badly off as the building which was destroyed last Saturday. They doubt whether the factory law is thoroughly enforced and whether it is really sufficient to provide exits in case of fire for girl workers, who are likely to become panicstricken in times of peril.

The United Hebrew Trades, with an office at 151 Clinton Hall, have adopted a resolution calling on the Health and Building Departments and the Factory Inspectors to look particularly into the condition of the paper box manufacturing shops. Max Weinstein, the Secretary of the organization, said yesterday that in the process of organizing a union among the women paper box makers many factories had been visited that seemed to be improperly protected against fire as well as being unsanitary in other respects. A list of these has been forwarded to the city departments concerned, with a request that the matter be looked into immediately.

The trades unionists complain that in many cases residences have been converted into factories quite irrespective of their suitability. They are often old and in poor repair, and the means of exit is a dark, rickety staircase. Such fire escapes as exist are sometimes quite unfitted for use by women and girls, frightened out of all common sense by fire, and are merely iron ladders affixed to the walls, from which the danger of falling would be very great.

It is also asserted that in some factories, of which the United Hebrew Trades have taken cognizance, the windows of the ground floor are blocked by heavy bars, and it is said that a few months ago such a protection against burglars caused the death of several persons caught in a death trap in Brooklyn. One large shop in Canal Street has been reported on account of the obstruction of the fire escapes by heavy boxes and machinery, in spite of the fact that this is absolutely against the tenement house and factory law. Objection is also taken to the establishment of shops for the manufacture of such substances as paper boxes in close proximity to lumber yards. Mr. Weinstein urged yesterday that thereby the chances of a dangerous conflagration through the careless dropping of a match or a cigarette stub was doubled.

In this city the inspection of factories, so far as fire protection is concerned, is left entirely to the city's Building Department. The State Factory Inspectors are concerned with the santiary condition of the workshops and the number and ages of the people employed in them, but by a decision of the Supreme Court are not permitted to interfere with the question of fire exits.

Rudolph P. Miller, Superintendent of Buildings, said last night that he certainly would pay immediate attention to the factories which the United Hebrew Trades called to his attention. Fire exits, he said, have for long been a special study with him, and since the Newark disaster had brought the matter forcibly to the front, he had been considering the steps which might be taken to improve present conditions. In a few days he hopes to be able to make a definite statement of what is to be done.

"The trouble we particularly meet with is old buildings," he said. "It is much easier to see that new buildings are properly equipped than to be sure that old buildings are fully provided. I have one or two Inspectors in the department who have given special study to fire exits, and they are used in special cases.

"It is not easy, however, for us to keep pace with the changes in the use of an old building. Its fire protection may have been quite adequate so long as it was employed for one purpose, but when it changes owners and accommodates a considerably larger number of persons we have no means of finding it out save by chance. Then, of course, we meet with all sorts of obstacles when we order a radical change to be made in an old building."

NEWARK DEATH LIST 24.

Forewoman Whose Heroism Saved Many Lives Expires in Hospital.

Another young woman died yesterday from injuries suffered in the Newark factory fire last Saturday. The latest death was that of Miss Anna Haag, forewoman of the Wolf concern. She died in the City Hospital. The death list now numbers twenty-four. It is believed that all the bodies are out of the ruins, as every one who was employed in the factory has been accounted for. Mrs. Barbara Reynolds, who was reported as missing, was found at her home, 67 Dickerson Street.

Stories of Miss Haag's heroism at the fire were told yesterday. It was said that she could have escaped uninjured, as she was the first person to discover the fire. Her first act was to run down the stairs, open the door that excluded the fourth floor from the rest of the building, then return and warn the others in her room. Even after warning her associates Miss Haag did not think of her own safety, for she took time to put the payroll and books of the concern in the safe, and locked it. She then jumped from a window. She suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries.

SUSPECTS THE BLACK HAND.

Bomb Victim Thinks They Want More Ransom for Boy Stolen Years Ago.

Francesco La Barbera, in front of whose saloon, at 258 Elizabeth Street, a bomb was exploded early yesterday morning, shattering every window for nearly a block on either side of the street, told the police later in the day that he thought the Black Hand had tried to punish him for ignoring its demands for a large sum of money as ransom for his son, Pietro.

The boy, then 6 years old, was kidnapped about five years ago, and has never been heard from. The late Lieut. Petrosino worked on the case, but neither he nor those who followed him discovered a clue to the boy's captors. La Barbera said he had received many threatening letters, but none recently, and that he had begun to feel that his persecutors had abandoned him.

PUTS AND CALLS NO MORE.

Business in Smoking Room Handicapped and Only Cold Street Open.

The remnant of the old "put and call" market which in the old days used to be a recognized part of the Stock Exchange lobby and used its advantage to trade "over the rail" with almost the same facility as members of the Exchange, has been banished from its last precarious standing on the Stock Exchange. The "put and call" contract placed by modern court rulings in the gambling class has no standing on the Stock Exchange, but the "smoking room" on the New Street side of the new Exchange Building, with its convenient door leading into the broad halls of the Commercial Cable Building, has offered an easy means of quick action to the Exchange members. It is only a step from the trading floor of the Exchange.

Put and call men have made the smoking room a sort of unofficial headquarters. Yesterday the following notice was posted in the smoking room:

> On and after Dec. 1 a non-member will not be admitted to this annex room except for an interview with a member, and after said interview said non-member must retire.
> By order
> COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENT.

The put and call business is only a fraction of what it was in the days when Russell Sage and Jay Gould were the largest makers of this class of contracts, but there are enough of the traders left to make a daily group in New Street which will now have to face a cold Winter.

RULES FISH ARE ANIMALS.

Court's Stand Opposed by City Prosecutor, Who Permits Peddler to Go.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 29.—Fish were legally determined to be animals yesterday by Judge William Jefferson Pollard. His view was opposed by City Attorney Levy when Louis Kram, a peddler, was charged with cruelty to animals in fastening a live fish to his wagon as an advertisement.

"I wish to enter a nolle prosequi in this case," announced Levy, "because a fish is not an animal."

"It is an animal," said Judge Pollard.

"I beg your pardon, it is not," replied Levy.

"It has life, and is not a vegetable," was the court's rejoinder; "any dictionary will tell you it's an animal."

But Levy insisted that it was not, and as he would not prosecute Kram he was allowed to go.
